Liberals ignoring the west despite losses—Broadbent

PENTICTON(CP) — The federal government, despite its virtual wipeout in western Canada in the Feb. 18 general election, is continuing to ignore western problems as if the election were a non-event, Ed Broadbent, federal New Democratic Party leader, said Saturday.

Broadbent, in a strongly-worded attack on the Liberal administration at the opening day of the NDP's British Columbia convention, said Ottawa has had to be pushed by his party's MPs to act on concerns such as housing, coastal transportation, search and rescue facilities and industrial development.

"They (those concerns) have been ignored by a party in Canada which has ignored the west for years and one would have thought had learned its lessons after Feb. 18, but has not," he said.

"The reason that the Liberals lost all their seats in western Canada in February are precisely the same reasons they're not going to regain the west because they don't care about western problems and pay no attention to them."

The Liberals elected only two members west of Ontario in the election, both from Manitoba. The NDP elected 12 MPs in B.C. — its highest total ever.

Broadbent, who had nine of the party's B.C. MPs on stage with him, detailed several cases where he said they had to raise matters in the House of Commons to get the Liberals to act.

Broadbent said a good example was a delay by the Liberals on an announcement of financial support for the expansion of grain facilities at the port of Prince Rupert.

The previous Progressive Conservative government had committed money to the project but Broadbent said after the Liberals lost every seat west of Manitoba, they vacillated and pulled back on the commitment.

"(Transport Minister) Jean-Luc Pepin gave every indication that if left on his own, nothing would be done on that commitment," said Broadbent.

The NDP leader gave credit to Jim Fulton, his party's MP for Skeena, which includes Prince Rupert, for raising the issue in the Commons until the Lib-

Quebec: Decision in hands of people

MONTREAL (CP) — The leaders of the Yes and No forces in Quebec's referendum wound down their activities Saturday as the five-week campaign moved into its final hours.

Premier Rene Levesque, leader of the Yes forces, visited supporters in and around Montreal and taped a radio show for broadcast today.

BROADCAST BLACKOUT

The vote takes place Tuesday but a broadcast blackout descends over the campaign tonight at midnight. Monday is a holiday—Dollard des Ormeaux Day—and neither side plans any large rallies.

Levesque said in his radio interview a No vote in the Tuesday referendum won't stop him from leading the Parti Quebecois into the next Quebec election.

"I was never a great planner," the 57-year-old premier said, but he added he expected to continue leading the party "if I'm in shape."

Ryan, although confident of victory, speculated in interviews that in the event of a majority Yes vote, the next provincial election would have "a certain referendum air," with both sides inevitably campaigning on their constitutional platforms.

MANDATE IN DOUBT

And should the Liberals form the next provincial government, he said, the mandate given the PQ in the referendum would disappear.

Ryan acknowledged that the views his party holds on federalism do not always coincide with those of Prime Minister Trudeau.

But Quebec's federalist leader said he also remembers Trudeau saying in 1977 that he was ready to overhaul the whole constitution as long as fundamental rights are guaranteed and Canada remains under a federal system.

The five-week campaign was gruelling for both leaders as they hop-scotched across the province.

CAREFUL ITINERARY

Levesque ran a media-oriented campaign with a carefully-planned itinerary that left little room for contact with people who were not already Yes supporters.

A favorite tactic was to get people who had something in common—be it profession, age or neighborhood—to publicly come out for sovereignty-association.

Levesque would then present them with certificates attesting to their support.

Ryan's campaign ran on different lines. Although the pace was hectic, the leader of the No forces took pride in not catering to the media, often holding major rallies well past the deadlines for late-evening television newscasts.

While Levesque appealed to the pride and solidarity of the Quebec people, Ryan countered by saying that a Yes was the first step on the road to independence for Quebec.

ELIGIBLE VOTERS

Figures issued last week by Quebec's chief electoral officer show that 4,362,588 people will be eligible to vote on Tuesday. They will be able to do so at 22,026 regular polling stations in the 110 provincial ridings between 9 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Among the eligible are 3,500 men and women in Quebec's provincial jails and federal penitentiaries. It is the first time in Canadian history that prisoners have been allowed to vote.

The question they will be voting on is 108 words long and asks for a mandate to negotiate "a new agreement with the rest of Canada, based on the equality of nations."

"This agreement would enable Quebec to acquire . . . sovereignty—and at the same time, to maintain with Canada an economic association including a common currency."

The question also contains the assurance that any change in political status would have to be approved in a second referendum.

Crane needs lift of its own

Thirty-ton-capacity crane almost ended up in the drink Saturday while working at B.C. Forest Products sawmill in Victoria. The driver escaped without injury, and another crane was called in to rescue the first vehicle. The accident apparently started when support holding crane gave way.

Chinese test rocket

PEKING (UPI) — China announced Sunday it has test-fired a rocket from a base in China to a point deep in the South Pacific, in a giant stride toward development of an intercontinental weapons system.

The rocket was fired from a undisclosed point in China to an area roughly bounded by the Solomons, Fiji and Gilbert Islands.

The terse announcement of the successful test—long predicted by western military men—came from the official Xinhua News Agency.

Diplomatic sources in Peking say the rocket probably was launched in North China or from the area around the Lop Nor Nuclear Weapons Base in the Xinjiang Autonomous Region.

If so, it travelled around 5,000 miles before splashdown.

Blacks rampage as officers freed

MIAMI (UPI) — Blacks rioted at the county government centre and in the city's Liberty City section Saturday, setting fire to buildings and cars and throwing rocks and bottles.

The rioting was in reaction to a jury verdict in Tampa earlier in the day acquitting four former Dade County policemen of the fatal beating death last December of black Miami insurance man Arthur McDuffie.

Two unidentified people were critically beaten by blacks in the Liberty City section of northwest Miami and one reporter was knocked unconscious and taken to hospital near the government complex.

Police with dogs dispersed much of the crowd which broke out the doors and windows to the Dade County police headquarters and threatened to storm the building.

Firemen battled three building fires, but controlled them before they got out of hand.

"We've got nothing going right now, but we had a fire at the state office building, the Metro Justice Building and Tanner's warehouse," a fire dispatcher said. "They weren't small fires but we got them in time."

At least three cars burned out of control near the govenmental complex, one of them was overturned. Another car was vandalized. There were reports of a fire in a state office building, but it was not believed to be serious.

Angry blacks threw rocks at the police building, knocking out windows throughout the structure.

"We took rocks as high as the third floor. I'm too busy trying to keep people safe with the lights out to find out what's going on," said police spokesman Joe Keefe, whose office is on the third floor. "Miami police with dogs and backup officers have moved in. The crowd is pretty well dispersed."

Prisoners seize 5 staff members

Sketchy reports said from one to five staff members had been seized by a group of prisoners and were being held in a living unit on the penitentiary grounds.

RCMP said the incident started when from 100 to 150 prisoners refused to leave a prison yard and return to their cells.

Penitentiary officials and RCMP officers from Calgary and Drumheller were negotiating with the hostage-takers, although it was not known what demands had been made.

Blaze sweeps small Indian village

Fire swept the small Indian community of Nuchatlitz on the west coast of Vancouver Island Saturday, destroying five buildings.

THE PACIFIC Rescue Centre reported that three houses, a power supply building and the village pumphouse had burned to the ground. There was no information available as to injuries.

The fire was brought under control at about 8 p.m., with the help of a helicopter from Comox equipped with portable pumps, Forest Service personnel from Gold River, 60 kilometres to the east, and RCMP from Tahsis.

RADIO communications were out and details were sketchy.

A forest service spokesman said the firefighters, flown in by plane and helicopter, sprayed saltwater on the fire with the portable pumps.

THE VILLAGE, composed of five or six families of 25 to 30 people, is strung out close to the sea, enabling the portable pumps to be used.

An Indian affairs spokesman at Nanaimo estimated the total number of houses in the settlement as seven or eight.

THE COAST Guard vessel Sir James Douglas was reported bound for the village late Saturday but her estimated time of arrival was not known at press time.

Syrian enters hostage crisis

● European Community is going slow. Page 3

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A UN spokesman announced Saturday that Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was sending Syrian diplomat Adib Daoudy to Iran to discuss completion of the work of a UN commission seeking settlement of the Iranian-American hostage crisis.

The spokesman, Rudolf Stajduhar, said Waldheim, now in Europe, was acting "with the agreement of all concerned," after talks with both Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and U.S. State Secretary Edmund Muskie.

He said Daoudy, who is adviser to Syrian President Hafez Assad, would leave for Tehran "shortly," and that Waldheim hoped to get a personal report before returning to New York around May 26.

Iranian militants have held 50 U.S. embassy personnel since Nov. 4 and have demanded return of the exiled shah in exchange for the hostages.

Waldheim, long involved in efforts to obtain freedom for the hostates, created the commission Feb. 20 for "a fact-finding mission to Iran to hear Iran's grievances and to allow for an early solution of the crisis between Iran and the United States." Daoudy is a member of the commission.

The commission visited Iran Feb. 25-March 10, but was not allowed to see the hostages and has never completed its report.

In Bangor, Maine, Muskie questioned Saturday the timing of Waldheim's new diplomatic initiative, saying it could have the effect of putting "American expectations on a roller-coaster."

And yet, Muskie said after a speech to the Democratic state convention in Bangor, "I'm willing to pursue anything that holds any possibility, promising or unpromising," for release of the Americans.

Muskie said he gave U.S. approval for Waldheim's decision to send Daoudy to Iran when he met Waldheim in Vienna, Austria, on Thursday.

But, he said: "I think at this point I would not raise any expectations at all. This is the first step. It's an exploration of the question whether the full UN commission ought to go back to Iran."

Throng jeers U.S. envoys

HAVANA (UPI) — Shouting anti-American insults and obscenities, hundreds of thousands of Cubans paraded and danced past the U.S. diplomatic office in Havana Saturday in a march organized by the government to show that not everybody wants to leave Fidel Castro's Cuba.

The protective barricades around the building, where three American diplomats and 383 Cuban dissidents were sheltered, were removed by police to allow the "march of the fighting people" to take place.

There had been an intensely bitter anti-American campaign in the government-controlled press, but there was no violence. Several thousand tough-looking Cuban troops, many of them veterans of Castro's African campaigns, made sure of that.

They formed a line on Malecon Avenue between the box-like building housing the U.S. Interest Section and the marchers who filed past all day long to the accompaniment of Congo-bands and popular music played on portable tape recorders.

It was as much a festive outing as an anti-American protest — the latter purpose underscored by effigies of Uncle Sam and political chants put to music.

The government, which organized the march, said beforehand that 1 million Cubans would show up. So many did attend that it was impossible to gauge their numbers but Cuban officials said they estimated that the marchers were filing past the building at the rate of 60,000 an hour. The demonstration was to last most of the day.

Some Cubans, interviewed at random, said they were eager to participate in the march. But others said they were participating out of fear that their neighbors and employers would regard their absence as a lack of "revolutionary fervor."

They referred to an incident earlier this month, when officials handed out certificates of attendance at an anti-American May Day rally. Some people who did not attend said they were concerned about what might happen if they were required to produce those certificates at a later date.

But clearly it also was meant to offset the government's embarrassment at the dramatic flight of more than 45,000 Cubans to Florida in recent weeks.

Argentinians, Brazilians ease rivalries

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Argentina and Brazil signed a series of major agreements Saturday, easing a political rivalry that has hampered relations between the two largest nations of South America throughout this century.

President Jorge Videla said after the ceremony in which 11 major agreements were signed that "thus, a new cycle in the relations between Argentina and Brazil has been opened."

THE SIGNING ceremony held in the Argentine presidential palace came at the end of a four-day visit to Buenos Aires by Brazilian President Joao Figueiredo. It was the first visit of a Brazilian president to Buenos Aires in 45 years.

Among the most important agreements reached between the two major South American nations was one for co-operation in the development of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes.

"THIS SHOULD silence forever the legend that there is an arms race between Argentina and Brazil in the nuclear field," Videla said, referring to the agreement.

Foreign observers for years have claimed that the two nations, which have the most advanced nuclear programs in South America, would develop nuclear weapons as part of a regional struggle for power similar to the one between India and Pakistan.

THE FOREIGN ministers of the two countries also signed agreements calling for a system of periodic consultations between the two governments, for the interconnection of electrical systems, and for technological and scientific co-operation.

Figueiredo arrived in Argentina Wednesday, accompanied by nine ministers and approximately 200 Brazilian businessmen.

DURING HIS stay the Brazilian chief of state charmed the Argentine public, taking a stroll through a downtown walkway, listening to tangos in a traditional night spot until early in the morning, and innaugurating the soccer stadium of his favorite Argentine team.

Economic officials of both nations, as well as the businessmen, took advantage of the visit to analyse opportunities to further expand the growing Argentine-Brazilian commerce, which last year amounted to $1.6 billion, which economic sources say is the largest figure for commercial interchange between two developing countries in the world.

Broadbent also said Mark Rose (NDP — Mission-Port Moody) and Ray Skelly (NDP — Comox-Alberni) had complained bitterly in the Commons about B.C. not getting economic benefits from such projects as the F-18 fighter contract and new shipping construction directed toward the east coast.

Broadbent made no reference in his speech to the Quebec referendum on sovereignty-association, three days away, but told reporters later that while that debate is the number one issue in Canada now, another question — "almost comparable in historic terms" — is western alienation.

"The phrase has some real meaning and some real relevance to national politics," he said.

Rentals already 'horror story'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government's move to permit larger yearly increases in rents will worsen a housing crisis that is already a "horror story" in the Vancouver area, says the manager of a non-profit rental agency.

Linda Mead, manager of the Red Door, said there is no relief for tenants in the changes announced by Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen Friday. The changes still must be enacted by the legislature before they go into effect.

Under the changes, landlords can now impose annual rent increases of 10 per cent, up from seven per cent, and can raise rents to cover 18 per cent of the cost of improvements, an increase from 12 per cent.

"Families are the hardest hit but more middle-class people are feeling the pinch," said Mead, whose agency has a waiting list of 1,400 persons who cannot find decent accommodation.

"As I see it, there's no relief in sight, not for a few years, especially when the government takes this kind of unfortunate action."

Both Nielsen and rentalsman Jim Patterson said the new increase limits are realistic and reasonable, given current inflation and higher wages.

Europe softens on boycott

Colonist wire services

The European Community moved Saturday toward what sources described as gradually increasing economic sanctions against Iran, while in the Iranian capital several newspapers reported a purge under way in Iran's armed forces.

Sources said EC foreign ministers meeting behind closed doors in Naples, Italy, would replace their threatened wide-ranging sanctions with a gradually tightening boycott unless progress was made toward freeing the 53 Americans being held as hostages in Iran.

Introduction of some immediate sanctions might be announced today, while others might wait until after the opening of the new Iranian parliament May 28, the sources said.

In Tehran, meanwhile, newspapers reported that one soldier had been executed and dozens more arrested for spreading unrest in the Iranian military in rebellious Kurdistan province and elsewhere.

The Tehran newspaper Kayhan said 14 officers and non-commissioned officers were convicted of inciting unrest by the revolutionary military court in Isfahan, 320 kilometres south of Tehran. Seven soldiers also were sentenced to prison terms ranging between two years and life and one man was executed for disobeying orders and causing disturbances.

Enghelab Islami, another Tehran daily, said 38 officers and lower ranks accused of "cooperating with the counter revolution," were arrested in the Kurdish capital and sent to Iran.

An Italian source said that under the proposed new boycott plan, only administrative and technical steps would be taken to prepare for a full cut in trade. That would permit the new Iranian parliament, the Majlis, to consider new ways to free the hostages.

Originally, the EEC foreign ministers agreed to a complete embargo on trade with Iran by May 17 unless "decisive progress" had been made in gaining the release of the hostages.

But even before Saturday's meeting in Naples there had been reports of cracks in Western European solidarity with the U.S. on the hostage issue. Two weeks ago, there were reports from London that the boycott would not apply to contracts signed before the May 17 deadline.

Chromosome flaws linked to Love Canal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Citing startling new evidence of chromosome damage, the Environmental Protection Agency said Saturday it was preparing for the possible relocation of 710 families still living near the Love Canal chemical dump site.

EPA launched the tentative relocation plan after blood tests showed significant chromosomal abnormalities in 11 of 36 residents of the Love Canal area in Niagara Falls, N.Y., EPA deputy administrator Barbara Blum told a news conference.

She said a panel of geneticists would review the results of a study done under the direction of Houston genetic toxicologist Dante Picciano and report its findings by Wednesday. No decision would be made on whether to relocate the families before then.

The 36 people who volunteered for the genetic testing—men, women and children—suffered two specific, significant chromosomal abnormalities that normally occurred in only one in 100 or one in 1,000 cases, said Picciano, who is affiliated with Biogenetics Corp. of Houston.

But Ms. Blum and Dr. Stephen Gage of EPA said the results of his study were not conclusive. There was no control group, they noted, and the report itself cautioned that "prudence must be exerted in the interpretation of the results."

Koreans extend martial law rule

SEOUL (AP) — South Korea's military command consolidated its power today by extending martial law, banning all political activity, arresting the leader of the largest party and several prominent dissident leaders and closing universities throughout the country.

The announcement followed a week of violent anti-government demonstrations for democratic reform in the pro-Western country that has been under autocratic rule for almost two decades.

A spokesman for the civilian government announced shortly after midnight Saturday that martial law had been extended throughout the country.

Minutes later, the martial law command issued its first proclamation, closing schools and banning all political gatherings, including the National Assembly session scheduled for Tuesday.

The proclamation also said that "any slanderous remarks against former and present chiefs of staff will be strictly punished."

Mount neighbors get escorts home

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Homeowners, angry because they were barred from their property near Mount St. Helens volcano, were escorted into the restricted zone Saturday to check their houses and remove belongings.

The Cowlitz County Sheriff's office and the Washington State Patrol said they decided to let the owners into the Spirit Lake area after they had gathered at the school in the tiny community of Toutle, charging the government had no right to interfere with their movements.

Law enforcement agencies provided the escorts.

Governor Dixy Lee Ray had issued an order threatening $500 fines and six-month jail sentences against unauthorized persons found inside the "Red Zone," an area five miles from the steaming and bulging volcano. Authorities relented, however, when the property owners staged their protest.

Ray was worried about loss of life in case the mountain slope breaks off and smashes into Spirit Lake, sending a flood wave roaring down the Toutle River Valley. But the property owners were not.

Skamania County Sheriff Bill Closner asked the governor to amend her order to allow property owners to visit their homes on a permit basis.

This record we don't need

In a generally depressing week for statistics, among the most sobering were the Statistics Canada figures showing that British Columbia drivers are the worst in Canada. We can claim the dubious distinction of having more accidents per vehicle, per thousand people and per million kilometres of travel than any other drivers in this country.

More shocking still, we are apparently not content with merely being the lousiest by the odd decimal point or so. No, we have to prove our ineptitude or death wish or both by a significant margin. In one category, for example, B.C. drivers registered 7.36 accidents per 100 vehicles during 1977. The national average that year was 5.40 mishaps and Manitoba, runner-up in highway mayhem, was well behind with 6.78 accidents per 100 vehicles.

It is tempting for Victoria-area motorists to claim that lunatics in Greater Vancouver and Interior communities bump up these grim statistics, but neither our own accident record nor personal observation gives any grounds for smugness. On Yates Street (particularly the stretch in the vicinity of the cinemas) any Friday or Saturday evening the young wheeled cowboys prove their masculinity with driving as crazy and dangerous as anywhere in the province. And drivers of all ages regularly play russian roulette on traffic lights.

But stricter enforcement alone is not the answer, as Vancouver city council's War on Traffic Accidents Conference was told this week. When Vancouver police stepped up enforcement by 25 per cent last month, traffic accidents and offences were reduced in some areas but there was little noticeable change in the over-all picture.

More stringent deterrents are obviously needed. B.C.'s driver demerit system, which has been in place since 1968, appears to have about as much deterrent effect as a gentle slap on the wrist, because there is no immediate punishment. Retribution, financial or other, comes later — if the driver racks up enough points. The effect on chronic speeders and light jumpers is not to persuade them to change their habits, but simply to resolve to keep a sharper eye open for police.

It is to be hoped that some combination of fines and demerit points will be among the measures recommended by the Attorney-General's Motor Vehicle Task Force. The fines should be set high enough to hurt, backed up by tougher licence suspension provisions.

But we share the view of the Vancouver conference, that the long-term solution to B.C.'s atrocious accident and drunk-driving record lies in greater public awareness. The community service divisions of Greater Victoria police forces do an excellent job in high schools, with programs aimed at warning graduates about the consequences of impaired driving. But their resources are limited and they can only scratch the surface of the problem.

A more effective way would be to expand significantly the television advertising campaigns with shock themes which have been used so effectively in the past — in persuading British Columbians to wear seatbelts, for example.

The cost will be high, but only in dollars. The cost of not taking such action will be more wasted lives and crippled bodies.

COMMENT/BACKGROUND

Why not bring back the pigeon post?

Walter Stewart
FP News Service

OTTAWA — With yet another postal strike on the way — the Canadian Union of Postal Workers is in a legal position to walk out seven days after delivery of a conciliation report released on Friday — Canadians may want to get out the pen, ink and shaving cream.

Only a suggestion.

In ancient Greece, one of the classier ways to send a letter was to call in a slave, crop his head, write a message on the bare dome, and send him on his way.

If it was necessary to keep the message secret, the slave was held incommunicado until he had grown enough hair to cover it. The recipient then shaved the slave and read his letter.

The time involved in growing the hair was considered a drawback, but compared to, say, sending a letter from Montreal to Lethbridge by modern post, it appears reasonable.

It was the historian Herodotus who first recorded the shave-a-slave mail service, but he forgot to record how much it cost, or where you put the stamps. Perhaps there were no stamps, and the whole process was covered by a head tax.

It was also Herodotus who wrote, "Neither snow, nor rain, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

This was not a reference to the slaves, but to the regular courier service run by King Xerxes. Of course, there was no CUPW around in Xerxes' time, no postal codes nor sorting machines nor conciliation reports, virtually none of the modern conveniences that stop our couriers, or inside workers, from their appointed rounds faster than you can say "Contract time."

If postal strikes are going to be with us at regular intervals — we have had three national strikes and innumerable local walkouts since 1972 — ways around the ordinary mail service are going to have to be devised. Fortunately, there are dozens of suggestions available, from techniques used centuries ago to those looming over the horizon in the advanced computer age.

King Sargon of Chaldea, to name an instance, used to communicate with his penpals by carving his words on a clay tablet and sending a courier on his way. Hernia was a frequent complaint, but not postal theft.

The Assyrians used the same technique until they discovered that spies from enemy h.q. were reading the messages. So they invented the envelope, a clay wrapping that went around the carved tablets and raised the hernia-count but preserved the secrets.

Pigeons were popular at one time, too. The Egyptians used pigeons to carry messages until their enemies developed the habit of eating the birds. The technique was then pigeon-holed until 1870, when Paris was under siege by the Prussians, and Parisians sent out no fewer than 115,000 messages by carrier pigeon. Apparently the Prussians didn't fancy pigeon. No doubt they resented getting the bird.

Why not bring back pigeons?

In the early days of this nation, it was customary to leave mail with an inn-keeper, or to have the couriers-de-bois drop off missives as they paddled their way across the land. Again, there is no reason why both these techniques should not be revived, with a consequent increase in the revenues of liquor companies and canoe manufacturers. Chrysler Canada could switch some of its redundant workers to making paddles. The company is already expert at backwatering.

More modern techniques are already in place, or just down the road. During the last mail strike, in 1978, a number of firms developed their own courier services, to deliver packages, letters and bills and to pick up cheques. After the strike, some of these firms kept doing their own deliveries, or hired outside contractors. The post office frowns on this sort of thing — carrying the mail is a crown monopoly — but has not been able to, um, stamp it out.

Two Toronto-area public utilities, in Scarboro and East York, have found it faster and cheaper to have hydro bills delivered by an independent contractor than to trust them to the tender mercies of Canada Post. The independent charges 11 cents instead of 17 per envelope, and guarantees delivery within 24 hours instead of the flexible schedule of the public service, which often has hydro bills being delivered after the date for benefitting from the time-discount is well past.

The hydro couriers are now beginning to carry other mail — bulk items such as catalogues and advertising flyers — but the widespread use of this system is not likely.

It collides with the post office's allotted right to lose, delay or destroy the mail free of outside competition.

Far more likely in the future is the development of electronic mail services either using home key-boards or cable television.

This story is written on an electric keyboard which stores words on a disc, from which they can be sent to anyone with a similar keyboard and receiver system. They are now sent to newspapers, but could just as easily go to your Aunt Min, as long as she had a telephone and a word-processor.

At present, the equipment is far too expensive — $6,000 and up for a single machine — to be used to transmit letters. However, costs are coming down for all electronic components, and a number of futurologists, including Alvin Toffler, author of The Third Wave, are confidently predicting a day when the post office's major functions will be replaced by these word-processing and transmitting machines.

Such techniques will be a great deal faster, and may in time be cheaper, than using the post office.

Of course, it will always be possible to bring the electronic mail services down by striking the communications centres, or satellite relay posts, or even the manufacturing concerns that turn out the equipment.

Then it will be back to the pen, ink, and shaving cream.

A plutonium time-bomb threatens California

William Scobie
The London Observer

SAN FRANCISCO — Two Californian women who call themselves "lab widows" have triggered a federal inquiry into mysterious accidents and a rash of cancer cases — including three deaths — at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, America's Number One nuclear weapons research centre.

The probe is one of three under way at the trouble-plagued, top-secret lab that developed the H-bomb, 30 miles east of San Francisco. U.S. Energy Department investigators are already seeking the cause of two spills of deadly plutonium dust, some of which escaped into the atmosphere. And geological-teams are re-evaluating the earthquake threat to Livermore in the wake of a tremor that caused a radioactive leak and $3.5 million damage at the "quake-proof" facility last January.

Ann Gunn and Jo McSwiggan, the "lab widows," watched their husbands die "terrible deaths" last year from melanoma, a virulent skin cancer. Now they are suing the lab for $10 million, charging that scientist Stuart Gunn and engineer Richard McSwiggan — both in their forties and both Livermore workers for over a decade — were victims of lax safety precautions.

Twenty-three cases of melanoma have been detected at Lawrence Livermore — a rate five to six times that of people in the San Francisco area.

The lawsuits were a key factor in Washington's decision to send a team of five top scientists from universities across the U.S. to Livermore to review the job histories of the three dead and 20 surviving patients and report back in 60 days on causes of the "cancer cluster."

Twice in nine days last month, puzzling spills of plutonium — accidents that experts said "just couldn't happen" — occurred at Livermore, which houses the giant $35 million Shiva laser system crucial to thermonuclear weapons research.

The first spill came when pressure built up inside a "glove tank" holding plutonium. A relief valve failed, causing a thick rubber glove to burst, spewing dust — deadly if ingested — into Lab 1361, empty at the time. Some dust escaped through a filter system and was carried across homes, fields and vineyards.

The second plutonium spill was smaller. Again the lab was empty. Its cause is still under investigation.

A third study being made is of equally keen interest to politicians and various Californian protest groups fighting to move the plutonium project out or close the lab. Would a major earthquake on one of the four faults nearby cause a nuclear disaster?

The U.S. geological survey recently identified a new fault, christened the Las Positas, running only 50 feet from the lab — an active fissure given a quake capability of 6.5 on the Richter scale. Ten miles away, the Calaveras fault has an estimated capability of producing a 7.7 Richter scale quake.

That would be 1,000 times stronger than the 5.4 jolt that hit Lawrence Livermore last January, causing small cracks to appear in the 20-year-old concrete containment building that houses some 400 pounds of plutonium.

Lab spokesmen insist that it is safe, but since the quake, millions are being spent on reinforcements, although county engineers who have inspected the structure charge that the danger will remain high.

"Lawrence Livermore today is a threat to everyone in the San Francisco area," says Oakland Supervisor John George, in whose district the lab lies. "We want it out."

The self-inflicted suffering of a bizarre Nixon aide

Washington Star Service

WASHINGTON — Frances Liddy urged her husband not to burn his hands with candles, but he wouldn't listen.

"The first time it happened," Mrs. G. Gordon Liddy is saying, "I saw the burns, and we took him to the hospital. I told him I didn't think it was a wise thing to do, and that I hoped he wouldn't do it again."

Then Mrs. Liddy rolls her eyes in exasperation and says, as if speaking of a naughty child: "But what are you going to do? He did it again when he was in prison."

Gordon Liddy, seated on a couch in a Mayflower Hotel suite, looks at his wife sternly. "From time to time," he explains tersely, "we differ."

This is very odd. It is 10:30 p.m. and G. Gordon Liddy has just hurried into his hotel room from Philadelphia, where he has been on tour to promote his new book. While waiting for him, his wife and 17-year-old son, Tom, have been talking about "Dad's" bizarre antics in the same matter-of-fact tones that another family might discuss the price of bread.

They have spoken of how, as a child, he ate a rat. "I would certainly want (my own children) to be very careful where the rat came from," says Mrs. Liddy. "They carry disease, you know."

They have discussed how he selected his wife, a tall, handsome woman, for her "genetic material." They have spoken of how he scorched his skin to develop self-discipline. "I did similar things when I was young," says Tom. "In the 6th grade, these girls with long fingernails would dig their nails into my arm, and pinch until my arm would bleed. I did it without flinching."

Now Liddy, just arrived, rolls up the sleeve of his blue shirt to display white scars, the size of quarters, on his left palm and forearm. "Anybody who has read the book," he says proudly, "asks to see them."

As almost everybody knows by now, Liddy, 49, the former White House staff member who allegedly masterminded the 1972 Watergate break-in, has written his autobiography, Will. In it, he describes how he overcame fear by (a) lashing himself to a tree during a thunderstorm, (b) cooking up a rat for lunch and (c) burning his flesh with candles.

In the book, he is portrayed as a cold, emotionless man who keeps a private arsenal of handguns and is fascinated with nazism and master-race genetics.

But in person, Liddy resembles Groucho Marx more than George Lincoln Rockwell. He is a slightly built (5-feet-9, 140 pounds) man who continually cracks jokes.

Liddy says he selected his wife because of her genes. "Somewhere, I felt sure," he writes, "I would find the woman I wanted to bear my children: a highly intelligent, tall, fair, powerfully built Teuton, whose mind worked like the latest scientific wonder, the electronic computer . . . I had earned the right to seek my mate from among the finest genetic material available."

But what, he is asked, about the old-fashioned idea of marrying for love?

"In the Orient, they have a saying," he replies. "'You Westerners marry whom you love. Over here, we love whom we marry' . . . I think there is nothing more ridiculous than marrying for sexual reasons."

As the family banter continues, it is easy to forget that Liddy, the good-natured father, is the same man who plotted to kill E. Howard Hunt and Jack Anderson and to slip LSD into Daniel Ellsberg's soup. But when his wife and son disappear into the next room for a few minutes, Liddy suggests that Jack Anderson "wasn't the only one who warranted that kind of direct action."

"If I was part of the government," he says, "and competent authority asked me to kill (former CIA agent-turned-author) Philip Agee to prevent him from risking lives of agents abroad, I would think that that was a sane and warranted request."

Erma Bombeck

I have never underestimated the power of advertising.

Promise people anything — squeaky hair, sweet breath, clean laundry or relief from embarrassing itching — and they'll trample you to death on your way to the store.

Even in the area of selecting a husband or a wife, advertising seems to be gaining in popularity.

A bachelor in Georgia lettered a big sign that read, "Wanted, Good Wife, New or Used. No Collect calls," and displayed it on Route 137. As far as I know, he's still interviewing. Another ad, with a little more sophistication, was placed in a newspaper by a man in Wisconsin. He advertised for a woman no taller than 5-5, weighing no more than 115 pounds, a non-smoker, infrequent drinker, frugal, aggressive, studious, a late sleeper who preferred a house temperature of not more than 65 degrees. He preferred an agnostic and was willing to negotiate for not more than two children. His responses were in the hundreds.

The benefits of advertising should be obvious. At least you know where you stand. Better to find out at the top that your husband plans to keep the thermostat at 65 and under than to go through life feeling like you're living in a House of Wax.

How many women would have gotten stuck with ring-around-the-finger had they known their men had terminal ring-around-the-collar? One-step cameras are fun . . . but a one-step husband to a woman who likes to dance is something to deal with.

Let's stop kidding ourselves. We're grown up. We know what we want out of marriage and should give as much thought to it as we do when we're buying any major purchase like a car or an airline ticket.

My husband said he wished he'd have asked for a guarantee of parts, or at least more extensive insurance to cover me. During the first six months of our marriage, I had my tonsils out, extensive dental work, mumps, and my feet worked on.

Quite frankly, I would have examined the 50-50 clause a little closer. I didn't realize the bathroom and the children were always to be in my part of the house.

If we had both known what "Marry now . . . pay later" meant . . . maybe we'd have read the ads and shopped a little.

GORDE HUNTER
one man's opinion

Did your mother ever tell you. . .

That cigarette smoking would put little holes in your lungs? She did in my youth and for a long time it really scared hell out of us. And was she right or was she right?. . .

That a clove of garlic tied around your neck would ward off the common cold during the winter months? Stunk like the devil but the sniffles came anyway. . .

To wear clean underwear because you never know when you'll get in an accident and have to go to hospital? . .

About carrots and better vision? Of course she did and while the vision bit turns out to be an old wife's tale, the carrots are still great as long as you don't boil out the goodness. . .

Not to put your tongue on bare metal in freezing weather? Ah yes, and who listened? Hurt, didn't it?. . .

To respect your elders and to listen to what they said? What they said might not have been all right, but some of it was and your education was advanced as a result. . .

To be careful about the thin ice of spring and to test it thoroughly before skating on it? And how many times did you get wet through not listening?. . .

THAT SOMEDAY you'd be a father (or a mother) and that you would rue the day you treated your own parents in such cavalier fashion? Well?. . .

Never to do any planting—flowers or vegetables—until May 24. On the weather-dreadful prairies the admonition still holds far more truth than myth. . .

That without education life is a tough row to hoe? Not only tough, but today, almost impossible. There are exceptions to the rule, but they are few and far between. . .

To give up your seat (applies to sons, not daughters,) on the tram or bus to a lady? She did that and yes, you should and to older men as well. . .

That the turning of shirt collars was common sense and money-saving as well? She was right, but I doubt it is done to any great extent today—even with inflation kicking the devil out of us. . .

That old habits couldn't be broken? My mother, for instance, refused to go to Canadian Football League games because a live display might fall short of the mind picture she had built up through listening to the games on radio. . .

THE "FIRST FOOT" (first male through the front door on New Year's Day,) had to be dark-haired and carrying a piece of coal? Do they still follow such tradition?. . .

That tripe was nutritious and a solid cold-weather staple? Being that Winnipeg had more than its fair share of cold, meant our house had tripe on a regular basis and while it might well be nutritious, anybody who says it tastes good is full of tripe. . .

To always sit at the back of the bus? Mine did—said if there was an accident your chances would be better. Very debatable. . .

To put 10 per cent of your earnings in the bank? Good advice then, just as good today, but how many of us heeded it? Had we done so from the start of our working lives, the nest egg would be pretty substantial today. . .

Never to patronize a business that stayed open on Sundays? By that rule, we'd have almost nowhere to shop these days. And yes, I can see no real need for Sunday openings. . .

That if you got the strap at school, you'd get another dose of the same when you got home? Double jeopardy, true, but a very effective way to back up school authority. . .

To walk to work—that it would save both health and money at the same time? More truth than fiction in this one, but walking has become almost a lost art—except for those who have had health scares. . .

That you could never trust the Liberals? That was the prairie rationale even in the Thirties and nothing has happened in the interim to change the theory. . .

Never to carry a grudge, to apologize when necessary and that it was impossible to have too many friends? If all the peoples of the world acted in accordance with such motherly advice, it would be a much nicer world to live in. . .

Tourist treasure at Royal Oak

I would like to comment on the recent suggestion made by the Lord Chamberlain's Society regarding the use of the Maltwood property, as mentioned in the May 9 Colonist.

Driving on the Pat Bay Highway in April, I was struck by the cascading white dogwoods, golden daffodils, bright hued tulips and vibrant green trees around me. It was a fabulous greeting and I thought what an exceptional sight we have, particularly in April, for tourists. Therefore, if they were to be greeted by a spring fete in Victoria and a Shakespearean Village to visit complementing the Tudor buildings already in the Royal Oak area, I think it would be a real treat, and something we all should promote.

This village concept needn't be a threat to the tourist site we already have in Anne Hathaway's Cottage. Those who have been to Stratford-upon-Avon, will know that the Shakespeare family houses are not close to one another and both attractions could be advertised in concert with each other.

Further, if the Broadmead shopping centre were a possibility, perhaps a special link or overpass could be made between that, the village and Royal Oak centre to complement each other. I sincerely hope Saanich council and all the area get behind this valuable idea.

Exclusive address help to Tindall?

The story in the May 13 Colonist about Mayor William Tindall's car being towed away by Gordon's is certainly worthy of comment.

In view of the many stories pertaining to the rudeness of the towing company staff, it was a pleasant surprise to read that on the occasion of Mayor Tindall's dealings with them, he found them "quite courteous," even though they didn't recognize him.

The Colonist story did, however, leave two questions unanswered in my mind:

If an "unrecognized" Mr. Tindall really wanted to gain first-hand experience as to how ordinary customers of towing firms are treated, why did he state his address as City Hall?

Was it because of this exclusive address that the bill for the damage to his vehicle was so promptly settled?

BIGOTED WAR

I would like to say one thing to those selfish, thoughtless people who are indiscriminately starting to wage a bigoted war against off-road vehicles and motorcycles: Please, stop encroaching upon our rights and interests.

I don't care what Ald. Robert Wright says, Victoria West could use another park, even if the statistics indicate that the area has more parks per capita than the rest of the city.

The big excuse for wanting to sell the better part of the Rainbow site for development is the housing shortage. The city feels it must do its share to alleviate the problem and here's an opportunity.

Well, there are other considerations. To begin with, the three-acre site at Robert and Russell is located on the waterfront. Cities blessed with such natural amenities should do everything to preserve them.

By building a handful of townhouses on the Rainbow site, the housing problem won't be solved. If Victoria city council really wants to address itself to the problem, it should aggressively pursue plans to develop the Songhees industrial reserve.

A rough blueprint for the development of that land exists. All that's needed is co-operation from the provincial government.

VIC WEST HAS ALWAYS had that poor-cousin image. It's been the traditional dumping ground for anything Victoria proper wouldn't dream of accepting.

Over the years, there have been numerous studies and reports about Vic West, each one promising residents more than the previous one. Nothing has ever happened.

The roads in Vic West are worse than anywhere else. Downtown has enjoyed city council's financial support for numerous local improvement schemes. Vic West had two such programs cut out of this year's budget.

And now, city council wants to use more than half of the beautiful Rainbow property for a housing development.

It'll be great for the people living there. Who wouldn't want to live by the waterfront? But what of the rest of the residents? Don't they deserve a break?

The city bought the property from the Rainbow Sea Cadets in 1974 for $320,000. The main reason for the acquisition was to keep several developers from building high-density housing projects on the site.

BOTH THE PURCHASE and the reason for it were laudable. But city council should now take that second step and reserve the site—the whole site—for park purposes.

The aldermen will, of course, plead municipal poverty, fiscal responsibility and commonsense. They will say that taxpayers just can't afford the luxury of such a lavish gift for Vic West.

True, selling 1.7 acres of the property for housing would put about $500,000 into city coffers, but a beautiful piece of waterfront land would be lost to the general public.

POLITICIANS, TOURIST operators, and a mob of semi-current notables crowded aboard the Victoria Princess, formerly the Queen of Prince Rupert Thursday to congratulate each other on the stroke of mediocrity which gave birth to the Royal Service between Victoria and Seattle.

Transport Minister Alex Fraser promised more tourists on the run than ever before. Victoria Ald. Robert Wright pumped hands in his capacity as chairman of the B.C. Steamship board of directors and Boeing's super lobbyists Robin Little was all smiles. Who can blame him.? He'd finally slipped a jetfoil into B.C. waters.

But anyone who cared to look beyond the hype and promotion could see that the Queen of Prince Rupert was no match for the Princess Marguerite which was so successfully scuttled by the government.

The ship is tiny compared with the Marguerite. And it lacks her style. In fact every ferry plowing between Vancouver Island and the mainland has more style than the Rupert.

Even if with the assistance of the jetfoil she manages to haul as many tourists here as the Maggie did, she won't be able to replace the old girl.

Talk Politics
with Jim Hume

There was a time when the politicians and the press were deadly enemies, and there may be those among you who still think they are.

But, alas, with the sudden awareness about 30 years ago that the press, joined by radio and later television, could be a useful tool in the obtaining and retention of power—the only political dream—politicians are no longer prepared to engage in open battle even with all the fire power at their disposal.

Sure, they complain from time to time about the wolfpack, now known as the media. They lament misleading headlines, deceptive twists to stories. They cry misquote once in a while, accuse media people of flagrant bias, charge us with distorting facts.

But they need us too much to turn on us in full fury and with full parliamentary legal rights. They have adopted as their theme song the words from one of the pop songs: "I want you, I need you, ain't no way I'm ever gonna love you, but don't be sad, two out of three ain't bad."

IN RESTRICTING themselves to sniping they lower their own integrity and do the media no good at all. If there has been a decline in the standard political reporting, the politicians are more responsible than any publisher, editor or individual reporter. They let things go because they want us, they need us, even if they ain't ever gonna love us.

It wasn't always so.

Back in 1892 the brothers Kennedy, James and Robert, were publisher and editor of the Daily Columbian published in New Westminster. On March 17 of that year they published a leading article with the headline Outrageous Presumption. The content, wielded like a double-bitted axe, merrily hacked the politicians then residing in the B.C. Legislature to small pieces.

The politicians were not amused.

On March 22, five days after the broadside appeared in print, the matter was discussed in the Legislature. The discussion was not lengthy. The brothers Kennedy were found responsible for publishing "a scandalous libel against certain Members of this House" and of displaying "a high contempt of the privileges and of the constitutional authority of this House."

BUT THE RED-BLOODED politicians of yesteryear didn't stop there. They gave the Kennedy brothers one week to present themselves before the bar of the house to justify their article.

No excuses, just be at the bar of the house, the polished brass rail many visitors think of as just a decoration, on March 29 "at the hour of two o'clock p.m. to answer for the said scandalous libel and for the contempt aforesaid."

James and Robert Kennedy were either high in courage or received poor legal advice. They ignored the summons.

When the house convened on the appointed day members were informed that they had been legally summonsed but had obviously chosen to tell the politicians what they could do with their piece of blue paper.

There were a couple of "doves" in the chamber that day who thought the Kennedys had learned their lesson and that matter should now be dropped.

But there were more hawks than doves.

JUST TO MAKE SURE they were proceeding down the road correctly, the house struck a five-man committee for a second, hard look.

The committee reported back to the house on April 9 when chairman Charles E. Pooley told the members that in the opinion of the committee "the House (should) proceed against the said James M. Kennedy and Robert Kennedy for the said scandalous libel and contempt.

On April 12 the house voted in favor of that recommendation and the sergeant-at-arms was ordered to travel to New Westminster, take the pair in custody, and bring them back to the bar.

And on April 21 the unrepentant brothers stood at the polished brass rail to justify their article and their "contempt" for not appearing when first summonsed.

We'll ignore the legal arguments for the non-appearance, interesting though they are. We are just interested in reporters and reporting and politicians.

The Kennedy brothers told the house that a few days after the offending article was published they had run another piece which clearly demonstrated there was no intention "to make any personal charge against any of your committee, or any member thereof, or against any Member of Your Honorable House."

COULD THAT SECOND article, the Speaker asked quietly, be construed as an apology?

A "yes" would undoubtedly have seen them rebuked and released. It was the easy way out but the Kennedy brothers were not prepared to take it.

"We offer it," they replied, "as an explanation."

"Have you anything further to say?" asked the Speaker.

"No," replied the Kennedys.

The Kennedys were taken away by the sergeant-at-arms and lodged, presumably, in the cell which now stands in the basement of the main buildings. The sentence, unassailable, that they be detailed "pending an expression of the pleasure of the House."

After a night in the basement the Kennedys were brought back at 11 a.m. on April 22. As they again stood at the bar they were asked if they had anything to add to what they had said before.

"We have nothing further to say." Back to the basement cell.

The Journals get a little vague after that but it's safe to say that after a few days of appearances at the bar the politicians felt they had made their point and the Kennedys were shipped back to the royal city on the banks of the Fraser. And there's little doubt that they handled their political reporting with more care in the days following.

IN DECEMBER, 1921, the first day of the month, the Vancouver Sun came perilously close to going into the history books with the Columbian for "certain headlines in an article."

They didn't call anyone from the Sun before the bar, but the Speaker of the day left no doubt as to what he felt about the headline. He said "The public of this province is entitled to a fair and truthful report of the proceedings of this House. The headlines of the article in question are neither fair nor do they convey a truthful impression of the proceedings . . . The headlines referred to are a distinct breach and contempt of the privileges of this House. I trust that a similar contempt will not occur again."

Had the Sun publisher or editor been called before the bar, he too could have marched to the basement to await the pleasure of the house. There is no appeal.

In 1938, another, unnamed newspaper was in trouble, this time for an editorial accusing the Speaker of making partisan decisions and referring to the "progressive decadence of the memberhisp" of the Legislature.

Today such criticism would draw wails of indignation but little action. On Nov. 28, 1938, the Speaker took a tougher stand.

"ANY REFLECTION on the Speaker is a reflection on the House itself . . . a reflection on our democratic system of government under which the Speaker is elected by the representatives of the people themselves.

"The freedom of the press is a precious thing, but newspapers have a responsibility not to exercise that freedom in such a manner as to bring into contempt out democratic institutions and system of government."

Once again the author was not called before the bar, but the Journals of the house leave no doubt that he came close.

And what does all that have today with the Legislature, circa 1980?

Well, my friends, the historic committee on privileges is sitting again and trying to decide whether or not the RCMP was in contempt when it bugged an MLA's telephones and his office. It is also going to decide whether the head of the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit was in contempt for what he allegedly said in a Vancouver Sun article regarding wiretapping and politicians. And presumably, should it decide CLEU head Robert Simson was in contempt, it will have to decide whether the Sun was also in contempt for publishing his remarks.

It will be interesting to see how they go, especially on the latter. They have all the constitutional power in the world to preserve the authority handed to them with Magna Carta, but do they have the courage to use it?

Their predecessors did. But that was in a day when politicians earned respect and were unafraid of the media.

Sweet thought for jobless fund

Like numerous Canadians of my age, I am the monthly recipient of a variety of government pension cheques. Most of us are also taxpayers who annually return to the issuing government a large portion of its bounty and of the proceeds from our annuity payments.

With many of these cheques, we receive handsomely printed seasonal greetings from solicitous politicians, expositions of the government's benificence and admonitions to improve ourselves. I'd rather have the cost of these papers added to my pension.

The latest arrived this morning with my old age pension cheque, sent early, no doubt, to circumvent the threatened postal strike. (Why does Canada Post have so many strikes when the old Royal Mail didn't?) This particular illustrated blurb, in several colors and two languages, admonishes us old dodderers not to drink too much. It was sweet of Monique Begin to think of us, but is it not a little late in the day for the babes and sucklings to pass on this bit of wisdom?

Writing, preparing, printing and distributing these gems does, of course, provide employment in many government departments (although no longer for the deceased Queen's Printer). Surely, we should be permitted to claim some portion of this cost as a charitable donation to the unemployment fund.

Down she went — sails and all

Freight by sailpower another storm victim

The Caribbean has recently claimed the 45-metre wooden schooner Artemus and with its sinking went the plans of a group of New Brunswick investors to return to the age of sail.

The ship was lost in a storm about 200 miles off Tampa, Fla., — the same storm that drove a freighter into a bridge killing 33 at Tampa.

The captain and seven-member crew narrowly escaped from the sinking ship and were picked up unhurt after nine hours in a rubber raft.

The storm, with winds estimated at 110-130 kilometres an hour, was the second in six hours to hit the 78-year-old Danish-built schooner.

The first storm took off the sails. A temporary sail was rigged, but the second storm proved to much for the crippled vessel and she went down.

Six Saint John-area investors had hoped to put the Artemis into regular service as a freighter.

The ship, with a 270-tonne cargo capacity, was small and slow by modern shipping standards but the owners believed that fuel savings could make it competitive.

The schooner was en route from Mobile, Ala., where it had been purchased, to Fort Lauderdale, Fla. It was to take on supplies in Florida before sailing to Norfolk, Va., for its first cargo — 1,000 wood stoves bound for England.

The owners planned to use the schooner mostly in the Great Lakes after its initial Atlantic crossing.

The ship, after being fitted with navigation aids, was worth about $500,000. Some insurance was carried.

Two 12,000-ton freighters are expected at Ogden Point to take on wood pulp early in the week.

No firm time of arrival has been announced, but according to Victoria shipping agents the two will be here either early Tuesday or Wednesday.

Norway's Hoegh Oris will take on cargo for Indonesia, and Yugoslavia's Kranj will load wood pulp destined for Mediterranean points. Both ships are expected to depart immediately on completion of loading.

The bulk-carrier Alexandra Dyo is scheduled to arrive at Cowichan Bay early Wednesday to take on 2.5 million board-feet of lumber destined for Cuba. No date of departure has been announced.

Thursday's Treasury Bills

High-stakes game requires millions — and bank wins

TORONTO (CP) — Shortly before noon each Thursday, small groups of highly-paid professionals huddle briefly in their Bay Street trading rooms to plot strategy for a multi-billion-dollar poker game.

They are money traders, and their opponents in the weekly game are the Bank of Canada and rivals in the money business.

The stakes are high, not only for the traders, but for anyone on the verge of borrowing money from a bank or renewing a house mortgage.

THAT'S BECAUSE Canadian interest rates have been tied since mid-March to the outcome of this poker game — the regular weekly auction of federal government treasury bills.

But the game has become particularly risky lately because the government's central bank has jumped heavily into the bidding, forcing the cost of credit to remain high.

By mid-day Thursday, the money-market dealers inform the Bank of Canada how much they are prepared to bid for that week's offering of hundreds of millions of dollars in treasury bills, short-lived promissory notes sold to help pay Ottawa's debts.

About 2 p.m., the dealers learn the results of the auction and how many bills they have bought.

THE PRICE at which the sale is made — say $96 million for bills with a value at maturity of $100 million — determines the yield or interest rate.

The twin perils for every dealer are the possibility of buying too much at too high a price for profitable resale, or ending up with too few or no securities and having nothing to sell.

A wrong move for these financial experts can cost their firms hundreds of thousands of dollars in a matter of hours. The right bet means good trading profits for their employers and perhaps a bigger performance bonus for the dealers at the end of the year.

THE OUTCOME of the game for Canadians is higher or lower borrowing costs for businesses, farmers, homebuyers and people making bank-financed consumer purchases.

Even before March, the treasury bill auction had an important influence on interest rates. But Ottawa's decision to peg the trend-setting Bank of Canada rate directly to the auction results has thrown a spotlight on this previously-mysterious ritual.

The drama has been heightened by the fact that in this two-month period, Canadian interest rates have first soared to their highest levels in history, then taken the fastest and most violent drop ever experienced in Canada.

THE CURTAIN-RAISER was the Bank of Canada's decision to float its key interest rate, its rate on loans to Canada's chartered banks, fixing it each Thursday afternoon at a quarter of a percentage point above the average rate paid by the government on three-month treasury bills sold at the day's auction.

This change had the advantage for the newly-elected Liberal government of appearing to be a hands-off policy on interest rates, at a time when the cost of credit had no place to go but up.

But political opponents bitterly criticized the move as an attempt to escape campaign promises to keep interest rates under control.

Throughout the recent period, however, the Bank of Canada — an arm of the federal government in law and in practice — has mounted an unprecedented campaign of behind-the-scenes market manipulation in a bid to get the level of interest rates it wanted.

PREVIOUSLY, Bank of Canada governor Gerald Bouey announced changes in the bank's lending rate after contemplating day-to-day developments in the financial markets and considering the official Ottawa view of what interest rates should be.

For technical reasons, however, the central bank rate could never stray far from the auction yield on three-month treasury bills, the principal reason the new system is based on that yield.

Japan's cars at record high

TOKYO (AP) — Three major Japanese car-makers — Toyota Motor Co., Nissan Motor Co. and Toyo Kogyo Co. — said Friday their production reached record levels in April with the support of brisk sales in overseas markets.

Toyota said its production totalled 301,409 units, up four per cent from March and up 20 per cent from a year ago. Its previous record was set last November at 291,826 units.

Nissan reported its production at 227,045, up 2.8 per cent from the prior month and up 22.7 per cent from a year ago, surpassing the previous record of 220,779 units registered last March.

Toyo Kogyo said its production came to 97,891 units, up 2.8 per cent from March and up 25 per cent from the year before. Toyo Kogyo's previous monthly high was 95,363 last October.

Officials of the three companies attributed their record performances to increasing foreign demand, particularly in the Middle East market.

BOND WEEK

All ends steady

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were steady in active trading on the Canadian bond market this week.

All ends of the market were unchanged on the week.

Day-to-day money was available at 13½ per cent. Three-month treasury bills traded at an average of 13.92 per cent, down from 15.15 last week, and six-month bills at 12.20 per cent, down from 13.96 per cent. A special one-year bill was traded at 11.56 per cent.

The Government of Canada offered $1.65-million of bonds in the Canadian market Tueday, which is its largest offering for cash in history.

The govenment needed $475-million to pay off earlier bonds maturing June 1. The ramaining $1.18-billion will be used towards the government's large cash deficit.

Dealers said the Bank of Canada would take at least $700-million, leaving $950-million for investors.

Several Canadian chartered banks cut their prime lending rates to 14¾ per cent Wednesday, after the Bank of Canada lowered the bank rate to 13.35 per cent from 14.17. The prime lending rate in the United States dropped to 16-16½ per cent.

Some banks in the United States cut their prime lending rates Friday by one percentage point to match the 16½ per cent rate set earlier in the week by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. The prime rate has been on the decline for five weeks after reaching a peak of 20 per cent April 2.

Dealers said the market has been erratic of late, largely due to a weak reception in the U.S. to a treasury refunding of about $4 million.

Rail link step closer for Canada, Alaska

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — The Alaska Senate voted Friday to set a timetable for groundwork on a proposed extension of the Alaska Railroad to the Canadian border.

The railway was a factor in the last B.C. provincial election, when NDP leader David Barrett suggested the railway connection as a way of opening up undeveloped areas of northwestern B.C., and making better use of the Dease Lake extension of the B.C. Railway.

Barrett has discussed the proposal with American officials on several occasions, and the rail link has also been endorsed by the Washington State legislature.

But Premier Bennett said during the election campaign that if the Americans were interested in the proposal they would have to put up all the cash for it.

The latest Alaska bill directs the department of transportation and public facilities to complete legal descriptions of right-of-way for the extension by April 1, 1981.

By July, 1981, the department would have to approve, modify or reject the railroad corridor after public hearings.

After that, the state's department of natural resources would have to change the classification of state land within the railway corridor.

Condemnation proceedings, where necessary, would be started in co-operation with the federal government.

The idea of extending the railway to the Canadian border has been discussed for years.

He drove a cab to his first novel

By RAY DYKES
Colonist reporter

When an event in his life was bizarre and dangerous enough to be insane, part-time Montreal taxi driver Michael Carin decided to write a book about it.

He had never written a book before. Work on the manuscript took him five years.

Then there were the almost customary rejections by eight Toronto publishers and another in hometown Montreal.

Carin
. . . sea odyssey

"WHEN THEY hear you are writing your first novel they don't want to know you," Carin said in Victoria during an interview Thursday.

Then one day he picked up a fare in his taxi which was to prove his big break.

The woman was in a devilish hurry to get to the Montreal airport.

AFTER SPEEDING through a series of green lights, Carin looked over his shoulder and said with a grin, "Lady, we are moving expeditiously."

The passenger asked quizzically, "You don't do any writing, do you?"

She turned out to be in publishing and gave Carin her card. Today she is his agent and Deneau and Greenberg have just published that first novel, Five Hundred Keys.

THE 29-year-old McGill graduate likes to think there is more to his novel than the publisher's promotional blurb which has it as a thriller, a caper, an adventure.

Carin sees it as a book of the 1960s, even though it is set in 1972.

It involves an incredible voyage from Morocco to Canada across the Atlantic in a 38-foot Newfoundland longliner fishing boat with a cargo of 500 kilograms (thus the Five Hundred Keys) of high-grade hashish.

CARIN ACTUALLY made a voyage in a fishing boat Guiding Light across the Atlantic and the experiences of the boat in the novel come from his first-hand recollections, with fictional trimmings.

He won't say what cargo was actually on his boat when it left Casablanca and he jokes about not wanting to be indicted, but adds that "I came close to meeting the next world" in a bizarre experience so dangerous as to be insane.

In his novel, much of the narrator, Richard Caplin, is Michael Carin, but he says in real life he is not so "priggish."

THE BOOK IS set in the "'anti-war" student turmoil of the 1960s and traces the sputtering death of such protests and dissent through the emergence of the drug culture and "the poison" it became.

Carin has had four offers for the paperback rights for the novel so far and is hoping interest will be such that the publishers will be able to hold an auction. Film rights were sold soon after the manuscript was accepted by Deneau and Greenberg, and Carin says he is not interested in working in that field, which was too technical.

Instead he is hoping his "poor life" will be over with the success of Five Hundred Keys and that he can forsake his part-time taxi driving to travel widely while researching ideas for his second novel.

"THEY SAY the first novel writes itself and that the second is the major test of an author's creativity," he said.

Carin calls himself a writer now and romances with the title novelist which one day he hopes to have earned the right to use.

"It is a title of high honor to be called a novelist," he said.

"A NOVEL is the most comprehensive vehicle of expression. In what other medium can you pack so much?"

Much will depend on the sales of his first novel and he has spent the past two weeks visiting Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria to promote it.

Now it is a matter of sitting back, awaiting the critics' reviews and the sales reports to see if his poor days are over.

'Family first, then the guru'

Sect member ordered to pay up

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man whose wife and three children were on welfare while he spent thousands of dollars on religious festivals and donations has been told by a judge he cannot escape worldly responsibilities.

Family court Judge Malcolm Macdonald granted the wife's request for maintenance in a written judgment released Friday. He did so despite the husband's stated wish "to live in peace and not support his children."

The wife was awarded $100 a month for herself and $100 for each of the three children.

The husband and wife, now divorced, are members of the Divine Light Mission. The mission, as described in the judgment, is "a religion which believes in the Guru Maharaj Ji as a Christ incarnate, uses the Christian Bible and sponsors many trips each year to such far-off places as Miami, Rome and Orlanda, Fla., for festivals."

In his ruling, the judge recounted how the couple married eight years ago after living together for a year. He was 29 and she was 18. They separated in 1976.

One year later, he paid her air fare to religious festivals in Miami, Los Angeles and Rome, "apparently to see the guru and come around to his way of thinking," Macdonald said.

But there was no reconciliation and for most of the time since their separation, the wife and three children have been drawing social assistance. They currently receive $675 a month.

The husband said his only assets were a suitcase full of clothes and a mattress, and all excess funds were turned over to the mission.

He lived with another woman for a year. According to her testimony, the husband said he no longer had any responsibility toward his children.

The judge said the husband's plan was to move into the guru's ashram, a monastic order which calls for chastity, poverty and obedience, and any court order would interfere with that.

The judge said, however, there was no doubt of the husband's ability to make a living, since last year he grossed $11,311 and received an income tax refund of $900. In 1978, he contributed $1,542 to Divine Light and claimed his wife as a tax exemption.

He is now drawing unemployment insurance at $552 a month and says he cannot work because of the court application.

"I find it intolerable that the taxpayer and (the wife) have to put up with a situation where (the husband), while forming another romantic liaison . . . should tell her he no longer had any responsibility for his children," Macdonald said.

"And, at the same time, he spends thousands of dollars a year on trips abroad to festivals and donations to the mission while they are on welfare."

The judge found that the husband, considering his youth, health and eight years of university education, had an earning capacity far above his reported income last year.

Crusading cleric Mutchmor dies

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. James R. Mutchmor, a former moderator of the United Church of Canada known for his unremitting war against alcohol and gambling, died Saturday in Grace Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Mutchmor, 88, was elected to a two-year term in 1962 but had become the most outspoken United Church leader in Canada years before through his attacks on the evils of Canadian society.

Mutchmor believed the church had a mission in business, labor, schools, recreation and goverment. On his 74th birthday, he lashed out at government for giving distilleries and breweries tax exemptions for half their advertising costs.

He opposed mothers working, pornography, greed, apathy and "the chubby, cheerful, well-fed nonentities" who attended United Churches.

He became secretary of the evangelism and social service board in 1936, then secretary from 1938 until 1962, when he combined his job with being moderator.

Born on Manitoulin Island, Ont., in 1892, he was a gunner in the First World War and was wounded in the battle of Vimy Ridge in 1917 while serving in the "Buttermilk Brigade," the teetotalling 43rd Battery of the Canadian Field Artillery.

He later earned economics degrees from the University of Toronto and Columbia University, then graduated from Union Theological Seminary in New York. In 1920 he became a Presbyterian minister in Winnipeg, where he served for 16 years. He married in 1920 and had four children.

Deunification call 'superficial'

By BILL SMITH
Colonist reporter

Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne will name three department members this week to review 30 recommendations in a task force report calling for "creeping deunification" of Canada's armed forces.

The study was "a superficial thing containing hardly anything of substance," Lamontagne said in a Victoria interview Saturday.

The study was commissioned by former Progressive Conservative defence minister Allan McKinnon, MP for Victoria.

"I'll be naming a committee in a few days to see how we can dispose of the recommendations, but there's very little in it we didn't already know," he said.

The study group recommended that the army, navy and air force go back to distinctive uniforms. Green uniforms should be reserved for the army, the navy would wear dark blue and the air force light blue.

However, Lamontagne has already said it is doubtful the forces will return to distinctive uniforms.

A recommendation that commanders of the three forces be named to the Defence Council had been carried out prior to tabling of the report, the minister noted.

"I found the study did not get deeply enough involved in the consequences of the changes it proposed, and it lacked consistency."

Lamontagne said he approved of publishing an annual defence policy. "We're so interdependent on rapidly changing events, it's hard to have a long range policy."

The military, he said, is "moving pretty fast on modernizing the forces now" and won't get involved in another white paper that would slow it down.

"We're modernizing our armed forces at a rapid rate—tanks, Aurora aircraft and the big fighter aircraft contract—but there's only so much money available."

Lamontagne said it was not true Canada's allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization felt this country was not meeting its full obligations.

"I was at at a NATO meeting in Brussels last week," he said. "We were congratulated for keeping up our commitments."

On a related issue, he said the agreement under which Canada and the United States share aerial defence had been extended for one year instead of five years "because I want to look into whether the role could be changed."

The North American Air Defence agreement, generally referred to as NORAD, expired last week.

"Serious discussions have to be held with the U.S. because the picture is changing so rapidly," he added.

Golf iron in fire

Saanich council will be presented with a petition Tuesday containing signatures of 139 persons seeking creation of a second municipally-operated golf course.

The petition cites overcrowding at the Saanich-owned Cedar Hill Golf course as the reason for a course to be developed at Elk-Beaver Lake park. The park is operated by the Capital Region District.

Two years ago the region rejected a Saanich council request that another course be developed in the 200-acre Elk-Beaver Lake park because Cedar Hill was bursting at the seams.

Minnie foes get legal boost

Support from an unexpected source has accelerated efforts by a Saanich community group to raise money for another legal battle over a proposed housing development at Minnie Mountain.

The Vancouver-based West Coast Environmental Law Research Foundation questions the fairness of a court decision approving a land-use contract bylaw between Saanich and the developers of the controversial project.

The foundation says in a newsletter that the Cadboro Bay Residents Association may have received a raw deal.

The foundation criticizes a section of the Municipal Act protecting the bylaw in spite of the confirmed conflict of interest by an alderman.

The B.C. Court of Appeal may have been correct applying Section 174 of the act to save the bylaw, but "it may be argued that the result was not that intended by the Legislature," the newsletter states.

The association has been trying for more than a year to quash a Saanich bylaw allowing a housing development on the 72-acre site.

B.C. Court of Appeal recently overturned a B.C. Supreme Court decision quashing the bylaw because of conflict of interest on the part of former Saanich alderman David Paterson.

The court of appeal found Paterson in a conflict-of-interest situation but ruled it insufficient to quash the land-use agreement between the municipality and the developer.

The court of appeal used Section 174, which states no bylaw can be quashed by reason only that a person sitting as a member of the council is not qualified for municipal office.

Court of appeal judge to guide law reforms

B.C. Court of Appeal judge Mr. Justice John Aikins has been appointed chairman of the Law Reform Commission of B.C.

Attorney-General Allan Williams announced the appointment Friday.

Based in Vancouver, the Law Reform Commission was formed in 1969. Its purpose is to undertake legal research with a view to developing, reforming and modernizing all the laws of the province and make recommendations to the attorney-general for revision of those laws. Commission strength at present numbers five.

Aikins will not desert the bench entirely. Williams said he would continue to sit as a supernumerary judge in the Court of Appeal.

Of bits and chips and our complex future

Just watch those teenagers handle the new software, says visiting computer expert

By RAY DYKES
Colonist reporter

Life is meant to be complex. And it will get even more complex.

To understand how to cope and survive in an information revolution, people will need computers—the tool for mastering and directing that complexity.

THE THOUGHTS ARE those of Dr. Herbert Grosch, one of the world's most sought-after computer pioneers and consultants.

Today he makes a living writing and speaking about the computer world, a world which never ceases to fascinate him and daunt the average person.

But you'd better come to terms with computers, Grosch warned in an interview, because your children will rapidly understand them and speak the language.

He recently went to a Hamburg computer fair and was disturbed to see high school children swarming over the latest in software.

HE MUTTERED TO THE organizers that the kids should be kept out, leaving the computer technology for the "professionals."

Then he stopped to watch what the teenage students were doing. He was instantly converted and amazed at how quickly they were in tune with the computer world.

Grosch has since written a paper explaining why he changed his mind about children and computers.

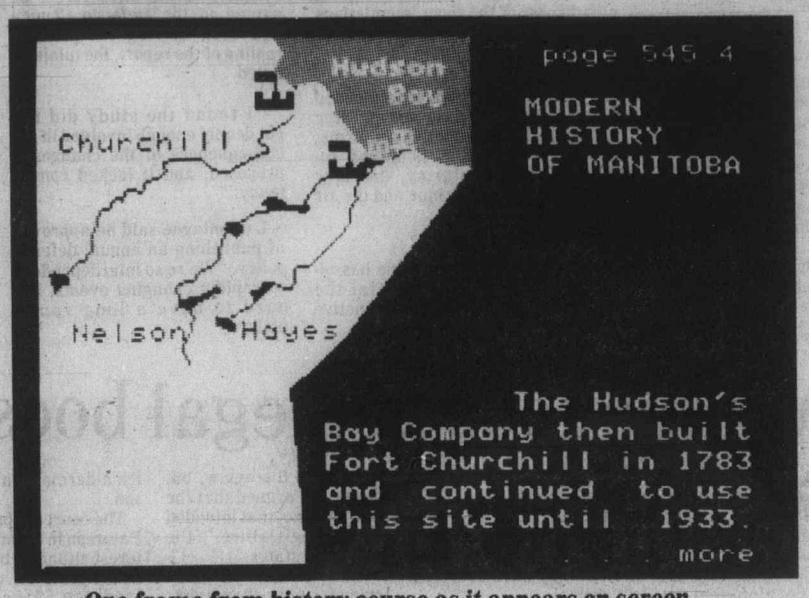
In Victoria recently as the keynote speaker at the 1980 conference of the Canadian Information Processing Society, Grosch is a man with an awesome record.

HE HAS TWICE WORKED for IBM, twice for General Electric, and twice for the United States federal government. He has lived and worked in Europe and consults for companies there and in Japan.

Many years ago he was active in celestial mechanics and in optical design. Later, before becoming manager of IBM's space program, he was national president of the major U.S. aerospace society.

He was a charter member of the Association for Computing Machinery, and is now past president of that 45,000-member organization.

Today, Grosch uses his home in Sunnyvale, California as jumping off spot to the rest of the world, mainly Europe.



One frame from history course as it appears on screen

HE SPOKE ON The Microfuture to launch the Victoria conference and believes "we opted many years ago for complexity as the acceptable route for Western culture" and embraced computer technology.

As someone who says he's "been in computers since before they started," Grosch contends there is no need to fear the computer age.

Most high school children have access to a calculator, or a computer terminal through a telephone today, and the education process has begun.

"We live in a world where change is increasingly acceptable. Who knows, we may all break down under the pressure, but the computer is no more difficult to accept than other changes."

HE THINKS THERE IS very little danger of a "computer Napoleon" emerging and quotes a Scandinavian scientist in response to a question as to how he would persuade others to change.

"I will not do so, but sooner or later they will die," Grosch replied with a grin.

Computers were the most important tool for the amplifying of human intelligence since the invention of language and were more important than print, he said and the interviewer wonders silently about the future of newspapers.

"I don't think it is ever really dangerous to have more intelligence," he continued.

BUT HE ALSO SEEMS aware that computer technology feeds the information revolution.

"The first rule in my view in collecting data is don't. If you have to, then collect as little as possible and then make sure you protect it."

On the impersonal nature of a computer, Grosch conceded that the programmer was forced to think like a machine.

But despite research and progress in human simulation with computers he thought it would be a long time before a computer could write like Shakespeare. He predicted the world was "decades and decades" away from producing a human computer with emotions, intuition and other mortal traits.

Grosche: Learned from kids

IF YOU DON'T WATCH it, Grosch will lead you deeper and deeper into the computer world complexity.

Like a Pied Piper he lures his listeners with talk of computer advances. Today man has 64-K chips, tomorrow million-K chips and there's even talk of billion-K chips.

Wait a minute you say. Chips? They turn out to be the fish-scale size silicon storage and memory banks which are the heart of the modern computer.

Each chip can store about 1,000 small pieces of information or binary digits, called bits.

SO THERE IS TALK of a billion-bit chip, but Grosch reassures you he doesn't think man will go beyond the million-K chip mark. It has something to do with contamination and imperfections through natural radioactivity on a scale so small that powerful microscopes have difficulty detecting it.

Then he starts to relate how new materials will allow computers to work faster and faster and fractions of micro-seconds punctuate the conversation with dizzying rapidity.

Grosch is also adept at talking about satellites and their potential. He pays Canada a compliment as a leader in the communication satellite field.

But before his computer-like brain leaves earth on another orbit into the future the interview concludes. The busy man is on the move again. To keep up with computers he has to run his life with discipline and keep feeding on the latest research and developments.

It is almost with relief that you watch the brilliant man go for another meal of digits and data, or as they say in computer parlance, zeros and ones.

Shortcuts in fine form . . . touchable and terry-ific!

Terry has really earned its place in the sun this summer. And in some cases, it's earned its stripes, too! Whoever thought towelling could look this terrific? And be machine washable? In an easy care blend of cotton/polyester. The colors have taken a turn for the brighter too . . . yellow, rose pink and aqua. All in sizes S,M,L. This summer a little terry does a lot for the female figure. And isn't that why you jogged all winter long?

Social impact rated high for marine park

By BILL SMITH
Colonist reporter

Creation of a marine park in Cordova Bay would have little biological effect but a relatively high social impact on residents, according to a conceptual engineering and environmental report prepared for Saanich council.

The study concludes that construction of a five- to 15-acre marine fill site off Fenn and Walema, using municipal access to the beach, is feasible.

Cordova Bay residents voiced strong objection to the idea of a marine park being created somewhere along the Cordova Bay shoreline when the Colonist reported last year that Saanich had hired Thurber Consultants Ltd., to undertake the study.

THE FILL site and causeway connecting it to Cordova Bay Road would affect the littoral drift along the shoreline, and "the potential involvement of Saanich in actions by shoreline residents for damages claimed to be a result of such changes in shoreline behavior is viewed as a strong deterrent to proceeding with the proposed development," the report says.

A copy of the report, expected to be presented to council this week, was obtained by the Colonist.

ALTERNATIVE locations for the marine fill, below Parker Avenue and between Mount Douglas Park and Cormorant Point, are discussed in the report. Placement of fill along the foreshore in these areas could considerably increase the stability of high banks, but access to both locations would be difficult. A road alignment to the beach from Ash Road through the park is possible but this would require agreement from Saanich, the report notes.

THE STUDY, done in conjunction with consultants for fisheries, recreation and social aspects, identified:

- Impact on the shore zone ecology of Cordova Bay.
- Truck traffic and noise impact on the community.
- Social impact as it related to existing beach activities, shoreline and real estate values.
- The economic viability and engineering feasibility.

The project would be undertaken over several years and the fill area steadily enlarged to create a park suitable for a variety of recreational and marine uses.

The proposal could have a small economic impact on the 44 tons of geoducks believed to be in the study area.

Dungeness crabs would avoid any disturbance caused by the fill operation and the report says it is unlikely any direct loss would occurr.

"The loss of five to 15 acres of habitat from the large available habitat area should not be significant considering the apparent low utilization of the area."

OVER-ALL social impact of the proposed development is judged to be relatively high. The two characteristics identified in the study are:

A relatively negative impact on Cordova Bay residents, especially those living along the shoreline close to the fill site from noise, dust and overcrowding.

On the other hand, there is a positive impact for Saanich residents and those living in adjacent municipalities in the form of increased access to the beach area and the potential for improved parking, boat launching and public space areas.

FOR SOME residents, the most dramatic impact of the proposed scheme would be the change in the view eastward from Cordova Bay. A majority of shoreline residents and many of the homes on the hillside would overlook the fill site. The greatest visual impact would be for shoreline property owners living within 1,000 metres of the proposed site.

Respondents to a questionnaire identified the natural beauty of the area and its scenic viewing amenities as the two major aspects.

MAJOR concerns of people opposed to the proposal included a fear of increased traffic and overcrowding of beaches; disruption of the environment and interference with wildlife; contribution to ecological damage and pollution; and destruction of the area's natural beauty.

Combined with visual aspects, the creation of a marine park with expanded recreational facilities might tend to change the character of the community, the report says.

Property values within a block of the proposed park might drop by 10 to 20 per cent, especially in the short term, and there could be a minor negative impact on real estate values on homes overlooking the community, the study team says.

The proposed park, which in effect would consist of an island offshore from the Cordova Bay community section of the beach, would form a wave shelter.

CORDOVA Bay Community Association president Eric Robinson said the major concern of residents was the effect the development would have on beaches because of a major change in the shoreline.

Individual concerns ranged from the impact on property values to the effect tampering with tidal currents would have elsewhere along the waterfront.

The proposed park could be developed at no cost to the municipality, as trucking contractors would be charged a dumping fee, the report suggests.

What's doing for holidays

Here are the main events today and Monday in Greater Victoria's celebration of the Victoria Day holiday weekend:

TODAY

Dawn to dusk, arts and crafts show and display, 700 block Yates Street; 11 a.m., church service conducted by Capt. Wilder, Salvation Army Citadel Corps, Evergreen high school choir directed by Percy Bronson, Centennial Square; noon, Ingraham high school, Cameron Bandshell; 12:30 p.m., Western A Cappella Choir, Crystal Garden; 12:30 p.m., Canyon High Marching Comanches, Market Square; 12:30 p.m., Capital Youth Chorale, Centennial Square; 1 p.m., Sammamish Interlake orchestra, Cameron Bandshell; 1 p.m., Ellensburg high school, Legislative Buildings; 1:30 p.m., Medford senior high school, Heritage Court; 1:45 p.m., Arlington high school, Mount St. Mary's Hospital and Saanich Peninsula Hospital; 2 p.m., Sweet Home high school, Centennial Square; 2 p.m., Greater Victoria concert band, Heritage Court; 2 p.m., Clackamas high school, Empress Hotel, Legislative Buildings; 2 p.m., Sammamish high school, Cameron Bandshell; 2 p.m., Newport high school, Glendale Hospital; 2 p.m., David Douglas high school, Legislative Buildings; 2 p.m., Western high school chorale, Visitors Information on Causeway; 2:30 p.m., Mt. Rainier high school, Matson Lodge; 2:30 p.m., Ellensburg high school, Market Square; 3 p.m., parade of boats and sailpast, Inner Harbor; 3 p.m., carillon concert, Heritage Court; 3 p.m., Newport high 12-string ensemble, Visitors Information on Causeway; 3 p.m., Bethel high school, Cameron Bandshell; 3 p.m., Canyon high Marching Comanches, Confederation Park; 3:30 p.m., Evergreen high school, Legislative Buildings; 3:30 p.m., Monroe high school band, Centennial Square; 4 p.m., Sammamish Interlake high school orchestra, Heritage Court; 4 p.m., Western high school, Legislative Buildings; 4 p.m., Spencer junior secondary, Cameron Bandshell; 5 p.m., Auburn high school, Legislative Buildings; 5 p.m., Kent Meridian high school, Cameron Bandshell; 7 p.m., Evergreen high school, Heritage Court; 8:30 p.m., sunset ceremony by Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Rainbow, Legislature lawn; 9 p.m., May Queen procession with Canadian Forces Naden Band, Government and Belleville Streets to Legislative Buildings; 9:30 p.m., May Queen crowning ceremony, Legislative Buildings; 9:30 p.m., Evergreen high school, Confederation Park; 9:45 p.m., May Queen procession, Legislative Buildings to Empress Hotel.

Government lodges okay in RN strike

Government health facilities appeared to be operating smoothly Saturday, the second day of a walkout by government-employed registered nurses.

The only Greater Victoria institutions affected by the walkout were those operated by the Glendale Lodge Society—Glendale Lodge, Tillicum Lodge, and Oak Bay Lodge—and with nurses available for essential services or emergencies, administrators of those institutions said the situation appeared to be in hand.

"If anything, it has improved morale," said Jim McMahon, administrator at Oak Bay Lodge. The Lodge is an intermediate care institution, and as such has only two registered nurses on duty on a regular shift. With the strike, that has been cut to a single nurse.

"The level of care has remained at a good standard," McMahon commented, adding that care at the Lodge has improved substantially since it was taken over by the government last fall.

"It has not been hurt by the strike."

Hubert Hayes, administrator of Glendale and Tillicum Lodges, said enough nurses are left to maintain essential services, but training programs at Glendale could feel the pinch.

No picketing has been reported at any of the institutions, and none is expected until next week, when the nurses could change their no-picketing strategy. That could keep members of other unions and associations off the job, creating a more serious problem for the institutions.

Across the province, only 480 of the government's 2,700 nurses remained on the job on the first day of the strike.

Jerry Miller, communications director for the nurses association, said no negotiations were scheduled at the moment. The last time the two sides sat down together to discuss a new contract was March 26.

"We'd like some negotiations, but the Government Employee Relations Bureau doesn't seem interested," he said.

If the walkout continues this week it will have an impact on the government's chest X-ray clinic and offices where nurses handle medical-code chores, checking claims made under the government health plan.

Miller said industrial relations officers with the Labor Relations Board are monitoring the situation in each institution to insure that important services are covered.

Weather outlook brighter

The weather forecast for today and Monday has brightened considerably.

It had been expected that cloudy conditions would dominate the Victoria Day weekend but the weather office says there'll be more sun in store for residents taking in the many events scheduled for the holiday.

Burglar chooses lawyers' homes

If he's ever caught, one Victoria burglar may have trouble finding a lawyer to represent him.

The thief has taken an estimated $150,000 in valuables in at least 20 robberies over the last two months, virtually all of them at the homes of lawyers, their employers, or associates. Most of the thefts have been in Oak Bay, but they have also been reported in Victoria, Saanich, Sidney, Colwood and Esquimalt.

The thief typically breaks into homes between noon and 2 p.m. and carts off the loot in a pillowcase or blanket. In some instances, the losses have been as high as $8,000.

The pattern has led police to believe that the thief is using some kind of directory, or even the telephone book, to pick his targets.

For co-pilot it's the way to fly

People are goggle-eyed when they see Corey, complete with goggles, and owner Tony Wallenberg of Victoria go zipping by on motorcycle. Wallenberg, of 738 Wilson, takes his part-terrier pal wherever he goes, whether around town or up-Island. Corey likes his protective goggles and also flying helmet with flappy ear pieces.

Hometown cadet bands top class

The band has been a perennial winner in previous competitions.

TV crew left in wake of whale of a story

When the jetfoil Flying Princess prepared to leave Seattle for Victoria Friday she had a three-member CTV crew on board to film the great event.

Just before sailing time the intrepid reporter and cameramen asked if departure could be delayed while they "shot" stragglers coming on board.

Permission granted.

While the TV crew was ashore it spotted the Greenpeace protesters and wandered over for a chat and a few comments on jetfoils and whales.

That proved too much for the Flying Princess skipper. He ordered full ahead, and CTV got some remarkable shots of her wake as she left Seattle harbor.

Obliging colleagues in Victoria picked up the crews' personal gear which was still on board. And two camera persons and a lone reporter caught a bus to Vancouver.

AT A GLITTERING affair Thursday at the Victoria Golf Club attended by almost all members of the Victoria Bar Association, the lawyers made Judge William Ostler an honorary life member.

Included in the list of speakers were Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie and Judge John Macintyre, from Vancouver, who used to prosecute cases before Ostler, and local lawyers Dermod Owen-Flood and Michael Hutchison.

The occasion also marked the end of Jakob de Villiers' one-year term as president. The new executive consists of Don Farquhar president, David Lisson vice-president and Scott Johnson treasurer.

Ostler, who started as a city employee in 1933 at the age of 17, became a magistrate in 1959 and is the last of the lay judges.

Reporters' notebook

NO WONDER B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner was so anxious to dump public transit onto the Urban Transit Authority: he told a group of people protesting the proposed Site C dam on the Peace River that he's "allergic to buses."

Bonner's response came when the B.C. Energy Coalition invited him to make the tour to explain to residents of the Peace Valley the need for the dam.

The tour will go ahead anyway, said local organizer Bruce Kaun, leaving Victoria Tuesday and arriving in the Peace area Friday.

THEY'VE MANAGED to acquire an impressive looking challenge cup, but Capital Region District employees are having a little difficulty getting directors into a fitness test.

Administrative assistant Grant McRadu and some of his fellow employees are enthusiastic about the event scheduled for the afternoon of June 8 at Juan de Fuca recreation centre. However, when the formal challenge to directors to prove their fitness was issued last week there were a few smiles, a few quips, and a few excuses, but no declared takers.

McRadu has organized events for teams of eight, including a 10-kilometre run, a relay race and water polo.

Employees have an undoubted advantage since there are hundreds of them to choose from while there are only 18 directors, few of them in noticeably good shape.

But McRadu is not discouraged. He's sure his people will conquer the directors on June 8 — and next year they'll take on the world.

THE FASCINATING story in last Sunday's Notebook about direct phone dialing in Iran prompted one reader to write: "Although you did not mention it, I presume that they are still able to place 'Persian to Persian' calls."

Hmmmm!

Codex overcomes protest to capture Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — "She was treated unfairly — I thought she was making a move and ready to win it," a disappointed Mrs. Bert Firestone said after watching California's Codex beat out her prize filly, Genuine Risk, for a Preakness Stakes victory that was marred by an incident at the head of the stretch.

Genuine Risk was running wide and making a strong move with 3-16ths of a mile to go when pace-setting Codex, with jockey Angel Cordero Jr. lashing wildly with his crop, appeared to brush the filly.

Eddie Arcaro, the greatest stakes winner of all time who won the Preakness six times, ignited the controversy when he said over ABC-TV:

"If he didn't bump that filly, I've lost my eyesight."

Mrs. Firestone, owner of the Kentucky Derby-winning filly, and trainer LeRoy Jolley both felt there was interference at the head of the stretch, but Jolley wanted to see films of the race before making an accusation.

He watched five replays of the race from various positions, in black and white — the same film viewed by the stewards — and also a color rerun of the ABC tape.

"Something happened," Jolley said, shrugging his shoulders afterward. "There is nothing we can do about it."

A foul claim was lodged by Genuine Risk's jockey, Jacinto Vasquez, but disallowed by the stewards.

"I thought this was a racetrack, not a rodeo," Vasquez, who was aboard Genuine Risk when she became the second filly to win the 106-year-old Derby, said. "I think they should take his number down."

The film failed to show an actual bumping but the horses were within inches of each other as they turned into the stretch.

Mrs. Firestone indicated that Genuine Risk, if she comes out of the Preakness race in good shape, would run in the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes, the third leg of U.S. thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, on June 7.

Jolley agreed with Vasquez that the brush between his horse and the Preakness winner affected Genuine Risk's performance.

"After you run a mile it is hard to generate that surge again," the veteran trainer said, referring to Genuine Risk's apparent letdown after seemingly being ready to make a run for the wire.

"It was an unsatisfactory situation either way," he added. "My horse won the Derby fairly and now has put up a great performance in this race."

Asked if he was sorry he didn't win the $180,700 first prize, Jolley replied: "I would give all the money to turn it around."

Codex, owned by Tartan Stable, flashed under the wire in 1:54 1-5 for the 1 3-16th miles, tying Spectacular Bid's effort last year for the second-fastest time in the history of the race. The record of 1:54 was set by Canonero II in 1971.

While the trip was fast, the 10-minute wait for the stewards to view the films after Vasquez's foul claim had to be agonizing for trainer Wayne Lukas, owners Mr. and Mrs. James Binger, and John Nerud, president and general manager of Tartan Stable.

Codex returned $7.40, $3.60 and $3.80. Genuine Risk paid $3.60 and $2.80 and Townsend B. Martin's Colonel Moran was $3.40 to show.

Codex's winning margin was 4¾ lengths over the filly, with Colonel Moran another three-quarters of a length back and seven lengths in front of Jaklin Klugman, who had finished third in the Derby and was the only other Derby starter in the Preakness field.

Philadelphia's Tom Gorence heads for ice after check from Bob Lorimer of New York

Islanders bury Flyers with powerplay goals

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Led by a deadly powerplay combination that produced five consecutive goals, New York Islanders overpowered Philadelphia Flyers 6-2 Saturday to win the third game of their Stanley Cup final series.

The National Hockey League championship series now stands at two games for the Islanders, one for the Flyers, and the fourth game here Monday night.

Monday's game will be telecast on channels 2 and 6 at 5 p.m.

Denis Potvin, the burly pointman on the Islander power play, led New York offensively with two goals and two assists. Lorne Henning, Bryan Trottier, Mike Bossy and Clark Gillies also scored for the winners.

Bobby Clarke and Mike Busniuk scored the Philadelphia goals.

The game was a reversal reverse of the second game of the series, which the Flyers dominated at the Spectrum in Philadelphia, 8-3.

In Saturday's game, the Islanders shut down Philadelphia's big guns, snuffed out their power play and played solid, controlled hockey.

But acrobatic goaltending by Islanders Billy Smith stopped 23 shots. At the other end of the rink, Phil Myre faced 40 shots, giving up the six goals.

The opening period was dominated by New York's power play, which produced three goals, although the first goal scored by the Islanders came while the Flyers had a man advantage.

With Duane Sutter off for hooking the Flyers' Ken Linseman, the Islanders cleared the puck from their own end and, in a scramble at centre ice, Bob Bourne dug it loose and passed to Henning who broke in quickly and fired a slapshot from the top of the faceoff circle through Myre's legs.

That goal — the Islanders seventh in the playoffs — set a record for shorthanded goals in the playoffs. It surpassed the six set by New York Rangers last year.

While the Islanders wielded a potent power play in the opening period, the Flyers, who had four manpower advantages to the Islanders' three, could not get organized. New York's forechecking seemed to overwhelm the Flyers and Myre had to be quick to stave off two breakaways that otherwise would have been shorthanded goals.

The Islanders proved equally dangerous on the power play in the second period, opening the lead to 6-0. Gillies scored the fifth New York goal, stepping out of the penalty box and picking up a rinkwide pass from Stefan Persson.

At the 17:25 mark, Potvin scored his second goal of the game, again on a power play. Bossy dug the puck out of the corner and slid it to Persson, who faked a shot and relayed it to Potvin. Potvin rapped a shot from the top of the slot, beating Myre high on his glove side.

The period was marked by some chippy play and two fights but referee Bob Myers called a tight game to keep things under control. He handed out a pair of misconducts to each team in an effort to hold down the fisticuffs.

Quinn coach of year

UNIONDALE, N.Y (AP) — Pat Quinn, who guided Philadelphia Flyers to a record 35-game unbeaten streak and the regular season championship with 116 points, has been named coach of the year by the National Hockey League Broadcasters Association.

Quinn received 110 points in the balloting for the Jack Adams Trophy, named in honor of the legendary coach of Detroit Red Wings. Scotty Bowman of Buffalo Sabres, the 1977 winner, was second with 42 points and Claude Ruel of Montreal third with 29.

Since Quinn replaced Bob McCammon as Flyers coach in January 1979, the Flyers have lost only 20 of 110 regular-season games. This season, they were 48-12-20 under Quinn, who receives $1,000 along with the award.

Guenter hurls one-hitter

Rob Guenter must have set some kind of record for losing no-hitters in the last inning.

The Victoria Budget mound ace had two outs to go in the seventh inning Saturday when he was tagged for an infield hit by Les Howey.

Frustrated and slightly angered at losing a second straight no-hitter in the last inning, Guenter then retired the side and settled for a one-hit 2-0 victory over Saskatoon Allomatic A's in the first game of a Super Series fastball doubleheader played before a crowd of about 600 at Royal Athletic Park.

Guenter's pitching partner Mark Smith was equally sharp. He also notched a one-hitter, losing the no-hitter on a sixth-inning single, as Budgets took the second game 4-1 and the four-game set three games to one.

Guenter had a no-hitter going in his last appearance, against Woodinville Lumber last weekend, when he gave up an infield single with two out in the seventh inning.

Both infield hits came on slow ground balls to second baseman Carl Walker.

Walker made an excellent play to try and get Howey but first base umpire Lew McCorkall flashed the safe call.

The play was so close that both the crowd and players were split on whether or not Howey beat it out.

Budget coach Harvey Stevenson felt he was safe but Walker felt the call should have gone the other way.

"It was close enough that with a guy going for a no-hitter he should have called him out," said Walker. "It wasn't as if it was a step or anything."

Guenter, who claims he isn't a strikeout pitcher, finished with nine strikeouts and the only other baserunner was Steve Knudson who drew a walk in the fifth inning.

Gene McWillie, pitched a strong game for Saskatoon but he gave up a single to Guenter in the third inning. Guenter took second on a wild pitch and scored on a bloop single by Walker, who did an excellent job of battling McWillie until he got the right pitch.

Budgets added a run in the sixth inning when Walker reached on an error. Reg Underwood sacrificed pinch runner and Randy Benn and Benn scored on a single by John Green.

McWillie struck out seven and walked one.

Dan Wilson scored five goals and assisted once as the Coquitlam Adancs ousted the Rocks 12-8 in a Western Lacrossee Assovciation game.

"We didn't play well as a team," said Rocks general manager Ralph Baker.

"We gave them easy goals. They were fast breaking and got a lot of breakaways," he added.

"We ran out of steam in the late going," said Baker.

Coquitlam held period leads of 4-1 and 9-6 and peppered 58 shots at beleagured goaltender Larry Smeltzer.

The Coquitlam duo of Greg Thomas and John Lewis faced 38 shots.

Only four Shamrocks scored goals. Kevin Alexander had three goals and two assists, Jim Lynch scored twice and assisted twice, Jim Boyd scored twice and Paul Michael scored once.

Each team received 10 minor penalties.

The Shamrocks are back home Monday night when they host Nanaimo Timbermen at 8 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Stone wins renewal of Speedway rivalry

Stone came out on top.

Earning his first victory of the season, Stone captured the 25-lap main stock-car event, to defeat Miller, visiting from his new base in Calgary.

Stone grabbed the lead at that point and cruised home in his new 1970 Javelin.

Gord Gicas crept up to pass Miller, who placed third.

Victory for Stone meant defeat for Miller and Dale Taylor, who held a comfortable lead in points heading into Saturday's third weekend of racing.

Taylor had trouble with the electrical system in his 1968 Firebird and managed only a fourth place after winning the first two main events of the season.

Taylor's problems forced him to withdraw early from the heat race and he was unable to enter the trophy dash.

Meanwhile, Jim Smith had the fast time, setting a new record of 19.525 seconds.

U.K. tourists boot James Bay

Anti-Assassins resorted to the kicking game Saturday to keep their unbeaten record intact.

The British rugby touring side kept James Bay Athletic Association off balance with a strong kicking game and posted a 22-13 triumph before a crowd of about 1,200 at Royal Athletic Park.

A JBAA spokesman said he felt his club had a good share of the play and was actually dominating when the Anti-Assassins scored the game-breaking try against the flow in the final minutes.

The visitors were leading 16-13 but were under pressure when the homeside mishandled a kick and allowed Peter Williams to scamper in for a try. Nick Spaven was good on the convert.

"They didn't play their usual running game. All they did was kick but their kicking game was very effective," said Peter Simmonds of JBAA.

The Anti-Assassins started out with the running game but switched when JBAA carried the play for the first 15 minutes and took a 3-0 lead on a penalty goal by Murray Allen.

Steve Smith and Simon Langford scored the other Anti-Assassin tries, Langford added a penalty goal and Spaven had another convert and a penalty goal.

The next big action for rugby fans comes Tuesday when the Wales "B" team takes on the B.C. Selects at Royal Athletic Park starting at 7 p.m.

Among the Victoria players expected to be on the B.C. side are Hans DeGoede, Ray Rogers, K.C. Walt, Gary Johnston and Ron McInnes, all of JBAA.

Triactor instant success at Raceway

By TOM KEYSER

Four people, puzzling over their racing forms, sat in the stands at Sandown Raceway prior to the 10th race on opening day Saturday.

Each studied the chart, figuring angles, checking drivers and past peformances. Each juggled the numbers, trying various combinations on for size.

Finally satisfied, each stepped to the mutuel window and uttered three lucrative words: Eight-one-three. Dutifully, each slapped down two dollars.

A little more than two minutes later, each one glided to the payout window in ecstasy and collected $2,719.80.

For four unidentified, star-struck punters, the triactor system of wagering — introduced at Sandown for the first time Saturday — paid off big.

Another fortunate bettor collected half the total on a $1 wheel.

"We weren't expecting that big a payoff," admitted racing executive Jim Keeling Jr. He looked a little shellshocked.

Still, by official count, 2,205 harness buffs trooped through the turnstiles, the highest opening-day attendance figure in the three-year history of the meet.

They bet $155,562, shy of the track record $164,665 set Sept. 8, 1979 but still one of the oval's biggest handles.

Keeling, general manager of Cloverdale Raceway, said the record triactor payout on the mainland is almost $11,000.

"We wanted to introduce the triactor here because it's immensely popular in Cloverdale. The fans really seem to go for it."

Habitant Anik, driven by Miles Armstrong, was the eight-horse and paid $48 for its first-place finish from the difficult post. No. 1 was Baron Lea A, piloted by Dave Jungquist, and No. 3, turning in her best performance in her last six outings, was Matsqui Miss, guided by Hans Ericsson.

Beauchemin nabs lead

Bob Beauchemin fired a five-under-par 62 Saturday to grab the first round lead in the annual Cedar Hill Open Golf Tournament.

The southpaw tour pro from Glen Meadows made only one bogey as he finished with a one-stroke lead over defending champion and fellow tour pro Jim Rutledge of Uplands.

Keith Westover of Vancouver Marine Drive also shot 63 to take the lead in the field of nearly 200 amateurs while Ed Tougas of Mission was third-low pro with 64.

Tied at 65 were tour pros Bob Cox of Vancouver and Dave Barr of Kelowna and amateurs Dave Donaldson of Gorge Vale ad Paul Beauchamp, also of Vancouver Marine Drive.

The final round of the 36-hole, $10,000 test starts at 6:30 a.m. today with the same draw. The only change is that there will be two feature foursomes. Tom Whittle, a Vancouver pro who shot 67, Rick Gibson, a Vancouver Marine Drive member who carded 66, Cox and Gorge Vale assistant Jim Cook who also shot 66, will tee off at 1:52 p.m. while Barr, Tougas, Rutledge and Beauchemin will tee off at 2 p.m.

The opening round was played in ideal conditions.

Beauchemin, who tied for second with tour pro and clubmate John Morgan last year, obviously enjoyed the situation as he toured the front nine in three-under-par 29 and was three under par for the first eight holes of the back nine.

He picked up five of his birdies on the par fours but his bogey came on the longest par four. Beauchemin birdied the 328-yard third hole, the 350-yard seventh hole, the 370-yard 11th hole, the 246-yard 14th, the 336-yard 16th and the 277-yard 18. He also birdied the 183-yard fourth while his bogey came on the 426-yard 17th.

Beauchemin there wasn't any particular part of his game that shone.

"I played pretty solid," he said. "My only long putt was a 20-footer on the 11th."

On 17 Beauchemin said he made a bad tee shot, missed the green with his second shot, chipped to within five feet of the pin but then missed the putt.

Rutledge, recently returned from playing a mini tour in Texas, also shot three-under-par 29 on the front nine but he took two bogeys on the back nine.

Island Open finalist Dave Mick of Royal Colwood shot 67, Morgan carded a 70 and Bill Wakeham of Cowichan shot 69.

Course record-holder Terry Wiens of Vancouver Langara failed to turn in a card. Wiens set the record of 59 in the Metro-Toyota tournament last fall. Rutledge has the unofficial record with a 58 in a pratise round Thursday.

Keough equals Catfish mark

Matt Keough tied an Oakland club record for most innings pitched by a starter and Jeff Newman and Mickey Klutts knocked in 14th-inning runs to lead the A's to a 4-2 victory over Toronto Blue Jays in American League baseball Saturday.

Keough, 5-3, went the distance for the seventh time this season, scattering five hits, striking out eight and walking five. His 14-inning stint tied an A's record set by Catfish Hunter in 1972.

Dave Stieb pitched 12 innings for Toronto before giving way to Joey McLaughlin at the start of the 13th. McLaughlin, 1-2, set the side down in order in the 13th but ran into trouble the next inning.

With one out, Dave McKay hit an infield single and took second on an error by second baseman Domaso Garcia. One out later, Dwayne Murphy was intentionally walked but Newman came through with a run-scoring single and Klutz followed with a double.

The Blue Jays tied the score at 2-2 with a run in the ninth inning on Roy Howell's two-out RBI triple.

In other AL games, Larry Hisle drove in three runs with a pair of homers as Milwaukee Brewers outscored Minnesota Twins 14-11 in a rain-delayed game.

Miguel Dilone lined a run-scoring single with two out in the 10th inning to give Cleveland Indians a 4-3 victory over Boston Red Sox.

Bob Watson and Reggie Jackson drove home third-inning runs to back the four-hit pitching of Tom Underwood as New York Yankees defeated Texas Rangers 3-0.

In the National League, Ellis Valentine drove in three runs, including two with a seventh-inning double that capped a six-run Montreal rally, as the Expos won their fifth straight game with a 9-6 triumph over Cincinnati Reds.

Darrell Evans belted a grand slam homer in the fifth inning and Vida Blue and two relievers combined on an eight-hitter as San Francisco Giants downed St.Louis Cardinals 4-2.

Kirby's, Czechs win

Vancouver Kirby's and Ruzomberok of Czechoslovakia were victorious in senior women's basketball exhibitions at McKinnon Gym Saturday.

Joanne Sargent scored 16 points as Kirby's trimmed Vancouver Island All-Stars 60-42 while the Czechs defeated another all-star team from Seattle 75-60.

Cindy Smith's 14 points was the best the Island team could manage against Kirby's.

Merchants in sawoff

Victoria Merchants and Vancouver TOS struggled to a 4-4 tie at Lambrick Park Saturday in a Pacific Junior Baseball League game cut short by darkness.

Merchants got their first run in the third inning when Adrian Holland walked and scored on Paul Hrach's single. They picked up another in the fourth when Craig Gillespie singled, stole second and third, then scored on Gary White's sacrifice fly.

In the sixth inning, Mike Bull doubled in Gillespie and White scored on a sacrifice fly by Don Towner.

Two-shot lead for Lietzke

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke managed a solid, two-under-par 68 and retained a two-shot lead Saturday after two rounds of the rain-delayed $300,000 Colonial National invitational golf tournament.

"I predict, that I will win by 15 strokes," Lietzke said, looking ahead to the double-round, 36-hole wind-up today and with tongue firmly planted in cheek. "Watson can't play a lick, Ben Crenshaw can't play a lick.

"That's the kind of thing you want to hear, isn't it? A little controversy?"

Under a new formula for the final groupings, Lietzke will be playing in the same threesome with those two major challengers in the final two rounds today.

"I'm glad to see the change (in the pairings formula)," said Watson, who is three strokes off the pace and chasing the biggest prize the game has ever offered, $254,000. "Having the leaders together ought to make it more exciting."

Lietzke had a 36-hole total of 131, nine shots under par for two trips over the storied Colonial Country Club course, still wet from heavy rains that washed out Thursday's play.

Crenshaw, a former champion here, birdied the last hole from 18 feet for a 66 and was second at 133.

Watson, the game's outstanding player, had a 68 that put him at 134, only three back.

Crenshaw, who has been working with Hall of Famer Byron Nelson, Watson's long-time mentor, said his game "is getting better."

Watson, winner of his five tournaments this year, including his last three starts, said the pinched nerve in his neck that had troubled him earlier in the week "didn't bother me a bit.

"I think I'm in good shape and ready to go."

Asked if he thought he may tire over the 36-hole finish, Watson grinned and replied: "How can you get tired with $254,000 at stake?"

Only he can claim that big pile. Most of it, $200,000, is a special bonus called the Texas Bonanza, which has been set up for any player able to sweep the Byron Nelson tournament, which Watson won last week, and the Colonial. The first prize in this tournament is $54,000.

Lietzke didn't miss a green in the solid effort that followed his course-record-matching 63 in the opening round.

His only bogey for the day came on a three-putt on the third hole. He got two of his birdies on putts in the 12-15 foot range and nailed the other after a massive drive, measured at 332 yards, enabled him to reach the 11th hole, a par-5, in two.

Bradley controls LPGA tourney

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) - Pat Bradley, a perennial contender, shot a three-under par 70 Saturday to grab a commanding four-stroke lead over Laura Baugh-Dent after two rounds of a $125,000 LPGA golf tournament at the Upper Montclair Country Club.

Nancy Lopez-Melton, the two-time defending champion, followed her opening round 70 with an incredible 10-over par 83, dropping 14 strokes behind the pace-setting Bradley. Lopez-Melton's previous worst round in her two-plus years as a pro was an 81.

Sandra Post, the 30-year-old Oakville, Ont., tour veteran, matched her opening-round 73 for a 146 and was seven strokes off the leader.

Bradley, 29, a six-year tour veteran, has a two-round total of seven-under 139.

Baugh-Dent, the first-round co-leader after firing a sizzling five-under 68 on Friday, slipped to a 75, avoiding a five-way tie for second place with a 30-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

"Did you ever have five birdies and still finish two-over?" Baugh-Dent sighed.

Tied for third place at two-under par 144 after 36 holes were Lori Nelson, Amelia Rorer, Carolyn Hill, Beth Daniel and Debbie Massey.

Bradley won three times in 1978 and finished second six times last year. Thus far in 1980, she ranks 11th on the money list with $42,504.

Susie McAllister, who shared the first round lead with Baugh-Dent, ballooned to a 78 and fell seven shots off the lead.

Riders sign quarterback

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Roughriders of the Canadian Football League have signed quarterback Steve Grant of Washington State University, the team announced Saturday.

The Roughriders' other top imported signal-calling prospect, Jordan Case of North Texas State University, has agreed to terms and will sign his contract next week, said Richard Getz, the team's public relations officer.

The Roughriders will have at least five quarterbacks in training camp, including last year's starter, Condredge Holloway.

Diving ace pulled from pool

TORONTO (CP) — Linda Cuthbert, a member of Canada's diving team, had to be rescued from the Etobicoke Olympium pool Saturday night after being knocked unconscious when she struck her head on a diving board.

Cuthbert, 24, was to remain in hospital overnight Saturday for observation.

Competing in the final of the three-metre springboard event, the Toronto diver hit the back of her head on the board while attempting a reverse somersault in the seventh round of competition. The impact knocked her out and she had to be pulled from the pool.

CALGARY (CP) — A new three-year agreement between the Canadian Football League and the CFL Players' Association, including a free-agent arrangement similar to major league baseball, was announced Saturday.

Under the agreement minimum salaries for first, second and third-year players will be $16,000, $19,000 and $22,000, respectively, during the 1980 and 1981 seasons, rising to $18,000, $22,000 and $24,000 for the 1982 and 1983 campaigns.

George Reed, president of the players' association, told a news conference that pay for players in training camps will be $325 weekly this year, up $60. The weekly training-camp pay will increase to $340 in 1981 and $355 in 1982.

In 1981, a player who plays out his option and moves to a new team for a pay raise of more than 15 per cent will still be subject to the compensation arrangement. In 1982, the same conditions would apply to all players except veterans who have played at least four seasons.

In 1983, the compensation clause is eliminated, setting the stage for a bidding war for free agents in the CFL.

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Canadian Debbie Brill shattered the meet record Saturday night when she won the women's high jump with a leap of 1.93 metres at the 39th California Relays track meet.

The veteran international competitor from Aldergrove was a clear 7.62 centimetres over the previous meet mark set by American Joni Huntley in 1975. Second-place Disa Gisladottir of Iceland recorded a height of 1.80 metres.

LONDON (AP) — Britain's rifle and pistol marksmen voted Saturday to boycott the Moscow Olympics.

The National Small Bore Rifle Association's decision means the marksmen will join equestrian, field hockey and yachting competitors in boycotting the Games.

The British Olympic Association has voted to go to Moscow, but individual sports are free to make their own decisions.

A team of 10 marksmen was to go to the Olympics.

Meanwhile, a clear majority of the British public still believes the country's athletes should take part in the Games, an opinion poll published in The Observer shows.

The poll says 61 per cent are in favor of British participation, with 33 per cent against.

BERN (AP) — Switzerland's federal gymnastic federation joined the equestrian and shooting federations in deciding Saturday to boycott the Moscow Summer Olympics, while the Swiss rowing federation voted in favor of attending the Games.

Several more federations have yet to announce their stand on the issue following the Swiss Olympic Committee's narrow vote a week ago recommending participation but leaving the final decision up to each of the affiliated federations.

Welsh underdogs stun England

WREXHAM, Wales (AP) — Wales shocked England 4-1 Saturday in the opening match of the British international soccer championship.

It was Wales's first home win over England in 25 years.

Paul Mariner shot England into the lead after 15 minutes, but Wales hit back through Mickey Thomas in the 20th minute and Ian Walsh got the winner in the 31st. Leighton James (60th) and Phil Thompson (own goal, 66th) completed the upset before a crowd of 24,236.

England had started the match as the firm favorite despite being severely depleted by injuries and withdrawals. It had scored seven straight wins this season, including an impressive 3-1 victory over World Cup holder Argentina on Tuesday night.

England played without Kevin Keegan, Tony Woodcock, Ray Wilkins, Laurie Cunningham and all the Nottingham Forest players, except Larry Lloyd. Yet the outcome was still a shocker.

The victory was a personal triumph for Mike England, managing the Welsh national team for the first time.

The defeat was England's biggest in 16 years and the biggest ever against Wales, which had previously won only 12 of the 92 meetings between the two teams.

England showed six changes from the side that had beaten Argentina so convincingly in midweek and looked hesitant in defence and weak in midfield.

"That result won't do us any harm," said Greenwood. "It's better to have it now than in Italy."

The defeat was only England's third since Greenwood took over as manager in August, 1977.

"Wales played brilliantly and caught us out in the first half," admitted Greenwood, whose team is the favorite to win the European championship in Italy next month.

With DOROTHY FRASER

Sensational summer sheers . . .

Lovely to look at . . . delightful to wear . . . These are the new summer sheers from Albert Nipon we saw at Gibson's last Monday! . . . Mostly they're dark . . . and if there's anything more sensational than a dark sheer on a hot summer day when you're surrounded by palid pastels . . . we've yet to see it! Looks twice as cool . . . twice as elegant as anything else in sight! . . . A darling navy cotton/polyester sheer with tiny diamond-shaped dots has short sleeves with the new slightly-gathered French shoulder . . . little round lace collar and cuffs . . . buttons right down the front . . . Same color sheer fabric is used for a long-sleeved dress with fitted pleated bodice and soft tie neck . . . this one buttoning down the back with fly closing . . . In brown there's a two-piece dress in pure cotton sheer with tufted dots, full skirt, tiny new over-the-shoulder sleeves and ecru lace collar . . . A sunburst of tiny tucks on the bodice and a tucked peplum . . . Fourth . . . and by no means least . . . a two-piece indelible blue cotton sheer with tucks down one side of the top . . . tie belt . . . elbow-length sleeves with that pretty French shoulder . . . and double ruching frill around the neck and sleeves . . . There's something particularly beguiling about this . . . and we think you'll like the old-new look of lace collars on two of the others! . . . Gibsons, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Canadian shoes with an Italian accent . . .

John Francis shoes . . . formerly made only in Italy . . . are now being manufactured in Canada . . . and right beautifully, too! . . . They're a new line which Munday's will be carrying from now on, and the first two patterns have just arrived . . . One, called "Bella" . . . is a camel slide with pleated vamp, priced at $58 . . . The other is "Debbie" . . . a nice white or camel sandal with hand-woven stripping vamp and instep strap, at $60 . . . These John Francis shoes are really made with loving care! . . . Made on imported poly bottoms, uppers are all leather, lined with kid . . . and suede lining on the padded insole . . . Really lovely shoes! . . . This week we saw some new d'Antonelli shoes . . . all with the lower heel now back in style . . . A young looking pump on the new modern low heel is made out of a single piece of leather, without seams except in back . . . Here's a graceful shoe that hugs the foot to perfection . . . In beige, red or navy kid, and black patent . . . Sizes up to 12 in the latter, tagged at $70 . . . A young sandal in camel calf with a lower stack heel has closed back, instep strap and open toe with vamp cutouts . . . Sizes to 12, $80 . . . A very cute shoe with open sides and T-strap on a semi-wedge with a little shaped wooden heel . . . has cutouts on the vamp . . . comes in beige or gooseberry (very pale green) kid . . . $82 . . . An unusual shoe on a low heel has an elasticized instep strap and little scalloped trim around the vamp . . . Silver nougat or black patent . . . $72 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

The wherewithal for "painting with thread" . . .

Today we're going to talk about threads for stitching . . . creating "paintings" with thread instead of pigments . . . for the benefit of those of you who don't know about the amazing selection of threads carried by Hallmark Gift Shop . . . Threads from Germany, France, England, Denmark, Japan and the U.S.A. . . . for the stitcher who wants something different in her/his embroidery . . . At Hallmark you'll find the complete DMC line (over 300 colors) of 6-strand embroidery cotton . . . Also this store is the ONLY place in B.C. where you can purchase soft, washable matte cotton so great for working on heavier fabrics such as blue jeans . . . There are two weights of Perle cotton, a shiny twisted thread for highlighting wool . . . Soft velour, metallic, carded polyester and raffia threads . . . Danish flower threads (muted shades of stranded cotton) . . . Pure linen thread . . . Shiny viscose from Germany called Marlitt, Bella Donna and Catara . . . and two brands of Persian wool which is also available in strands . . . If you just want texture, get a "Goody Bag" containing about 50 yards of a variety of threads in monochromatic colors . . . It only costs $1.25 . . . and for $1.50 you can get the makings of an "Earlobe" pillow . . . a bit of Lorraine Calvert-created nonsense that's fun to make . . . And moving from the ridiculous to the sublime . . . beautiful boxes, trays and hand mirrors with insertions for needlework are new at . . . Hallmark Gift Shop, 2865A Foul Bay Road, 592-3545.

Shades make all the difference! . . .

New lampshades can do absolute wonders for your lamps . . . add a new dimension to your decor . . . This fact was brought home to us recently when a pair of crystal lamps we own began to look tacky . . . and we took them to Lighting Exclusive to be fitted for new shades . . . Honest, they now look better than the day we first acquired them! . . . We tell you this as a preamble to announcing that Beston's Lighting Exclusive have simply beautiful lampshades in every size . . . all the way from little chandelier shades to great big ones meant to add panache to a large trilight lamp! . . . Various shapes and materials, too . . . but all in excellent taste . . . none of those overly-fancy things you sometimes see! . . . We noticed linen and pleated shades which look so right on ceramic lamps . . . Burlaps gorgeous on wood bases . . . Silk shades exquisite for crystal or fine porcelain lamps . . . and cane shades which are very versatile . . . In any case, those knowledgeable people at Beston's will help you decide on just what will do the most for lamps you already own . . . or make yourself from vases and such . . . They have all the things you need, too, for putting a lamp together and will either do it for you or show you how to do it yourself! . . . Brand new at Beston's are several stunning Mandarin tables . . . a "sofa" table . . . hardwoods in a classic Oriental design with bevelled glass top . . . About 4 feet long and 15 inches wide . . . for which you'd find a variety of uses . . . Padded stools to match . . . and coffee and end tables in oak with bevelled glass . . . Very different and exclusive . . . Beston's Lighting Exclusive, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-0332.

Charming new fashions in the Mirror Room . . .

Along with the rest of the Bay, the Mirror Room has been spruced up and is a nicer place than ever to shop in! . . . We saw all kinds of newly-arrived goodies this week . . . New separates by Wilson . . . polyester and rayon with a linen look in jackets, pants and skirts . . . these latter in two different styles . . . one a plain wrap with pockets on either side . . . and the other a very interesting skirt that can be worn two ways . . . Wrap it left to right and you've got narrow front pleats which flare prettily as you walk . . . or right to left for a plain wrap . . . Loops to insert a smart belt . . . This costs $80, and the other skirt and pants are $70 . . . Jacket is $130 . . . And all pieces come in either white or black so you can see the possibilities in mixing! . . . We also saw new Albert Nipon dresses in several smart styles . . . One a dressy white jacket dress with black diamond shaped "polka dots" . . . spaghetti straps on dress . . . sheer loose jacket with V neck, wide sleeves and little covered buttons . . . Another is a navy and white silk print . . . white bumblebees with red antennae on a navy ground . . . Cap sleeves, full rippling skirt and little ruched rosette at the neckline . . . Some elegant short dresses that would be lovely for summer weddings . . . especially the hyacinth blue sheer with long sleeves, deep front slit gracefully folded over . . . and separate taffeta slip you could wear by itself for discoing . . . The Bay Mirror Room, 385-1311, local 280.

Fine luggage at terrific bargains! . . .

We always feel we've never enough hands when we're travelling . . . so when our eyes lit on a new gadget at McMartin's this week . . . a gadget that enables one to grasp two pieces of luggage or whatever with one hand . . . thus freeing the other hand for other duties . . . we glommed on to it in a hurry! . . . It's called a "Lug Bug" luggage handler . . . Comes in either black or brown, weighs only 5 ounces and is small enough to stow into pocket or handbag . . . Equally useful for toting radios, shopping bags, musical instruments, etc. . . . Great aid for apartment dwellers who have keys and doors to cope with! . . . Only $9 and worth its weight in gold! . . . We discovered that McMartin's have a simply terrific clearance sale now going on . . . Oddments of fine luggage they're clearing out at half price . . . There's quite a range of excellent stock still to be had . . . real nice pieces like the $170 suit pack which has had its price tag slashed to $70! . . . We just couldn't believe our eyes when we saw the array of expensive luggage and tote bags going for as cheaply as the common or garden variety! . . . Here's an unparalleled opportunity to acquire those extra pieces of luggage to speed you on your travels! . . . And handbags! . . . Every handbag in the store, including the very latest arrivals, is being sold at 15% off the regular price . . . Leathers, vinyls, fabrics . . . in every style you could possibly want . . . Don't miss seeing them at . . . McMartin's Leather Goods, 1005 Douglas St., 384-6613.

A really smashing shop! . . .

One doesn't usually think about a re-sale clothing store as being "smashing" . . . something special that should be visited frequently and enjoyed . . . but "Twice Around" Fashions is exactly that! . . . We'll swear it's the busiest shop in town . . . and not just because people want to buy good clothes cheaply, either . . . The truth is, "Twice Around" has become a gathering place where friends meet . . . Where women who love good clothes latch on to things they haven't been able to find anywhere else in town . . . at prices so low they're almost laughable . . . and consign for re-sale their own clothes which for some reason or other they're no longer wearing . . . Be warned, though . . . Mrs. Empey . . . owner of this fascinating shop . . . accepts only the "cream of the crop" on consignment, so it's no use taking her anything that isn't absolutely immaculate and in pristine condition as well as in current style! . . . And as a corollary of this, of course, the things you buy there are clothes you can be proud of wearing without having had to lay out a king's ransom! . . . Many of the clothes we looked at last week were brand new . . . had never been worn even once! . . . Like the Pierre Cardin velour suit in periwinkle blue with camel trim . . . Someone had paid $155 for it but at "Twice Around" it was tagged at a mere $53.49! . . . "Twice Around" Fashions, 1029 Cook St., 383-3123.

An unsung Tacoma heroine, too

CHECKMATE

By RAY KERR
Colonist chess writer

The just-concluded Vancouver Island Open in Hub City was no exception as 32 players took part and more than $400 in prize money was distributed.

As a crowning touch, a Nanaimo resident won the over-all championship and also qualified for the B.C. Closed tournament slated for Vancouver in June.

Harold Brown, who actually began his chess career in Victoria but of late has been spearheading chess activities in Nanaimo, took the championship over Vancouver's Ian Skulsky on tiebreak.

Both finished the five-day tournament with excellent 4½-½ scores.

Brown scored a somewhat-surprising victory over Reeve while Skulsky polished off Moore, even though he had to play black.

If you wanted your unsung heroine of the tournament, on the other hand, it would have to be Tacoma's 15-year-old girl star Alexey Rudolph.

She managed a draw with Allan Hill, one of B.C.'s top players for a number of years, and also with Gerry Vigier, another Lower Mainland veteran now living in Prince George.

Remembering that Alexey not so long ago was considered fortunate if she drew with a B Class player, her latest accomplishments have to be termed encouraging to say the least.

In other categories, Ross Cameron had a fine tournament and captured A Class honors with an excellent 4-1 showing.

It was also interesting that Pete Cronin of Salt Spring Island won D Class honors with 2-3.

And it's definitely worth noting that Skulsky's rating was only 1755 (B Class) before the tournament, so he should go up considerably, particularly as he also drew against Reeve.

Two Victorians also did well in B Class—Kent Monro and Leonard Molden both scored 3-2.

Monro also had the distinction of tangling with tournament winner Brown, who together with Skulsky qualified for the B.C. Closed.

Brown played well with the white pieces and this important encounter is our Game of the Week.

Stamp Packet

By LESLIE DREW
Colonist staff

Everyone knows that too many countries have been issuing too many stamps each year, but it has taken the German magazine Michel Rundschau to come up with the latest statistics on just how serious the proliferation has been on a world-wide scale.

In 1977 it looked as though there might be some improvement. That year, according to the magazine, the number of individual stamps and the number of miniature sheets issued dropped slightly, as did their total value. From about 7,000 stamps and 564 miniature sheets in 1975, the output declined in 1977 to 6,847 stamps and 562 miniature sheets.

But the hopes of many collectors and commentators that this might be a trend-setter were dashed recently with the figures for 1978—7,235 stamps, 793 miniature sheets and a higher total value than in any of the previous three years. Compared with 1977, the number of stamps issued went up 5.5 per cent, and worse, the number of miniature sheets increased 41 per cent.

The leaders in stamp issues in the year's clobbering of philately were Comoros with 158, North Korea with 178 (averaging a new stamp almost every second day), the Soviet Union with 127, Paraguay, Hungary, Vietnam, the German Democratic Republic, the People's Republic of China, Guinea-Bissau, Central African Empire, Cuba, Tonga, Ghana and Bulgaria. Equatorial Guinea, a territory that had taken first place many times in the past, was not included in the Michel lists because of uncertainty over the status of its stamps and doubts as to their postal validity.

Canada, with 34 stamps and one souvenir sheet that year, looked ultra-conservative in its issuing policy compared with the massive outpourings of countries at the top of the list. Even so, there were a lot of highly-respected issuers further down the line.

Last year and this year? We'll have to wait for the Michel statisticians. This year at least the Moscow Olympic Games dropouts may reduce the superabundance of those commemorative issues.

HAVING SAID ALL that, I should mention that Australia Post on May 7 issued a se-tenant strip of five 22-cent stamps illustrating Australian folklore, specifically the ballad by Banjo Paterson known around the world as Waltzing Matilda, and a delightful production it is. The stamps and a souvenir pack will be on sale at philatelic sales centres in Australia for a year, provided stocks last. Tomorrow Australia issues a 22-cent stamp for the opening of the High Court of Australia building in Canberra, and on May 21 come five Australian Antarctic Territory definitives in the series on ships that have made history in the Antarctic.

IT'S NOT OF earth-shaking importance, but is anyone thinking what a "yes" vote in Tuesday's Quebec referendum might do to Canadian stamps?

ann landers

TIRED of all those CUTE initials AL

Dear Ann Landers: The growing tendency to call everything by initials is extremely irritating. I've discussed this with others and find that I am not alone.

It wasn't so bad when there were just a few, such as the CIO, the AFL, the FBI and the CIA. Now we have the IRS, the ERA, the IUD, the NAACP, HEW, MIT, ORT and DNA.

Where I work, quarterly meetings are mandatory. We must sit and listen for an hour and a half to talk like this: "The IAM met with the TQA and discussed the YTD. We must now check back with the IRA and do something about the LTC." I become thoroughly confused trying to sort out the meaning of the initials.

What's more, I feel like a fool because I don't know what's going on. Will you please tell those double-dome intellectuals to call things by their names and not assume that because THEY know what all the initials mean, everyone else does? — Abbreviated Into Oblivion In Kalamazoo

Dear Kal.: IOU warm thanks for writing such an OK letter. I am printing it PDQ.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been going with Bill, off and on, for four years. Periodically he says he wants to date someone else, and I say, "Fine," but he always comes back to me and announces that no one suits him as well as I. Now he has decided we should get married, but his proposal was the oddest one I've ever heard of. What do you think of it?

Bill wants me to sign an agreement stating that if our marriage doesn't work and we decide to be divorced there will be no settlement and no alimony. Nothing would be "ours." Everything would be either his or mine, depending on who paid for it.

Apart from the nuisance of trying to keep track of who owns what, it sounds like an ice-cold arrangement. In my book marriage means for life. Do you get the impression that Bill is approaching marriage as something of a try-out? Also, his emphasis on material things bothers me. Is this the trend these days? Am I old-fashioned? Please sift this one through your cranium and let me know what you come up with. —Uncertain In Brandon, Manitoba

Dear Un: For many people who marry today, it does not mean a promise "to love and to cherish, from this day forward, in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer, 'til death do us part." It means "until I get tired of you," or "until something more appealing comes along."

You have every right to be leery of Bill. A man who is so anxious about protecting his worldly goods "in case things don't work out" has a dangerously negative attitude and shows very little faith in your integrity. If I were you, I'd give him the deep six.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I play bridge with a couple who have some annoying speech habits. "Joe" begins every sentence with, "I'm going to tell you something." "Ellen" ends every sentence with, "Get what I mean?"

We feel as if they are talking down to us. Should we let them know how we feel? — Bristling In N.J.

Dear N.J.: Joe and Ellen, like so many others, are victims of hackneyed speech habits. Don't take them literally. Just tune out the irritants and give the cards an extra shuffle.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me out of this mess. I had the flu and begged my boyfriend Bob (age 17) to take my cousin Belle to a big party he had been looking forward to. (Belle is loud, fat and never had many dates.)

Well, Bob and Belle got along just great. Now he is seeing her, and I'm out in the cold. Please tell me how to get him back. — A Big-Hearted Dummy

Dear Dum: If Cuz was able to latch on to Bob so easily, your relationship wasn't as solid as you thought. Leave him be and fish in other waters. He might swim back one of these days, but don't put any nets out.

Women do it their way in law

But struggle for jobs is still tough going

TORONTO (CP) — The field of law practice is one of many bastions stormed by job-seeking women during the last decade. And if it hasn't been conquered, women can at least begin to claim substantial gains.

Women have ventured into this rewarding and demanding field with a certain style of their own, and according to a number of lawyers, are avoiding the "three-piece-suit mentality" of many of their male colleagues.

But women teaching law and practising criminal law are so still so rare they are conspicuous in the profession.

About one-third of students in law school are women, a development that has occurred only during the last decade.

At the same time, however, the struggle for jobs by bar admission students is tougher than ever, especially for women.

Andrew Ranachan, Osgoode Hall's admissions officer, says firms often use the fact they've hired a woman to excuse them from the need for hiring more.

But women lawyers are achievers. Perhaps even over-achievers, says criminal lawyer Diane Martin, 35, who established a practice two years ago with two other women.

"Women who have gone into law have primarily been dreadful over-achievers," she says.

"Even when I went into law the percentage of women was still really low."

"You were tackling a male profession as a minority, and you felt you had to do it well for yourself. And for other women."

She said she is concerned that women "don't turn into replicas of the boring, driven men we know."

"A lot of lawyers are really boring."

Priscilla Pratt, 29, shares Bay Street office space with two male colleagues and has what she calls a volume practice.

She says she yearns to stop racing from courtroom to courthouse, lugging a briefcase filled with 10 or more cases, and begin concentrating on the quality of law and actually argue law.

But getting business is not always easy.

"With criminal clientele, it's a little difficult. It's word of mouth, largely," she says.

Referrals come from clients, many who often sit around in jail talking about their lawyers, and from senior counsel.

"I'm aware there's not many women doing this. I do feel the pressure to be up on my work."

But it is that one great case, that one notorious murder, that criminal lawyers dream of to launch their careers.

"A good solid win would do us a lot of good. (But) I've also had clients I've done very well for. They know me, they know I'm competent. Yet when they're charged with something very serious, like murder, they want a man."

She says it is the fact women have babies which sets them apart from their male colleagues.

It makes men think women lawyers will not practise on a permanent basis. Women are usually in their 30s by the time their careers are really rolling, and that's the time to make a decision about a family as well.

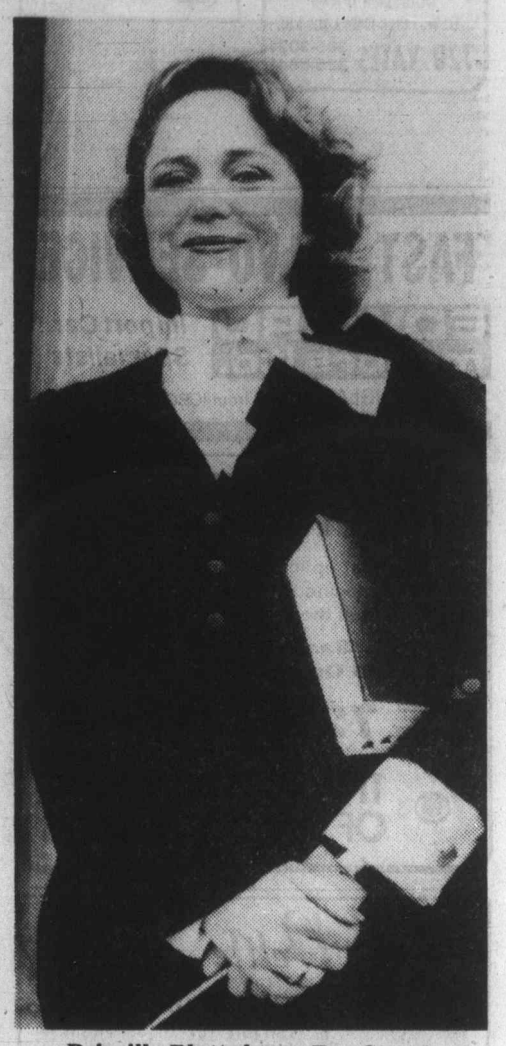
Stuart Thom, a lawyer with Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt and a bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada, says it's yet to be proved whether women will show the same "adhesion and persistence" to their careers as men.

"I don't think they have been practising a sufficient length of time in Ontario to know what proportion of them will make law a lifetime career. Most men who start a career continue it until they die or retire from it."

But his reservations seem unwarranted in the case of lawyers such as Maureen Sabia, 39, daughter of Laura Sabia, one of Canada's leading feminists.

Miss Sabia earns between $50,000 and $60,000 a year as a corporate and commercial lawyer for Canadian Pacific.

"I like the corridors of power. Power is my thing. I seek it. I'm not embarrassed to admit that."



Priscilla Platt shares Bay Street, Toronto, practice with two men

Goodbye work, hello doing nothing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marilyn Webber liked her job as a bank loan officer but she'd been working for 15 years and wanted a change.

"Mostly I was fed up with getting up every day and going to work."

"It's terrific," she says. "I think everybody should do it."

"I'm doing what I want to do, when I want to do it, and I don't feel guilty about it because I've worked for it."

Webber is not alone in her extended vacation. Despite rising unemployment and the economic crunch, others, from corporate executives to school teachers are voluntarily saying goodbye to work—at least temporarily.

Norm Leach had been an administrator for CP Air for 13 years when his wife went back to work full time. Three days later he applied for a leave of absence.

"If I was ever going to take time off to look at my life, this was the time," he said.

Travel seems to be a big lure for the temporarily retired. Leach spent several weeks in China last winter while Webber went to England and France. But the break has meant more than just a chance to flit around the globe—it's given them time to think about what they want and to plan for the future.

Leach has already returned work part-time with a consulting firm but Webber is still drifting, "I have started looking for jobs, but I haven't really found anything that I'm really qualified to do."

Here's why a Birks Diamond will cost you less.

- Birks buyers are professional gemologists who travel to world markets, buying at the source in extremely large quantities.
- We manufacture diamond rings in our own factory, another cost saving we pass on to the customer.
- Buying and selling more diamonds than anyone else in Canada means that our cost is less—and so is yours!
- Some stores won't give you diamond details such as carat weight. Birks tells you everything—accurately.
- Sometimes, a "40% off" diamond price in another store will actually be higher than the regular Birks price—for the same diamond!

Please shop around and compare.
If you do, we know you'll come back to Birks—happily.

Portrait of a fat lipid

Your Good Health
By PAUL G. DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is soybean oil saturated or unsaturated? Explain "saturated." I no comprendez. —B.D.

Fats are lipid molecules. They have central carbon atoms to which hydrogen atoms are attached. With a Tinker Toys set you can make one. One part should be a ball with four holes. Stick a rod into each hole. The ball is carbon, the rods hydrogen. There's your lipid.

If a carbon atom has those holes occupied it's a "saturated" fat and if not, it's unsaturated. These saturated fats are blamed for hardening of the arteries. Animal fats are saturated.

Soybean and cottonseed oils are not saturated. They are best for diets low in saturated fats.

Note to chemists: This is a simplification. I'm not submitting this for Nobel Prize consideration, so give me a little leeway.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I wonder if you could explain the cause and cure for a nagging pain in my side just below the waist? It occurs when I run or walk briskly for three or four blocks or more. When I was a child my mother referred to this as a "side stitch." Her cure was to bend forward and down as far as possible without bending the knees and spit on the right toe. My mother's cure worked, but now at age 35 and doing most of my exercise in a more metropolitan setting I feel a little tacky using her cure. Can you suggest an alternative? —C.K.

Your symptoms suggest "runner's stitch." I didn't make that up.

Some authorities suggest that the pain in the side that comes with running or brisk walking is from a cramping in the diaphragm. That's the sheet-like internal muscle that separates the abdomen from the chest cavity. If your mother's cure works it is safe to use. I must admit it would raise a few eyebrows in the midst of lunch-hour traffic.

You might also try to emphasize diaphragmatic breathing. As you inhale, your stomach should stick out a bit, not in. You just have to experiment with that. It is helpful to exhale against resistance. One way to do this is to keep your lips pursed while forcing out the breath. For some, increasing the rate of breathing temporarily helps ease runner's stitch.

Of course, there are other problems to be looked for should your mother's trick (or mine) fail to help. An examination of the spine might be in order, since many side and backaches can be traced to such problems.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have been plagued for six months with condyloma acuminata of the genital area. How is this condition contacted? Do you have any medical insights into this condition? How long does it take to get rid of? Is there any over-the-counter medicine to relieve the pain and burning? —M.K.

To answer your last question, I know of no effective over-the-counter safe treatment for genital warts, which is what that fancy name means.

Reports I've seen indicate that genital warts are sexually transmitted. They can be treated by your doctor with podophyllum, which is carefully applied to the warts and then washed off in three to four hours. It is quite caustic, so care must be taken not to put it on normal surrounding areas. If one application does not work it can be reapplied in a week or two. The warts can subside on their own, but may persist up to two years.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Tell me, please, on average how many hairs are on a human scalp and how many do we lose in a day on average? —Mrs. P.T.

Thanks for adding "on average" or you'd have had me up all night counting. On average, there are about 100,000 hairs on a human scalp. On average, we lose about 100 a day. I don't know who counted.

Infants mimic parent's food pattern

TORONTO (CP) — Your six-month-old infant may already like hot dogs, french fries and Cokes and nutritionists say food patterns for children can be set for life by that age.

Diets, like lifestyles, social values or even music appreciation, are learned behavior. Children are likely to mimic what their parents did, liked, or how they acted or ate.

Traditionally, mothers have been the gate-keepers of children's nutritional well-being. Mom was at home preparing meals and the kids ate what was put before them.

But with today's lifestyle, children are growing up more responsible for their own diets.

With more than half of Canada's women in the work force, children are frequently reponsible for getting their own breakfasts and lunches.

Families spend an average of about 40 per cent of their food dollars away from home and adolescents frequently order their own fast food meals without parental supervision.

So, do children have enough nutrition knowledge to make intelligent food choices?

Obviously a sweet bun and a Coke aren't nutritious fare for breakfast, but a child only realizes this if he's been programmed by his parents.

To date, basic nutrition hasn't been in the foreground of public thought.

"I find that most people ask me nutritional questions that relate to what's on TV talk shows," said Denise Beatty, a public health nutritionist.

"Last year people wanted to know all about hypoglycemia—low blood sugar. Before that it was food additives."

Beverly Musten, another public health nutritionist, said the public is becoming much more interested in what they eat.

"Something must be happening out there. People are concerned, or at least interested in their nutrition."

Nutritionists say to follow Canada's Food Guide to maximize daily nutrient intake and ensure long-term health.

The food guide is a chart suggesting daily intake of a variety of foods from four basic food groups: milk and milk products, meat and alternatives, bread and cereals, fruit and vegetables.

"The food guide isn't enough though," said Ms. Beatty. "You can stay on it and not eat particularly well."

The federal department of health and welfare is urging people to cut back on salt, sugar, fat and alcohol consumption, start using polyunsaturated fats when possible and get some healthy, vigorous exercise to burn off excess calories.

Toronto nutritionist Audrey Belford said that because lifestyles have changed so drastically that the best way to become aware of present eating habits is to keep a written record of food intake for a week.

This will make the careless eater aware of the types and quantity of foods he is swallowing—perhaps stuff he was't really aware of.

Plot set for centre role

By JOHN GOUDAS

Spotted among the newcomers on the newly bloated The Young and the Restless soaper is TV director Richard Benedict's boy Nicholas, a big, rangy, green-eyed youngster appearing as Lorie's book editor, Michael Scott.

Michael appeared just in time to console the weeping Lorie, left in the lurch by husband Lance. At least Lorie had a shoulder to cry on, since no one else offered much consolation.

At the moment, Michael is a handsome blob, around when the plotting turns to down-in-the-dumps Lorie. Yet Michael is slated to become Lorie's new fella, if the lady can ever stop feeling sorry for herself. That means a front-and-centre role for Benedict, perhaps this summer. Before that, fans will note Benedict as a presenter on the June 4 daytime Emmy ceremonies (see Channel Chatter below).

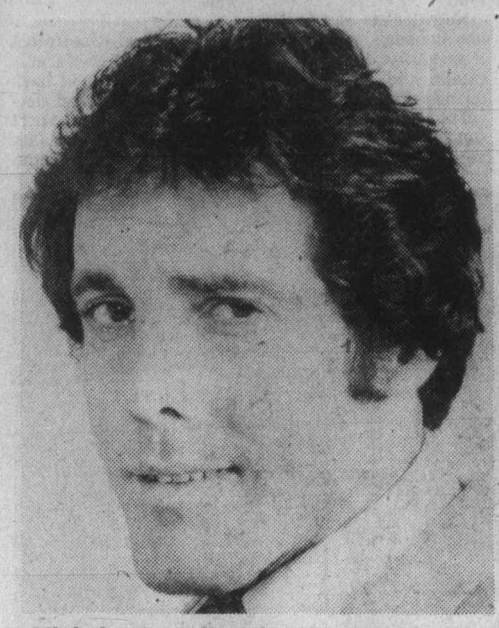
Young Benedict has the credentials—six years as Phil Brent on All My Children, and a learning-the-ropes period doing guest spots on Medical Centre, Hawaii Five-O, and a passel of Universal Studio shows ranging from Adam 12 to Emergency. His father Richard Benedict, a former actor turned director who jumps from action to comedy, practically lives at Universal, so it's only natural that his boy should break into the business there.

But Nicholas is on his own now, good enough to be in the running for best daytime actor last year. It was Dad who suggested an acting career after Nick finished college and duty in the navy. Dad ought to know.

CHANNEL CHATTER: The Seventh Annual Daytime Emmy Awards will be telecast live Wednesday, June 4, 2:30-4 p.m. (Eastern Daylight Saving Time), on NBC.

Here's a score card of the major nominations:

Behind soap opera scenes



Nicholas Benedict of Young and Restless

Outstanding daytime drama series—All My Children . . . ABC
Another World . . . NBC
Guiding Light . . . CBS

Douglass Watson (as Mackenzie Cory) in Another World

Leslie Charleson (Monica Quartermaine) in General Hospital
Kim Hunter (Nola Madison) in The Edge of Night
Judith Light (Karen Wolek) in One Life to Live
Beverlee McKinsey (Iris Bancroft) in Another World
Kathleen Noone (Ellen Shepherd) in All My Children

Warren Burton (Eddie Dorrance) in All My Children
Ron Hale (Roger Coleridge) in Ryan's Hope
Julius LaRosa (Renaldo) in Another World
Shepperd Strudwick (Professor McCauley) in Love of Life

Lois Kibbee (Geraldine Saxon) in The Edge of Night
Elaine Lee (Mildred Trumble) in The Doctors
Valerie Mahaffey (Ashley Bennett) in The Doctors
Louise Shaffer (Rae Woodard) in Ryan's Hope

PLOT PORTENTS: Marlena seems unable to work and play fulltime Mom to baby Donnie on Days of Our Lives, while Doug considers running a casino under Mickey's encouragement.

Leslie is up to her neck in schemes with Jonas and the mysterious Sebastian on The Young and the Restless. Meanwhile, will happiness turn Liz into a pedestrian character? Bet on it.

Dee, veiling her feeling for Brad, takes up a new lifestyle on As the World Turns. However, John continues to pursue her, much to David's dismay.

Joe and Jack have a face-off on Ryan's Hope, while Barry Ryan convinces Delia not to hold a grudge. Also, Faith is heartened by Frank's confidence.

Devon goes to extreme lengths in her attempts to snag Sean and shocks Ellen on All My Children. Erica's enthusiasm for her old job dampens and Daisy dares still another visit to a familiar place.

Melinda's competency test has a surprising outcome on One Life to Live, while Vicky keeps an appointment with a mysterious visitor.

Emily learns some horrifying news on The Edge of Night. Meanwhile, Steve considers taking a job out West and a prowler stalks the Scott home in Oakdale.

Juan de Fuca won with the razzle-dazzle plays Saturday as the Saanich Hornets Peewee Football League held its final games at Glanford Park.

Halfback Paul Juch scored a touchdown on a 25-yard pass and run combination with wide-receiver Dean McMillan, he scored another touchdown on a two-yard plunge and then passed to Gordie Galbaithe for a third touchdown as Juan de Fuca downed Saanich 18-6.

Pat Thomas scored the Saanich touchdown on a 1-yard plunge.

Quarterback Moki Barrett hit wide-receiver Tom Johnson with 65 and 15-yard touchdown passes and kicked a two-point conversion as Victoria beat Gordon Head 14-6 in the other game.

Victoria finishes league play 8-1-0 followed by Juan de Fuca at 5-4-0, Saanich at 3-5-1 and Gordon Head 1-7-1.

Dannys Honey breezes in Daffodil Handicap

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dannys Honey, who ran second in her season debut May 2 only to be disqualified, improved enough Saturday at Exhibition Park to win her first stakes race, the $12,500-added Daffodil Handicap.

Dannys Honey broke from the outside No. 9 position in the earlier allowance race and finished second to favorite Tolita.

She was disqualified to seventh, however, for cutting over too sharply when she took the lead at the clubhouse turn, a manoeuvre that earned jockey Ron Carrasco a three-day suspension.

For the 6½ furlongs Daffodil, Dannys Honey had a change of luck. She drew the No. 1 position, far more suited to her front-running tactics.

The crowd made Tolita, who was going after her third straight season win, the favorite once again. Dannys Honey was second choice in the field of nine which included the stakes-winning mare Arena Pilot from Calgary.

Dannys Honey to the surprise of no one took the lead from the gate. To the surprise of quite a few, Tolita this time failed to fire and was at best a minor factor.

Her margin over Boundary Girl heading into the lane was 1½ lenghts; at the wire she was 2½ lenghts in front of Boundary and Right Chilly who deadheated for second.

Dannys Honey's winning time on the fast track was 1:18 flat. Tolita was fourth and Arena Pilot fifth.

Historic raceway to close

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Officials at Yonkers Raceway said Saturday they are closing the 81-year-old track permanently after parimutuel clerks rejected what the track called its final offer of a $23-a-day wage increase.

Track manager Gerry Lawrence said Local 32E, Building Service Employees Union, had rejected the track's offer, which would amount to a 42-per-cent increase over three years.

"Can you imagine turning down a 42-per-cent increase?" asked Vincent McDonell, lawyer for the track.

Lawrence had warned that if the offer was rejected, he would close the track. On Saturday, he made good on that threat.

Special Tillicum talks

Reports dealing with the impact a proposed expansion of the Tillicum Gardens shopping centre would have on Saanich will be considered by council at a special meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Staff reports from planning, public works, police and fire departments will be considered as well as an independent traffic survey commissioned by the developer, Cal Investments Ltd.

Council voted 5-4 last month to allow enlargement of the planned centre to 495,000 square feet by agreeing to lift a restrictive covenant limiting size of the previously approved 295,000-square-foot centre.

The Capital Region District and Saanich are now embroiled in a legal battle over the proposed extension.

The public will be given an opportunity to express its views on the proposed expansion at the special council meeting.

Carefree holidayers crammed Victoria's Inner Harbor Causeway on Saturday afternoon, eager to take in sights and sounds of Victoria Day weekend festivities, with weather showing fine promise.

Former foreman dies

He was 68.

Caddell was born on June 19, 1911, in Victoria and in his youth was well-known in the city as an outstanding athlete who excelled in a number of sports including rugby, soccer, baseball, basketball and softball.

He began playing rugby at Boys Central School and then made the senior team in his first year at Victoria High School.

He later played one season with the famous Canadian champion Blue Ribbons basketball team from Victoria.

He started his newspaper career as a carrier with the Victoria Times in 1927 and took a full-time job as office boy in 1928.

He then entered a six-year typographical apprenticeship in the composing room and became a journeyman printer on Oct. 14, 1935.

He served with the Canadian army in Holland and Belgium during the Second World War.

He returned to the composing room after the war and was appointed foreman in October of 1962.

Caddell retired five years ago but continued to work on an occasional basis at Victoria Press last summer.

Among his favorite hobbies were chrysanthemum growing and bowling.

He is survived by his wife, Joyce, a brother, Alex, and three daughters, Debbie Caddell and Linda Kuhnert, both of Victoria, and Wendy Benham of Courtenay.

McCall Brothers is in charge of funeral arrangements, which will be announced later.

SALMON FISHING TRIP
Magna Charters Ltd.
(THEY MAY NET A MILLION DOLLAR FISH)
They will enjoy having two skipper-guides aboard our comfortable, 44 foot, tri-cabin cruiser to rig the rods, select the lures, help the inexperienced, net and clean the salmon all ready for the barbeque.
They will enjoy the experience of seeing the electronic fish-finder at work and the thrill of the tug of a Pacific Salmon on the line. If they wish, they can relax in the roomy forward cabin or settle down at the dinette near the warm stove.
There is a lot for their cameras too; an osprey's nest, the Olympic Range, the old light house and the colony of sea-lions on Race Rocks, the new "egg-beater" windmill at Christopher Point and the gorgeous scenery at Whirl Bay and Church Rock. Also, perhaps, a sighting of the harbour seals, the otters that live in the bay or a passing pod of killer whales.
Our trips, early morning and afternoon, last a full four hours.
We are moored at Pedder Bay Marina, close to the best fishing grounds, a pleasant 35-minute run from town.
To the lucky person catching a 20-lb. or over salmon we give a lottery ticket which, if their luck holds, may net them $1 million.

Quebec divided on split impact

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec population is divided over the economic impact of sovereignty-association, says an opinion poll which appeared in three newspapers Saturday.

Forty-two per cent of the 1,020 Quebecers interviewed by telephone thought a Yes victory in Tuesday's referendum would bring about deterioration of economic conditions in the province, while 24 per cent thought the opposite, and 25 per cent believed they would remain the same.

PEOPLE WHO have decided to vote No in the referendum are the most pessimistic about a Yes vote; 73 per cent of them thought economic conditions would deteriorate in Quebec if the Yes side won, while 55 per cent of those voting Yes thought the situation would improve and 33 per cent of them said it would stay the same.

Asked what the economic impact would be for Quebec if it actually realized sovereignty-association, 36 per cent thought economic conditions would remain the same, 31 per cent thought they would deteriorate and 24 per cent thought things would improve.

WOULD THE realization of sovereignty-association contribute to "the development of the French language and culture in Quebec?" One person out of five voting No said it would, while three-quarters of those voting Yes said it would.

The poll was conducted by McGill University sociologists Richard Hamilton and Maurice Pinard, from May 4 to 9. It was published in Le Devoir of Montreal, Le Soleil of Quebec City and the Toronto Star.

IN ANOTHER matter, the pollsters discovered that 54 per cent of French-Canadians in Quebec thought English Canadians "often consider them (French-Canadians) inferior to them." English-Quebecers, however, don't think so, as 70 per cent of them replied.

Some 54 per cent of the French Quebecers felt the English dominated them economicaly, while 38 per cent didn't think so.

FORTY-SIX per cent of French Quebecers felt they would become a smaller minority in Canada, a hypothesis often promoted by the Parti Quebecois, while 41 per cent of French respondents didn't think so.

Asked about their loyalties, three-quarters of the respondents said they felt "deeply attached" to Canada, while nearly half felt more attached to Canada than to Quebec.

IN A linguistic analysis, 36 per cent of French-Canadians said they were more attached to Canada than to Quebec, while 73 per cent of Anglo-Quebecers said so, compared with 70 per cent for other ethnics.

Only 26 per cent of French-Quebecers said they felt strongly attached to Quebec only.

THOSE intending to vote Yes apparently had a better understanding of the referendum question and its implications than those planning to vote No.

Of those who responded, 70 per cent over-all knew that under sovereignty-association, Quebec would be the only government to levy taxes in Quebec; 15 per cent thought not and 15 per cent didn't know.

IN SIMILAR questions, 28 per cent thought Quebec would still elect MPs to Ottawa, 26 thought Quebec would have its own money, 38 per cent thought Quebec would remain a Canadian province.

Actor Morse excited about his new 'baby'

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist reporter

Some people might have trouble visualizing an encounter with Saanich council as akin to having a baby, but that was the metaphor picked out of the air last week by the ebullient Barry Morse.

Morse, the artistic director of the recently-formed Lord Chamberlain's Players, was flushed with success after Saanich council agreed Monday to negotiate the lease of the Maltwood Estate with the theatre group. If all goes according to plan, the Lord Chamberlain's Players will bring a made-over Globe Theatre along with an Elizabethan theme park to the controversial property.

"I'm in a state of elation—it's like having a baby," said Morse, who leaves the impression that all that's needed now is a couple of signatures and the proposed $7 million complex would spring up over night.

The man goes at double speed when talking about the proposal—and almost anything else—but more surprising still, he's working at it for nothing. Once everything is in place on the Maltwood property then maybe the 61-year-old actor will draw a salary, but not before, he says.

Just how he should find himself as number one booster for the proposal is certain to bring a rambling dissertation from Morse. The short version involves a shot-in-the-dark phone call to Morse in London asking his assistance at a time when by chance he was about to leave for Western Canada. And more compelling still, he was nosing around for a challenge in a career which, by conservative estimates, includes more than 3,000 roles.

"It's not often that a guy coming up 62 gets a chance to inaugurate something that's going to change this part of the world," said Morse.

He describes himself as British by birth but Canadian by choice. There's a family connection with B.C. through his wife of 41 years, actress Sydney Sturgess. It makes it all seem almost plausible that he should be putting together a Shakespearean theatre on Vancouver Island.

Morse is one of the too few Canadian actors whose names are known by more than aficionados of the stage. A read through of his resume doesn't readily explain his fame—there is the title role in Hadrian VII on Broadway and a stint as artistic director at Ontario's Shaw Festival—until his television credits are listed. And of course, he was the relentless Lt. Gerrard in the popular '60s television series, The Fugitive.

He still gets recognized on the street as "the fiendishly dedicated detective from Indiana" in search of David Janssen's Dr. Richard Kimble. A Texan couple in Victoria recently were surprised to find that Lt. Gerrard spoke with "an English accent."

When the lucrative five-year series ended in 1967, there were few regrets for Morse.

"Like all great successes, it was in danger of taking over my life," he said.

But try and pin Morse down to any regrets as to roles not played and awards not won and he's remarkably evasive. It's wasteful thinking, he says.

"I'm not the least bit stage struck," says Morse who rather humbly describes himself and other actors as "moving around where something needs to be done or where faces need to be pulled."

Apparently he wouldn't care if he never acted again. But writing and directing, that's something else again.

Still, it's Barry Morse the actor who goes on stage Friday and Saturday night at the McPherson with his one-man show Merely Players. And what is the benefit show about? Just a lighthearted look at actors through the ages, says Morse.

And that same boosterism that pushes a mock Elizabethan village on the Maltwood property is somewhat subdued on the topic of the three nights of benefits starting Thursday with Rudy Vallee.

"All we've got to do is raise a little money and promote some interest," he said quietly.

The day the spring snapped inside painter Houle

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — Until a few months ago, Robert Houle thought of himself as living proof that an Indian can succeed if he masters the rules of white society. It was a fine illusion while it lasted.

By nature, the 32-year-old Ojibway is not a troublemaker. Shy, well-educated and polite, he has none of the bearing of a rebel.

But something inside him snapped this spring. It happened one ordinary day when he walked into the storage room of the museum where he'd worked for three years. He stared—for the thousandth time—at the Canadian government's collection of 1,500 pieces of Indian art treasures, lying there collecting dust. Suddenly, he couldn't stand it any longer.

Right then, he quit his lucrative job as curator of Contemporary Indian Art at the National Museum of Man and told his shocked employer he was tired of seeing the cultural outpouring of Canada's native people relegated to back rooms and neglected alcoves.

"I don't mean to upset people. I just had to do what I felt was right. And it hurt. It was one of the hardest things I've ever done," he told FP News Service.

The words come out slowly; in careful, calculated tones. They almost sound rehearsed.

And they might be. Houle is clearly telling his story for one reason alone—it was speak out or sell out.

At 29, he thought he was the luckiest Indian in Canada.

He had a degree in art history from the University of Manitoba and a post-graduate degree in art education from McGill University. He'd studied drawing and painting in Salzberg, Austria, and on his arrival back in Montreal, easily snared two jobs, teaching North American art history at both McGill and Concordia universities. As well, his own paintings were attracting respectful attention from the Canadian art community.

Then came the highest tribute of all. In 1977, he was invited by the National Museums Corporation, the agency in charge of all federal museums and art galleries, to become its first curator of contemporary Indian art. Houle was the first native ever to hold a curator's post.

"It looked like an ideal job. Indian art is the most exciting field there is. The painting being done today by native people is a visual documentation of our adaption to Canadian life."

Eagerly, Houle set to work shopping—from the sophisticated art galleries to the ramshackle workshops of the backwoods.

The museum now boasts a $1-million collection of modern Indian art—700 Northwest Coast Indian prints, 500 Woodland Indian prints, 100 paintings and drawings (including two of Houle's own works) and various engravings, wall hangings and sculptures.

Houle's face opens up proudly when he talks about the collection, then lapses back into closed sullenness when he is forced to add that exactly 11 works are now on public display in a 12-by-six-foot room in an inconspicuous second-floor corner of the museum.

The rest, including Misquah, a vivid wall-sized painting into which he poured his own heart seven years ago, are buried in the storage room.

As far as Houle knows, they'll remain there indefinitely. The National Art Gallery won't display Indian art. "They're too busy exhibiting ancient works of Communist China and folk art from Africa."

In fact, he says, the art gallery has a policy of not devoting space to contemporary Indian art. The reason, he has been told, is that Indian art belongs in a museum.

"I'm beginning to feel like an artifact myself. I don't want to use the word discrimination—that's too strong. But I'm deeply opposed to the way they (the National Museums Corporation) seem to think art produced by Indians is interesting only as a relic of a by-gone era.

"By refusing to collect modern Indian art, the gallery is saying 'we'll treat you as Indians first and artists second.' "

At first, Houle was convinced the policy was an inadvertent mistake. If he just pointed out how unfair the system was, somebody would fix it.

So he complained. His superiors seemed to be listening, but months turned into years and nothing ever changed. Each time he'd acquire a striking new work of art, it would end up in the storage room, just like all the others.

On April 2, Houle handed in his resignation, effective the end of this month.

He doesn't have any worries about his own livelihood. He can go back to teaching and do some painting on the side. At his last exhibition in Toronto in February, his works sold for between $650 and $1,500.

Houle tells acquaintances that he's looking forward to the change. He says he got so tangled up in the red tape of being a bureaucrat that his creative juices seemed to run in the last few months. But the words sound forced.

They are, he admits. "Underneath all my complaints, I know it was a worthwhile experience. I hope to God I'll be replaced and I hope my replacement will be an Indian. I wish him or her luck. I hope I've done some good."

He fumbles to light a cigarette, smiles shyly and seems relieved that his story is finally out.

So far, Houle has shared his tale with only a handful of people. Each re-telling is agonizing. It's not easy learning to be a rebel at 32 in grey flannels.

Indian artifacts collecting dust on shelves . . .it was too much for Robert Houle jim gibson backstage

It was hardly standing room only at the McPherson Playhouse last week at most of Victoria's edition of the British Columbia Festival for Young People.

And that was too bad, because it was an impressive mix of performances. I missed the week's big name act, Sharon, Lois and Bram, but did catch Sukay, Carousel Theatre and Greenthumb Players.

Sukay is billed as the magic flutes of the Andes. Indeed, the group of young musicians turns out some surprisingly melodic and exotic music from comparatively primitive and authentic instruments. The musicians took the time to explain to their young audience the likely origin of both the music and the various instruments.

Some of the magic was dispelled when one forthright youngster wanted to know where each member of the group, billed as from Bolivia, actually came from. Only one was from that South American country. One came from Switzerland and the group's only woman (named Quentin!) came from somewhere "nearby Brooklyn."

The two theatre productions showed a direction in kids' theatre that was relatively new to me at least. Most theatre for kids is either a variation on magic frogs and princesses or the history of something or other. Occasionally there might be a mime or a juggling clown.

What was intriguing about both Carousel's Step on a Crack and Greenthumb's Portrait of the Adult as a Young Kid was that they were both written from the child's point of view.

Portrait is a touching and humorous one-man show conceived and performed by John Carroll, who lucidly depicts what it's like going through grade school with a few extra problems like relating to parents. I had forgotten about those times when noises in the night suddenly became something quite different from a creak of a stair or when a journey into the basement was filled with danger and fear. Carroll brought all those memories back while undoubtedly at the same time articulating experiences that many of his young audience are now living.

The breakup of the family is becoming a reality for more and more young people. And remarriages are particularly difficult. Step on a Crack takes this issue on in a novel and entirely effective way. We don't just watch a little drama about Ellie whose mother died and whose much-adored father remarried while she's at summer camp. Instead, we see all this from Ellie's point of view; one side of her trying to accept what has happened while a warring alter ego urges her to be destructive.

It's a beautifully written piece, free of preachment and condescension. Nor is there anything cloying about Ellie's final acceptance.

In short, all three groups gave first-rate performances at a first-rate festival. If only the attendance hadn't been third rate.

Chit-chat. . . Last night's Sample-Stearns and Spectrum Dance Circus concert is said to be "it" at least locally for the young dance company. Constantine Darling's dancers have a Vancouver commitment next Sunday and after that the company will be no more. Not surprisingly, the demise of this energetic and promising group all comes down to cash. The dancers aren't paid and usually pick up their own expenses. Many are finding it impossible to pay the rent when the dance company takes up so much of their time. Everyone was willing to make that sacrifice in the rather naive belief that the funding agencies would automatically adequately support the company once it made it through its second year. For some reason they've given only token support to the Victoria dance company so ripe with potential while continuing to hand over cash to some of the oblique companies entrenched in Vancouver. Have the subsidized Paula Ross or Anna Wyman companies ever drawn crowds in Victoria of the size Spectrum did for its University Centre concert earlier this year?. . . .Still, there are guardian angels out there ready to help out arts organizations. One recently winged into the Bastion Theatre with an offer that could add as much as $25,000 to the theatre's on-going fund-raising campaign. The donor is prepared to match every new dollar raised in the community up to $25,000. So empty out your mattresses and trundle it all down to the Bastion. Better still, spread it around. . . Guardian angels more in the cherub size are newcomers Barbara and Carl Little, who are turning over 10 per cent of the first week's take of their new curio and tea shop, the Arts Connection, to the Victoria Symphony . . . Yes, the symphony does plan to have a season. It would have been announced earlier but manager Bob McGifford swears the symphony was being jinxed on a particular date in its pops concert series. It seems four artists cancelled out on that date but now everything is okay. The symphony plans to go public with its season before the end of the month. . . Orchestra auditions continue to fill, among other spots, those vacated by timpanist Scott Eddlemon and his wife, Susan, the associate concertmaster. They had plans to go to Vancouver. . . Eugene Evans, the teenage and apparently unpaid impresario behind the Homegrown Music in the Park concert series, says that he will be putting together almost 30 concerts this summer as diversified as folk to symphony. The Sample-Stearns Band leads off the series with a post-parade concert Monday at the Cameron Bandshell. . . .Those who know J.J. Johannesen can't imagine him demurring too strenuously at changing the name of The Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts to The Johannesen International School of the Arts. The old name was confusing, considering the school has been in Victoria for several summmers.. . . Bebe Eversfield says it was a little over a year ago that Ruth Norgaard left her dance classes to try California. She was back in town last weekend on stage with Montreal's Les Grands Ballets Canadiens.

Datebook. . . Lobb/Clement Photographs: Patterns and Inclinations continues this week at the Maltwood Art Museum. It's an exhibition of landscape photography accented with a visual and music presentation on Friday.

Once again the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has a diversified group of exhibitions. Carl Schaefer in Hanover is a retrospective since the Second World War of work by the artist whom many consider Canada's greatest watercolorist. It ends June 1.

A Look at the History of Ceramics is taken from the gallery's own vast collection of European and Oriental ceramic pieces. Three Swiss Artists is the name given the special installation created by Michael Biberstein, Jorg Renz, and Jurg Stauble. The Swiss artists spent about a week recently putting together their creation.

The Lord Chamberlain's Players benefit shows begin Thursday night with the arrival of the octogenarian crooner Rudy Vallee whose two-hour show offers a nostalgic look at the Hollywood he knew when he was a star. The players' artistic director, Barry Morse, takes the stage Friday and Saturday night with his Merely Players.

Foster has new hit single on Boz Scaggs' latest LP

Boz Scaggs has a good new album out and Victoria product David Foster figures prominently on it as a songwriter and performer. Also spinning in this week's record column are recent albums by John Stewart, the Beach Boys and Drastic Measures.

Boz Scaggs: Middle Man

Victoria-raised David Foster, who co-wrote Earth, Wind and Fire's Grammy award-winning song After the Love Has Gone, has another hit single on his hands by the title of Breakdown Dead Ahead, one of the cuts on Boz Scaggs' latest hard-driving album, Middle Man.

In fact, Foster wrote the music for six of the LP's nine songs, arranged the strings and manned the keyboards and synthesizer.

Scaggs, a San Francisco singer, penned the lyrics, baring his romantic soul to all who will listen.

Full of imaginative verses about love's pangs and passions, Middle Man thrives on a steady diet of infectious melodies and husky rhythms and can be compared favorably with Scaggs' masterful Silk Degrees album of 1976 though his latest work seems less satisfying somehow.

It's akin to the feeling at the dinner table after a fine appetizer and main course, when there's just enough room in the tum for dessert but it never comes.

But the title has its merits, being a helluva catchy rocker, as does every other tune, from the breezy Jojo to the gentle You Can Have Me Anytime.

Whether the music is heavy or heavenly, Scaggs' engrossing vocal theatrics rise above with his unique combination of coolness and intensity.

John Stewart: Dream Babies Go Hollywood

Veteran singer-writer John Stewart is trying to follow up on the success of last year's hit LP, Bombs Away Dream Babies, with this similarly-named album with which it seems to have little in common.

Stewart, who first hit the bigtime as a guitarist with the Cumberland Three in the early 1960s, does all the guitar work on this album himself, along with some of the percussion.

Backup vocals are provided by, among others, Phil Everly, Nicolette Larson and Linda Ronstadt, but they are mere stage-dressing for Stewart's own powerful voice.

Highlights of side one are Hollywood Dreams, repeating a timeworn theme in a new way; Wheels of Thunder, a grasp for the nostalgic life of the open road, and (Odin) Spirit of the Water, a ballad loosely based on the Moby Dick legend.

On the second side, Love has Tied My Wings is a 1980s-style trip back to the days of folk, while Moonlight Rider reverts to a bouncy skiffle style colored with images of Fleetwood Mac.—Paul Bennett.

Beach Boys: Keepin' the Summer Alive

Hmmmm.

How's this one? Farrah Fawcett will undergo a sex change. Don't bet your manes, methinks.

The Osmonds will become agnostics. Preposterous.

The Beach Boys will make a comeback this year. That sounds more like it, considering the high-calibre material on their new album.

On the title cut, co-written by Carl Wilson and Randy Bachman, these California sound-surfers ride their familiar waves of pop energy for a beach-party tune with simple lyrics and nifty peak-and-trough arrangements, if a little over-produced.

Best of all the tracks is Oh Darlin', a little sweet nothing that displays their fine harmonizing talents, which is just re-emphasized by other offerings, including Endless Harmony, calypso-slanted Sunshine, Santa Ana Winds with its folksy expanse of acoustic guitars and Chuck Berry's brisk School Day (Ring! Ring! Goes the Bell!).

All told, an easy-going album that shows the Beach Boys, after all those crazy days, can still spin off some some of the smoothest melodies around. They're keeping the 60s alive.—R.W.

Rating: ●●●●

Drastic Measures: Drastic Measures

Drastic Measures are a modest bunch. On the sleeve of their debut LP they advise aspiring fan club members not to write, because there isn't one.

This self-effacement, emphasized in a press blurb and which is the latest fashion in offbeat-pop pap, is amusing but suspect on three counts: they're ambitious, lyrically mischievous and give an address for photo inquiries.

Whatever the hype or lack of it, Drastic Measures are noteworthy—these four misbehavers from Toronto have hatched an engaging album that revels in the fun-loving tradition of the music hall.

Realizing their limitations, they've wisely used outside help to embellish their wares, such as the orchestrations of Nash the Slash and the saxophone additions of Fergus Hambleton.

Everything but the washboard is thrown into the mayhem, from a piano-plunking prelude that could well-accompany some Rudolph Valentino silent film, to some sexy (and sexist) cuts intended in good humor, to an old nursery tale—The Teddy Bears Picnic, all capped off with a classy "postlude."

Highlights include Hambleton's sax motifs wafting the aura of a French cabaret, on Flowers and Romanticon, and the vaudevillian vocals of Tony Malone, which have a naughty edge in the manner of a proper Victorian gentlemen inwardly seething with wanton thoughts. Malone is also the hit of the keyboards.

Sounds around

The Madman of Motown here June 1

By KING LEE
Colonist Reporter

Although he says he doesn't smoke, drink or take drugs, he's called the Motor City Madman and he's coming to Victoria on June 1.

Ted Nugent, who will be the feature act at the Memorial Arena along with the Scorpions and Pat Travers, is already considered a rock-music "old-timer" before the age of 30.

The Detroit guitarist began at the age of 14 as a member of a group called The Lourdes and, at the age of 16, formed the Amboy Dukes.

Despite the rugged schedule, Nugent maintains that all he wants to do is "rock and roll, hunt and fish, and love my family."

Victoria is the second stop of a Western Canada tour which starts May 30 at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum.

After his Victoria date, he goes to Edmonton, Calgary and Regina before finishing up June 6 in Winnipeg.

CONSTANTINE DARLING has announced that Saturday's performance by the Spectrum Dance Circus with Sample-Stearns at the McPherson Playhouse was the last by that group. Darling said the popular dance group will be disbanding.

Conference to press Ottawa

Arts ministry gets push

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of the arts community voted this week to have the Canadian Conference of the Arts write its own arts policy and to press for a new inquiry into the arts leading to establishment of a formal department of culture.

The annual meeting of conference, which elected Toronto broadcaster Lister Sinclair as its new president, also called on the government to allocate at least $36.6 million immediately as a supplementary emergency fund for arts and cultural services.

THIS MONEY is needed, the resolution said, to sustain the existing level of arts and cultural activities and to ensure that present achievements are "not irresponsibly and irrevocably lost" by inflation and cuts in government spending.

Three prominent individuals — contralto Maureen Forrester, writer Gabrielle Roy and Father Emile Legault, considered the founder of contemporary French Theatre in Canada — were honored at a reception at Government House by Lily Schreyer, wife of Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer, who is recovering from surgery. They received the conference's diploma of honor and silver talismans designed by Haida Indian artist Bill Reid.

BUT THE conference, representing most of the performing, visual and other arts organizations in the country, with 500 group and 700 individual members, cancelled its annual dinner when Secretary of State Francis Fox said he could not attend.

Members were hoping for an immediate response from the government to the annual meeting resolutions, and any enthusiasm for the conference seemed to expire when the invitation to Fox was turned down.

CHARLES Haines of Ottawa, a Carleton University English professor and Shakespeare scholar, said the conference should do something imaginative to catch public attention, like advocating the sale of tax-free beer at all theatres.

A resolution calling on the government to revise tax laws to encourage the arts was set aside and left for the incoming executive to rewrite.

SOME OF the adopted resolutions appeared to be in conflict with each other. One said the conference should write its own culture policy and present it to the government for adoption in whole or in part. Another said a new commission of inquiry, separate and independent of any government department, should write a policy which the government would enact in legislation similar to the Broadcasting Act.

But a third proposal, calling on the federal government to declare a comprehensive policy to guide its own involvment in supportng the arts and culture, was defeated.

MAGGIE HANKERS FOR MORE FILMS

MONTREAL (CP) — Margaret Trudeau still wants to be in the movies.

Nothing has been signed yet, but Mrs. Trudeau told a reporter this week that she is studying a role that appeals to her — that of a woman wrestling with her own rage.

"I know about rage and I know about humiliation," said Mrs. Trudeau while sipping champagne in a Montreal night spot. "It's a role I think I can play."

She already has two unsuccessful movies under her belt and a best-selling tell-all book about her life as the most notorious chatelaine of 24 Sussex Drive.

The estranged wife of Prime Minister Trudeau was in Montreal to catch the premiere of Viva, Viva!, a lavishly-costumed New York drag show being shown at the east-end Theatre St. Denis.

But she ducked out before the second half, bothered by catcalls from members of the audience who shouted "francais, francais" when the emcee spoke English.

A violent, lonely region they call 'Greeneland'

By ANTHONY JENKINS

WAYS OF ESCAPE, by Graham Greene. Lester & Orpen Dennys. $14.95.

Canadian publishing has brought off something of a coup in being first to issue Graham Greene's long-awaited memoirs. But those readers who expect a fully-fledged autobiography, a companion piece to Greene's earlier "fragment," A Sort of Life, will, I think, be disappointed. The intention here is not self-portraiture: "I leave such a portrait to my friends and enemies."

The book is, in fact, a series of connected essays on Greene's novels: how he came to write them, his verdict on them now as he looks back after over fifty years as a writer. Much of the material has already appeared, though in slightly altered form, in the various prefaces to the collected edition of Greene's works. Several other pieces come from newspaper articles.

Yet anyone interested in Greene's novels or, for that matter, in the art of the modern novel, will find the book continually illuminating. In their collected form, these chapters reveal a lifetime of thinking about one's craft and of reading, somewhat bemusedly, about the critics version of that achievement. And though Greene continues to guard his own private life and the "copyright" of his friends to theirs, these essays in their totality are authoritatively stamped with the writer's lonely and independent personality.

That loneliness weaves its way ambiguously through the book. Greene acknowledges that his writing — like his compulsive travels to the world's danger-points — has been for him a way of escape, though what he has fled from can only be gleaned between the lines. Yet writing alone for months at one's desk, battling with problems of style, tone, or point-of-view, is a self-consuming experience that leaves the writer still more vulnerable to the outer world: "writing a novel is a little like putting a message into a bottle and flinging it into the sea — unexpected friends or enemies retrieve it."

Greene is enough of an old hand not to care very much what anyone thinks, yet he still reveals an irritation with critics who, since Brighton Rock, have insisted on pigeon-holing him as a Catholic Writer, dividing his novels into "before and after," despite the fact that all his fiction has been written since his conversion in 1926. He insists, too, that there is no such place as that "strange violent 'seedy' region of the mind (why did I ever popularize that last adjective?) which they call Greeneland." The violence and the decay are there in the modern world for all to see.

Yet, on the positive side, he exhibits a certain pride in the fact that the isolated writer can goad the world's political doers into helpless animosity. Greene obviously relishes the attempts of Papa Doc's tyrannic regime to counter The Comedians, his Haitian novel, with a glossy pamphlet castigating him as "a liar, a cretin, a stool-pigeon . . . unbalanced, sadistic, perverted . . . a perfect ignoramus . . . lying to his heart's content . . . the shame of proud and noble England."

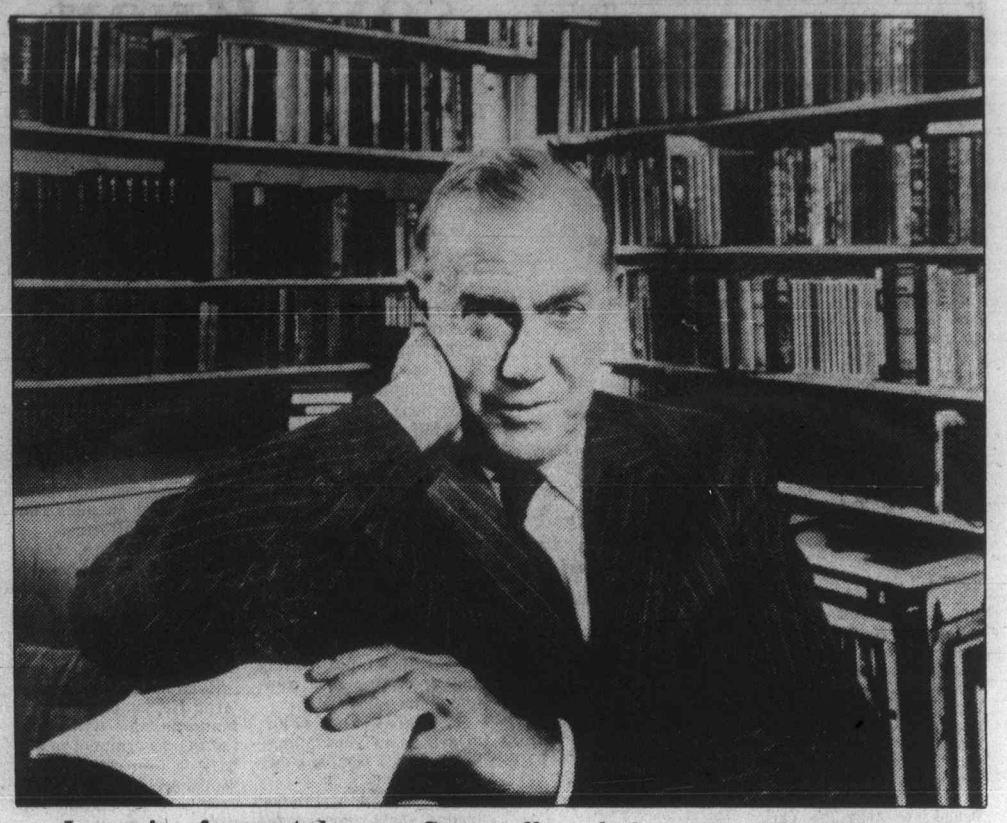
The shame of England also brushed against the vanities of the French General De Lattre in Viet Nam and the self-regard of a Paraguyan dictator. Yet though he has put so much of this century's shabbiness into his novels, these essays clarify the relationship between life and art.

He will, for instance, frequently base his minor characters on chance encounters, but his major figures must emerge from the deeper levels of his imagination, otherwise he could not hope to know their likes and dislikes, their private histories and hidden fears. And there are those moments when a character refuses to "come alive" or when he threatens to take on so much life that he overloads the book.

One also sees the way Greene has pared down his style over the years. He regards his first novels with a genuine embarrassment, seeing his young self imitating bad models, larding his descriptions with similes and alluring adverbs, or failing to perceive that "dialogue in a novel as in a play should be a form of action, with the quickness of action."

Looking over his shoulder, like this, at his earlier self, Greene occasionally picks out a habit that is still part of his method: how he will interrupt the "A to Z" progression of his story with passages that delve back into the memory of his chief character, or how certain scenes are engineered as set pieces to bring one or two figures to full life.

Yet what the book proclaims most is Greene's journey to detachment, both as a writer and as a personality. Without knowing his many-sided self, the novelist cannot expect to come to grips with his characters and invest them with the necessary part of the writer's own experience. And, of course, the clear-sighted comments on his own work here and the brisk way in which he tells us so much and no more about his personal life stand as signposts to that hard-won detachment.



In a series of connected essays, Greene offers a look at a master novelist's craft

He writes of his personal self as though he were one of his own minor characters to be brought forward or set back according to the demands of that all-important point-of-view.

In the far shadows stands the breakdown of his marriage, quickly summarized as a casualty of separation in the war and of his own urge for adventure and escape. A mistress or two comes momentarily to the fore as part of the mis-en-scene at a party. His experiences with opium in the East are analyzed as experiences.

No one could be more aware of his own dualities than Greene himself. His battles with self-despair, his worldly — almost clinical — attitude to drugs and sex appear as unorthodox counters to his convictions as a Catholic. That knowledge of his paradoxical self emerges most clearly as he describes another Catholic writer, Evelyn Waugh, and gives him a compassionate insight into his friend: "I realized what a lonely man he had been . . . Peace he was not granted — only a long despair which he passed off with the lighter word, boredom."

Greene has escaped despair through his appetite for life's experience. It has led him away from that lonely writer's-desk into farcical script-conference in Hollywood, into the shared experience of writing for the theatre, and into the world's literal and metaphoric battlefields.

It has also led him to the point where, in the book's epilogue, he can talk of Graham Greene as an actual "character." His story of that "other," someone pretending to be Greene the writer, who pops up from time to time to impinge on the real Greene's life through odd letters and phone calls from strangers who claim to have known him, is in essence the attitude he holds towards his inner self.

The Systems Revolution is on

By Julian Reid

THE MACROSCOPE: A New World Scientific System, by Joel de Rosnay. Fitzhenry & Whiteside. $20.75.

GUTENBERG TWO: The New Electronics and Social Change, edited by David Godfrey and Douglas Parkhill. Press Procepic. Macmillan. $14.95.

We are living in the midst of an intellectual revolution — one which, as is often the way, is a technological and a social revolution as well. Since different thinkers have approached it from a variety of different perspectives, this revolution goes under a bewildering variety of names. Perhaps the most all-embracingly appropriate is the phrase "Systems Revolution."

This ongoing Systems Revolution contrasts markedly with the last comparable intellectual upset in the Western world: the historic Scientific Revolution associated with Galileo and Newton. That one was founded on the newly-developed philosophy of scientific analysis, which offered new methods of taking objects or natural processes apart in order to see what made them tick. The Systems Revolution, on the other hand, is concerned primarily with synthesis — determining how the various constituent parts of an object or process fit together and co-ordinate with each other, in order to add up to a whole which is cumulatively greater than their sum.

Unfortunately, although the evolving techniques of "systems analysis" have been widely applied by governments and businesses for some years now, and although the concepts underlying them are the foundation of the mushrooming field of computer technology, few people really understand what this new mode of thinking is all about. Thus there is an urgent need for a basic introduction to the subject — one capable of conveying its essentials not merely to the proverbial "intelligent layman", but even to such notoriously unintelligent specimens as politicians, bureaucrats, educators, and corporate executives.

Joel de Rosnay's The Macroscope is not quite that book. But it comes about as close as anyone can reasonable expect.

The "macroscope" of the title is systems thinking itself, which de Rosnay conceives as a new tool for penetrating the realm of "the infinitely complex," just as the microscope and the telescope penetrate the realms of "the infinitely small" and "the infinitely large" respectively. It can be used, he writes, "to observe what is at once too great, too slow, and too complex for our eyes" — for instance, human society, "a gigantic organism that is totally invisible to us. . . . The roles are reversed: it is no longer the biologist who observes a living cell through a microscope; it is the cell itself that observes in the macroscope the organism that shelters it."

In a lucidly incisive text, buttressed by 95 simple yet illuminating diagrams, de Rosnay then proceeds to sketch in a new way of looking at the world which is at once challenging, systematic, and above all practical in focus. For his book is not simply a first-rate introduction to the new "holistic" conception of the universe which will dominate the culture of the 21st century, much as the now-outmoded "mechanistic" conceptions of the 18th and 19th centuries still dominate so much of what passes for contemporary thinking. It is also designed to serve as a concisely informative "primer for those who want to acquire rapidly the fundamentals of modern ecology, economics and biology" — the three areas of thought in which the systems approach has so far been most productively applied.

A closer look at the new society, with particular reference to the contemporary Canadian context, is provided in Gutenberg Two, a collection of interrelated essays dealing with the immediate and longer-term impacts of the ongoing "marriage of computers with existing communications-links." This process is regarded by the authors, in what may well turn out to be an epochal underestimation, as representing the most significant technological revolution since the 16th century, when Johannes Gutenberg first introduced moveable type and thereby laid the foundations of the modern mass-media.

After a somewhat unimaginative pseudo-science-fictional "scenario" intended to dramatize the potentially disastrous consequences of an uncontrolled and unregulated "computer takeover" of our society, technologist John Madden proceeds to offer a brief but admirably clear introduction to the technological and economic backgrounds of the topic. Next, Douglas Parkhill of the federal Department of Communications presents a solid if unexciting review of the assorted policy issues involved in regulating the new technology and the channels of access to it, while former CBC president Alphonse Ouimet offers a sensible if rather familiar treatment of the perennial Canadian identity crisis and how the new technologies will affect it.

But the real meat of the book is more immediately practical. It comes in two chapters by David Godfrey of the University of Victoria, one of which presents a shrewdly incisive evaluation of the new technology's potential impact on the existing mass-media, and the other a conveniently tabular consumers' report on the various microcomputer-systems currently on the market, along with a comprehensive directory of dealers and agents throughout Canada.

As a practical handbook of the technology of the Systems Revolution, oriented primarily toward policy-shapers and computer-minded consumers, Gutenberg Two is a generally commendable production, at once worthwhile and a trifle dull. For those who seek a broader perspective, The Macroscope sparkles enticingly, and could hardly be bettered.

A portrait of novelist in hiding

By JAMES NELSON

It takes the mind of a pixie to conceive an organization called the Louis Riel Chapter of the IODE.

The mischievous imp who did it is W. O. Mitchell, author of the long-running radio drama series Jake and the Kid about life on a prairie farm near the mythical town of Crocus, Sask.

Author of Who Has Seen the Wind? and a clutch of other books, Mitchell is — on the surface — a humorist in the line of Mark Twain and Stephen Leacock. He wears the aura of a crusty, lovable and somewhat eccentric grandfather.

An hour-long film portrait and autobiography of Mitchell is having its world premiere in Calgary and is scheduled to be shown by the National Film Board across the country before it reaches CBC-TV screens this fall.

It was written and produced by Robert Duncan, the Scottish-born former journalist who produced Margaret Laurence, First Lady of Manawaka — a film which was a sleeper in popular television.

W. O. Mitchell, Novelist in Hiding is the same kind of film, one of a series the NFB has been making primarily for high school and university courses. The idea is to capture the personalities of prominent Canadian writers for posterity while they are at the peak of their form.

The Laurence film was not intended for the CBC's general audience but won such attention and so many awards that the network bought it. The Mitchell film is also likely to be an award-winner, and the CBC probably will open its new Spectrum series with it.

Mitchell was born in Weyburn, Sask., and his prairie background and Presbyterian upbringing are portrayed by producer Duncan in a few telling scenes.

There is the shimmer of heat on the prairies making a long line of telegraph poles dance on the bald landscape. And a prim, tight-lipped matron makes it plain that Knox Presbyterian Church in Weyburn was THE church, seemingly the only church, certainly the only church that counted in the town.

The cameras catch Mitchell reading his works in university lecture halls, coaching writing students at the Banff School of Fine Arts, working in his greenhouse with his orchids and flying a kite with his son and grandson.

Deleted from the final print was some of Mitchell's stronger Anglo-Saxon vocabulary, though enough of it was retained to show Mitchell as he really is.

A story is told that at the end of the shooting schedule Mitchell spoke directly to the film crew, saying how diligently he had worked to keep his spoken words clean enough for use in classrooms. But now that the film was done, he said, everyone could . . . .

Mitchell confesses to being a lazy writer, and the view of critics and mentors like Robert Fulford and Pierre Berton is that he might well have been much more prolific.

"I want to be remembered as a loving-hearted and honorable human being," Mitchell says. He wants people to respect "not me as an artist but me as a total human being."

One of his earliest memories, he says, is visiting the grave of his father with his mother when he was aged six or seven and seeing a gopher come out of a hole under the gravestone. He was indignant.

THE ACES© IRA G. CORN, JR.

Declarer took direct action in his play of today's sneaky game. And when the hand was over, instead of thoughts of heaven, dummy had a burning wish that South would see "the other place."

West led the heart queen and the suit was continued to trap dummy's king, with declarer ruffing the third round. Trumps were drawn in two rounds and declarer took the direct route and played his diamond ace and a diamond to dummy's jack and East's queen. Later, declarer was forced to surrender a club trick and the game went one light.

"I needed the diamond finesse to make the hand," alibied South.

"You needed a cone shaped to fit your head," snapped an irritated North. "Instead of taking the diamond finesse yourself, why didn't you give the opponents the opportunity to give you some help in that suit?"

In softer terms, here's what North meant. After drawing the trumps, South should see that the club loser is unavoidable. So instead of taking the diamond finesse immediately, he should play three rounds of clubs, giving the opponents the lead.

If East wins the third club, the defense is completely finished. East can either yield a ruff and discard, or lead a diamond for a free finesse.

If West wins the third club (best), the result comes out the same. West leads a ANSWER: Three no trump. A low range minimum opening and South must choose the weakest sounding bids.

Keep it up, says Ryan

QUEBEC (CP) — For the last time before the referendum, federalist leader Claude Ryan bade farewell Saturday night to campaign workers in the Quebec City area.

In a brief speech after a day of mainstreeting, he warned the staff not to let victory "slip through our fingers through negligence or complacency."

The worst thing about it, Ryan said, was that another important campaign was likely to take place next fall, since he believed that a general election would follow the referendum within six months.

"So save your energies," he said, "and take a good holiday this summer."

Earlier, as he landed here for some mainstreeting, a small plane took off from the Quebec City airport trailing a long banner bearing the maple leaf flag and greetings from Newfoundland.

The message read, "Quebec, on vous aime—St. John's" (Quebec, we love you).

The provincial Liberal leader spent part of the final weekend of the campaign touring shopping centres and visiting No committee offices around the city.

Earlier he taped television and radio interviews in Montreal in which he began to speculate on how constitutional negotiations would proceed after the referendum.

Premier Rene Levesque and his Parti Quebecois will remain in power no matter what the result of Tuesday's vote. But if the Yes won, Ryan said, the next general election would have "a certain referendum air," as both sides campaigned on their constitutional platforms.

If the election, which might come as early as this autumn, were won by the Liberals, the mandate given the PQ government in the referendum would expire, he said.

Ryan is confident of a large No victory and has indicated this will cause the PQ government to embark on a serious season of soul-searching over its sovereignty-association option.

MELL LAZARUS

Helen Chesnut's Garden Notes

During a camping trip in the lakes country of Central B.C. a number of years ago, I enjoyed one of the best-remembered taste treats of my life. My husband happened to rise very early one morning and slipped out of our mountain tent for an early morning stroll in the crisp air of the surrounding hillside which rose from the shore of a large lake, the one created by the damming of the Nechako River to provide water for the generators at Alcan's Kemano powerhouse.

Something on the ground caught his eye and while he was bending over to examine it, he discovered to his delight that the hillside was simply covered with wild strawberry plants.

He returned to our little campsite for an empty tin can and then spent the next hour picking hundreds of the tiny berries. When I awoke, we each had a bowl of these lovely wild strawberries and my husband averred that their delectable flavor was worth every moment of the somewhat considerable effort required to pluck the miniature morsels from the wild plants.

Neither of us really ever expected to run across the refreshing, tart-sweet flavor of those wild strawberries in a berry which can be cultivated in the home garden but we have come very close to it in an everbearing Alpine strawberry from West Germany called Baron Solemacher.

Most strawberries are tough to raise from seeds but Baron Solemacher performs almost as surely as a radish. Start them in the wide type flower pots indoors, sowing the seeds very thinly, and transplant them to their appointed spot in the garden when the plants are a couple of inches high.

Baron Solemacher isn't at all choosy about its growing site but a constant supply of moisture is a number one requirement because the berries are flavorless, as is the case with all strawberries, under drought conditions.

As you would expect, the plants are small, neat and compact and they make no runners. They are most ornamental, with their ruby berries which peek out from their petite plants much like tiny jewels.

The berries are pointed, cone-shaped and quite small but they are produced throughout late summer and into the fall. You may propagate them by dividing the clump when the plant has made more than one crown, similarly to breaking up a clump of overgrown African violets.

Because they are such a pretty plant, they make a grand ornamental edging around flower beds or along pathways—providing not only beauty but a pleasant taste treat as one shows visitors the garden.

This Alpine strawberry seems to be singularly free from the various moulds and mildews and other infections that plague the bigger cultivated varieties normally grown in our backyards.

I doubt whether Baron Solemacher will ever be a commercial success because, apart from the small size of the berries, there are never enough of them ready for picking at one time to make a worthwhile feed for the family. But to recapture that exquisite flavor of the wild strawberries, there's none that can compare with it.

The new seed catalogues list Baron Solemacher under Everbearing Strawberry, likely in the vegetable seed section. This spring, I ordered some to decorate the top of a small rock wall behind my main strawberry patch.

One of my favorite seed catalogues has this to say about Baron Solemacher: "The red berries against the green leaves are very ornamental. The berries are sweet. Use for edging vegetable or flower gardens or in pots for apartment or patio." The young plants may be set out this month.

Incidentally, if you're planning a hiking or camping vacation this year, it's a good idea to take along one of the numerous booklets on wild plants which are available as field guides in the book shops. You never know what you may discover out there that can be adapted to your home garden.

Things I Learned En Route to Looking Up Other Things:

● That the first known "ghost writer" appeared in the Old Testament: in the Book of Jeremiah, the prophet secured the services of a professional writer, Baruch, to recast his earlier prophecies to be read in public on festal occasions.

● That Dr. Edward Jenner, the eminent physician and discoverer of vaccination, was rejected from the College of Physicians in London because of his refusal to take an examination in classics. (Later, however, he was provided with an honorary M.D. degree by Oxford University.)

● That the military title, "Marshal," which in many countries designates the officer of the highest rank, originally comes from the name of the lowly stableboy, or keeper of the horses.

● That Florence Nightingale was the first woman ever to be named "Florence"; she was born in that city, and until her subsequent fame, the feminine name "Florence" was unknown in the English-speaking world.

● That the most palatial country home in England, Audley End House, was built 300 years ago with $2 million embezzled from the British Exchequer by Lord Treasurer Thomas Howard, Earl of Suffolk.

● That the Germans have never called themselves Germans, or anything like it, and the origin of the name is totally unknown today.

● That the state of Idaho is as large as all of England and Scotland.

● That the phrase "a bed of roses" is derived from Sybaris, an early city of Italy, where the luxuriously affluent citizens slept on mattresses filled with rose petals.

● That though it seems that they do, elephants really do not drink through their trunks; they suck up the water and then squirt it into their mouths.

● That the population of every Middle East nation has doubled or more in the last 30 years. (Iran has gone from 17 to 38 million.)

● That the new electronic thermometer takes a patient's temperature in only 25 seconds, compared to at least five minutes with the mercury glass thermometer.

● That Gresham's Law ("Bad money drives out the good"), though credited to the English financier, Thomas Gresham, was anticipated by Copernicus, the Polish genius, before Gresham was even born.

Kathakali—jewel of Indian dance

Kerala — the lush, slightly rugged stretch of territory hemming the western coast of peninsular India — is the home of one of the country's most imposing and colorful spectacles of dance one can hope to see anywhere — Kathakali.

Kerala has developed several other varieties of dance, but Kathakali is the crowning achievement of its centuries-old tradition of theatre. The character of Kathakali is heroic, majestic, epic. Its world is a magic world, where gods and titans materialize before one's eyes, to relieve their elemental furies and passions.

Kathakali provides, in a manner nothing else does, a spirited commentary on the ethos and psyche of a people who cherish this art as one of their most prized possessions.

Though Kathakali, by itself, is an art not more than 300 years old, its roots can be traced to at least 1,500 years earlier. Kathakali marks the culmination of a whole process of synthesis, which began with the early animistic beliefs and practices of the region and continued until the recondite of Sanskrit theatre, always a potent force in the religious and cultural life to the community, toned itself down for a more direct contact with, and appeal to the people.

Kathakali also symbolizes a blending of the Aryan and Dravidian cultures, for in shaping its technique, Kathakali assimilated various elements which it borrowed freely from the dances, dramas and ritual performances associated with these cultures relative to their place in ancient Kerala.

The domain of Kathakali is populated by superhumans, gods, demons, ogres, mythical birds and animals. To make the art come fully alive on the stage it is necessary to present the characters in a larger than life format. This is where the extraordinarily clever expedient of disguise in Kathakali comes to play its abundant part.

On the basis of their nature and qualities, characters in Kathakali are divided into various core types, each of which is represented by a set mode of make-up and attire. For example, good and noble beings, such as divine personages, brave kings and virtuous heroes wear what is called the "green" make-up.

In this the face is painted light green and a white fluted ridge made of rice paste and lime is provided along the whole frame extending from the chin to the ears. Fierce, powerful and villainous characters don the "knife-shaped" make-up.

Female characters generally wear a smooth pinkish coating on the face. Characters sporting beards are of two main types: those with white beards are kindly and pious; those wearing red are evil and destructive.

Equally important as make-up in Kathakali are costume and adornment. Here too, set conventions are followed for set types of characters. Practically all male characters wear full-sleeved colored jackets with a voluminous skirt which is made to bulge all the more by accommodating several small cushions beneath the waist-string. Over the jacket are worn necklaces, epaulettes and bangles.

Most male characters also wear head-dresses, which are made of light wood and are generally in the form of a conical crown fitted with an enormous disc at the back, the entire crown being emblazoned with fragments of shining metal, bits of mirror, shards, dabs of vivid paint and the like. For certain fiendish characters, a tiny seed which acts as a minor irritant is inserted into each eye; this inflames the white of the eye and vivifies the goriness of the portrayal.

In total contrast is the dress of the women, for all it consists of is a full-sleeved jacket paired with an ankle-length skirt and a veil that drapes the head and flows down the side to the waist. There are, of course, many ornaments.

The stage in Kathakali is simple: it is in fact stark bare. It has no backdrop, no scenery, no setting; it carries only a stool for the dancer to sit or stand on if the action so requires. There are two singers, one holding a gong and the other, cymbals. There are also two drummers. The drums play a vital role, for through modulation of their tone and beat, they are able to impart enormous vitality to the projection.

A Kathakali performance lasts all night. The plays are from the Ramayana, the Mahabharata and the Puranas. A common theme is that of a "vadha" or the deserved slaying of an evil adversary.

Each play is composed of speech and songs, the former being in the form of pieces of narrative which serve as links between the different sequences of the play and also help carry the story forward and the latter words ascribed to the characters themselves. Every line of a song is rendered again and again and every word in it is projected through deliberate, stylized expressional work. The hands play an eloquent role. Between the songs are inserted brief passages of dance which serve as adornment.

Traditionally, Kathakali is danced only by men and boys. In its style, the dance is virile and expansive, involving perky leaps and abrupt movements. The art is also invested with immense dramatic power, for, through gesture and expression alone, the performer is able to create the illusion of a range of mountains, a forest, animals and more. The richness of the art equips it to take in its stride situations both of outright murder and mayhem and of tender love and pathos. By and large, scenes of violence, torment and killing dominate Kathakali.

In demonstrating brutality there is no mincing of the matter; often, the last gasps of the felled opponent go in tandem with the clawing out of his entrails by the worked-up opponent. And the impact of all this is magnified many times over by the accompanying deafening din and tumult generated by the drummers and cymbal-players. Indeed, as a form of art, Kathakali seems to come from another world altogether. It is total theatre and it is tremendous.

Oaxaca city in the clouds

By EVELYN KIERAN

OAXACA, Mexico — Of all the places I never expected to be, lying in a convent cell, listening to a mariachi band play Red Sails in the Sunset must be pretty high on the list.

But there I was — peaceful, resting after a bad bout with some unfriendly bugs, and thoroughly enjoying an unexpected stay in this most Mexican of cities.

The music was a noontime serenade to a group of tourists happily lunching in the open dining room of the Hotel Ex-Convento de Santa Catalina. And my cell, an extremely pleasant room re-created from the original, opened onto the courtyard where the band played.

Somehow, in Mexico, it made sense.

Thick walls, pristinely whitewashed, framed great oils of saints and royalty in dress of earlier days and dimmed the noises from outside the convent.

Graceful arches colonnaded the long halls, recalling the Moorish influence on old Spain, transported here to this rich valley — a valley which was once home to a civilization that was old when Christ was young.

Through the open window, I could hear the husky voices of the Triques Indians gathered in the small square across the street, melded with the reed notes from a bamboo flute. Every day they came to weave on their back-strap looms and to sell their work — rich, beautiful shawls, jackets, skirts and the traditional garments they have worn for centuries.

Today's generation appreciates the wild colors, the intricacies of the designs — and the hours of labor which go into each garment. The market is a magnet for tourists and locals too.

And the Indians return to their small village outside the city each evening, living their lives just as generations have before them. They are not concerned with the trappings of this civilization — at least they don't seem to be. I had great fun bargaining with some of the women. They laughed a lot, their beautiful even white teeth showing in their generous smiles, their dark eyes flashing when we joked. Poor perhaps, by many standards, but not long-faced about it. Proud, too.

The word "Mixteca" means "inhabitant of the country in the clouds" in Nahuatl and I remembered the thrill of a storm which had broken as we left the ruins. Great clouds had rumbled swiftly and darkly across the valley as we headed for the city.

Never had I seen such a sudden change, such great growling of distant — then frighteningly close — thunder. Surely the gods were enraged! The wind gathered and hurtled the clouds across the horizon while we ran drunkenly excited from hilltop to hilltop, trying to capture some of the wild beauty on film. As suddenly as it had come, the storm departed, leaving the valley cool, damp and arced by first one rainbow, then a whole series of them. Our group quieted, touched with feelings of awe, of the presence of power and magic.

We returned to the hotel, to revel in the comfort of hot showers and clean clothes, to plan a lovely, long Mexican evening. At 7:30 we walked to the Zocalo, the central square in the town, to watch the paseo.

Oaxaca native weaving on backstrap loom

In Oaxaca, it is like something from a legend. Beautiful senoritas walk slowly about the square in one direction. Handsome men, young and not so young, smile at them and make comments of such poetic exaggeration as to tempt the girls to smile.

Often, a band plays in the wedding-cake bandstand in the center of the square. It is old Spain, old Mexico and it serves up a wonderful social ambiance today.

Frommer hunting bargains despite effects of inflation

By DAVID BUTWIN

One of the enduring wonders of these inflated, devalued times is the appearance each spring of Arthur Frommer's Europe on $15 a Day.

You'd think the 1980-81 edition would be skinnier than the Moose, Wyo., phone book, travel costs being what they are in Europe, but Frommer somehow has filled up 725 pages, advising the faithful how to do 17 major cities from London to Athens on that paltry per diem.

You also may think that Frommer, a busy executive who runs a big wholesale tour agency and manages hotels in Amsterdam and Curacao in addition to overseeing a travel-book publishing division with 42 titles this year, no longer has the time or interest to continue writing and researching the $15-a-day guidebook.

"I'm the only person who writes the book," said Frommer, bristling only slightly at a question he's obviously heard before. "I write it at home, every night and every weekend for six months."

"He writes it and edits it himself and then it goes straight to the printers without anyone else touching it," put in Paul Pasmantier, head of the Frommer book division, when the three of us met recently in Frommer's New York office.

Frommer noted that in the preface to the 1980-81 guide he has acknowledged the efforts of his associate, Nickolaus Lorey, an indefatigable Austrian.

"Nick does the initial research memorandum and comments on every factual assertion--and he does so with Germanic precision," Frommer said. For the first time this year the book carries a cover line crediting Frommer's wife, Hope Arthur, an actress, who provides readers with candid tips on cultural and shopping matters (while her husband concentrates on bed and board).

What thrifty traveller since 1957, the year the first Frommer guide was published, has not gone abroad without feeling the sheltering presence of Arthur and Hope, the Nick and Nora Charles of guidebook writing? I first packed along the Frommer guide, then Europe on $5 a Day, in 1966, and within a few days of landing in Luxembourg I already was talking in the cadence and chatty assertiveness of the Frommer style.

"Where is Hope taking us today?" my touring companion and I would ask each other, referring to the section of each city chapter where Miss Arthur takes over in her own words under such headings as Hope in Stockholm or Sightseeing with Hope or Hope's Paris.

Frommer is an attorney who got into the Baedeker business when he served with the U.S. Army in Europe and wrote a small book, The GI's Guide to Travelling in Europe. Army Intelligence and a yen for travel were the right ingredients for the confidential, slightly undercover approach Frommer used in the first $5 a day guide and those that followed. Who wouldn't thrill to a book that leads you up a narrow, nondescript street to an unheard-of $10 hotel room with a concierge who speaks perfect English?

In encouraging his readers to contribute their own findings, Frommer has spawned a generation of undercover travellers. Each chapter contains their verbatim discoveries, in agate type, of cheap and offbeat hotels, restaurants, shops and tours, information the author calls "the lifeblood of the book." This may make his job a bit easier, but it hasn't stopped him from doing his field work; he has not grown too prosperous to prowl the sidestreets in search of a good, cheap cafe or, occasionally, to stay in one of his pension selections.

Next year Arthur Frommer will title his book Europe on $15 and $20 a day, and soon after that it will go to $20. "I had to agonize when we went from $5 to $10," he said. "There was something special and magical about that figure $5.

Caribbean cruise good investment in leisure

By GRAHAM TROTTER

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica (CP) — When planning your annual vacation over the next year, you would be well-advised to reserve a couple of weeks for a Caribbean cruise. It can be moderately expensive but it is a good investment in leisure and entertainment.

For the active holidayer, there is the fascination of a different port every day in far-off lands. For the lazy vacationer, the cruise offers lots of rest and sun on deck chairs or glistening beaches.

There's a minimum of fuss over a suitcase — it is unpacked at the start of the cruise and packed at the end of it. In between, cruise passengers occupy the same room each night, despite travelling hundreds of miles. And there's no driving.

But there is no escaping schedules and deadlines. There are set meal times, departure hours for shore excursions, deadlines for returning to the ship before it sails, schedules for on-board entertainment and cut-off times for cheap bar specials.

So it was for us as we boarded our ship in Montego Bay one hot afternoon near the peak of tourist season after a six-hour flight from northern Alberta.

Our itinerary called for stops at Port Antonio, also in Jamaica; San Juan, Puerto Rico; St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands; the former British island colonies of Antigua and Barbados; the French islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique; Caracas, capital of Venezuela on the north coast of South America, and the islands of Curacao and Aruba in the Netherlands Antilles and three separate days at sea before ending up again at Montego Bay.

The tab was $3,506 Canadian for two sharing a cabin eight feet by 10 feet with two single beds, private bathroom with shower, carpeted deck, air conditioning, piped-in music and plug-ins compatible with Canadian razors and hair dryers.

The original booking, made months in advance, was for $3,274, but this was bumped by $232 one month before sailing due to rising fuel costs. We had one of the inside (no portholes) cabins, which were anywhere from $240 to $540 cheaper for two persons than outside ones depending on which of the five passenger decks you chose.

We took travellers' cheques in U.S. funds. But our American-owned ship provided on-board exchange of Canadian dollars, at 20 per cent. Also, its casino slot machines devoured our Canadian silver as fast as it did American dimes and quarters.

Cost-wise, there was more to come. Gratuities were expected by our cabin steward, dining-room steward and busboy, the suggested tips being $1.50 daily to each of the stewards from each passenger and 75 cents a day to the fellow who served the vegetables and coffee. Special envelopes were slipped under stateroom doors halfway through the cruise and at its end for this purpose.

The biggest additional item was shore excursions, ranging from $11 to $21 for trips averaging three hours, and including one of $27 for an eight-hour, lunch-included tour of Caracas. We took one excursion each day we were in port; chalk up a total of $288 a couple.

The sights ashore were boundless . . . in Caracas, the rivers of garbage that streamed down the surrounding hillsides scarred from top to bottom by shanties stacked upon shanties, in sharp contrast to flower-bedecked balconies and picturesque grillwork in the ritzy areas of the city.

Asked why the shack-dwellers weren't moved into proper accommodation in the city of four million population, the tour guide replied: "It is not a problem of 10,000 people, but of one million.

In St. Thomas, ours was one of six gleaming-white cruise ships riding at anchor that day. One day a week previous, the population of 48,000 was swelled by 15,000 when 11 cruise ships and a U.S. aircraft carrier converged on the island's duty-free shops. There are more than 800 taxis on an island 13 miles long and three miles wide.

Every island held its eye-openers.

Meals were a delight. Lunches and dinners were multi-course affairs. Except for breakfast, there was a new menu with every meal, usually offering three main dishes. Lobster and frog legs were among the many delicacies.

Shipboard activities included swimming, slot machines and blackjack, dancing on postage-stamp floors at night, late-night disco under the stars, movies up to three times a day with top films such as Superman and Rocky II, skeet shooting, costume parties.

Cuzco rich in Peru's historical treasures

By SANDRA PHIPPS

CUZCO, Peru - The faltering rays of sunset fall upon the surrounding mountains and the melancholy green of eucalytpus groves are suddenly topped with silver. From the vantage point of Sacsayhuaman — more like a behemoth coliseum than a fortress, as it is called in travel guidebooks — the burned sienna of Cuzco's tile roofs and domes glitters briefly in the distance.

The sad notes of an Indian flute or the barking of a dog travel for miles in the thin air of this 10,000-foot high valley. The hour and the place conspire to create a bewitching atmosphere.

Although Cuzco is generally identified as gateway to Machu Picchu, the world-famous "Lost City of the Incas", any visitor to Peru would be foolish to underestimate it as a prime destination on its own merits. For the ancient capital of the mighty Inca Empire holds archaeological, architectural, artistic and historic treasures unequaled anywhere on earth.

Located 3 kilometers from downtown Cuzco on a hillock that lords over the verdant valley, Sacsayhuaman is made up of three main sets of walls positioned in zig-zag and built of huge blocks of stone.

As many things in Peru, the history of this place is clouded by mystery, and its very name — meaning "Puma's Head — Hawk in Flight" — reveals it might have been once a ceremonial site and a place of assembly on Inca holidays. But when the war-like Spaniards arrived here in 1533, they naturally called it a "fortress".

The colossal architecture which surprised the conquistadors under Pizarro still astounds today's engineers and builders. The enormous boulders, each weighing several tons, were brought here from a quarry two miles away, then cut and fit together so perfectly that no mortar was required.

One particularly huge bare rock — its weight estimated at 360 tons — dominates the center of the main wall, which is 1,800 feet long.

How this fantastic place was built by a people who never discovered the wheel remains one of the world's most intriguing riddles. This inspired the imagination of writers such as Eric Von Daniken to speculate that perhaps some pre-Inca civilization constructed Sacsayhuaman using magnetic force of some other advanced technology which they learned from visitors from outer space.

Sacsayhuaman is most impressive on the 24th of June, when thousands of highland Indians congregate in the inner yard — larger than a football field — to celebrate Inti Raymi, the Feast of the Sun. The vivid colors of their costumes and the sweep of their native songs and dances mark a dramatic contrast with the austere beauty of this imposing sanctuary of rock.

Near Sacsayhuaman is Enko, an amphitheater-like rock structure built in the shape of a puma. Also close by is Tambomachey, where an underground brook runs below a holy resting place. Its waters were probably used by the Incas for ceremonial washings to purge themselves of evil spirits.

Cuzco and its environs are so full of sightseeing wonders that several days are needed to appreciate them all. For visitors with limited time, Cuzco itself is like an immense outdoor museum where massive walls and tunnels of the Inca and pre-Inca periods are topped with magnificent examples of Spanish colonial architecture.

A case in point is the Cuzco Cathedral, which took almost 100 years to build on the spot formerly occupied by an Inca palace, and now flanks the city's main square. A formidable structure with pillars and columns of carved stone supporting three naves, it is 270 feet long, 150 wide and 60 high. Outside the towers shoot up to 100 feet.

Perhaps more interesting than the building are its pricless contents, among them: a collection of large religious oil paintings of the Cuzco School of Art which thrived in the 16th and 17th Centuries; a baroque choir and pulpit, both made of hand-carved cedarwood; various Colonial-style wood carvings of saints with curious individual expressions; a main altar made entirely of silver plate in neo-classic style, which in 1803 replaced the original one made of cedarwood; and an organ completely manufactured in Cuzco in the 18th Century.

A unique carved statue is that of the Black Christ, Patron of Cuzco, to whom local tradition attributes many miracles. In 1650, when a series of earthquakes shook the city, the Black Christ was taken from the Cathedral and paraded in procession around the main square. According to period chroniclers, the earthquakes stopped.

The Cathedral also holds two most unusual antique paintings. The first depicts a Christ of haunting, resigned features, and is attributed to the Flemish master Van Dyck. The second is a scene of the Last Supper in which, instead of the Paschal lamb, a guinea pig is shown. This was and still is one of Peru's most popular native highland delicacies.

The Cathedral stands on a dramatic setting, particularly when soft lights and shadow play fantastic tricks at dawn or dusk. The main square is, itself, a harmoniously balanced complex of stone-carved facades, signorial towers and turrets, iron-wrought balconies and fences, and ever-present tile roofs.

Levesque appeal 'enough to make one vote no'

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque had a poor reception Saturday when he spoke to a golden age club in his last public meeting of the referendum campaign.

As he began to speak, there was muttering from the back of the room.

Levesque said it was "painful to come back to his own riding and get a reception calculated to spoil the event."

He said that if there were "adversaries here, they should make their objections known right away" so he could get on with the meeting.

The premier's appeal was greeted with boos.

Hostess Mrs. A. Reeves complained, "He was supposed to talk for five minutes." Levesque was invited to the 10th annual celebration of the Lafleche Golden Age Club because he represents the area in the national assembly.

"It's enough to make anyone vote no," Mrs. Reeves added. "We won't be able to dance if this keeps up."

Levesque was scheduled to speak at 7 p.m. and the dance was to start at 7:30. He started speaking at 7:45 and continued for half an hour.

Earlier, he met with amateur and professional athletes backing sovereignty-association.

Archers, swimmers, body-builders, boxers, wrestlers, tennis and hockey players came forward at a rally in the Paul Sauve sports arena to say they would vote "yes" in the referendum Tuesday.

Environment Minister Marcel Leger noted that about half the top 20 scorers in the National Hockey League came from Quebec. He said the league discriminated against qualified Quebecers all the same, although he did not illustrate the point.

The master of ceremonies read out a telegram from Atlanta Flames goaltender Dan Bouchard, saying he would vote "yes." Michel Goulet and Pierre Lacroix of the Quebec Nordiques said they would, too.

A Yes committee organizer said there was pressure on Quebec hockey stars to stay out of the campaign, which explained why no Montreal Canadiens players attended the rally.

The only player even remotely linked to the Canadiens to have publicly stated support for sovereignty-association is Marcel Bonin, who was with the team in the 1950s and early 1960s.

Levesque, getting into the sporting spirit, called his supporters "the team of the Quebec 'yes,' a big team representing the health of Quebec."

In sports, as in other areas, he said, Quebecers had proved their competence but remained victims of inequality.

Levesque described his campaign leading up to Tuesday's referendum as one of the "most beautiful" he had ever seen. But to cheers from the crowd, he said the federalist effort was "one of the dirtiest campaigns I've seen in 20 years."

The cheers turned to boos when he added: ". . . with Pierre Elliott Trudeau at its head."

21 HELP WANTED GENERAL

GROUP HOME STAFF NEEDED

Experienced mature staff (couples or individuals) are needed to operate an independant group home on a contractual basis for up to six retarded teenagers. These youngsters currently live in community or institutional settings and attend community schools. They need the warmth and security of caring parent figures. They also need the structure and guidance necessary to develop personal life skills and appropriate social behaviours to enable them to function in the community. Since seizures and hyperactivity can be problems staff should be prepared to deal with these. Staff should be familiar and comfortable with a variety of behaviour management techniques. They would be expected to work closely and effectively with the Ministry of Human Resources, other community resources and, with the social workers help, the parents, in meeting the needs of these children. Some bookkeeping experience would also be useful. Please send resume including relevant experiences and references by May 31th to Doug Mathieson, Ministry of Human Resources, 1627 Fort St., Victoria, B.C., V8R 1H8. Phone 598-5121.

BE THERE A LADY SO FAIR, who misses what she feels ought to be, and dares to care? If there is, she may wish to know that there is, a Canadian gentleman "of English decent" who feels likewise. The question then of course, is how do they discover each other? this experiment is designed to enable but a beginning. The view held is that the Lady will now be a widow sufficiently unencumbered by bias, bigotry, prejudice and poverty that will enable her to enter into a mutual agreement with a suitable Gentleman with a free heart. She should, to interest the Gentleman, be matured by 50 to 60 years of time, reasonably t

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

309 IN MEMORIAM

HILL - In loving memory of Gloria K. Hill who passed away May 20, 1979.
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own;
And day by day I miss her more,
As I walk through life alone.
Always remembered by her husband Alex.

PORTER—In loving memory of my beloved husband Richard (Dick) Porter who died May 18, 1968.
There is a link death cannot sever,
Love & Remembrance last forever.

SHEPPARD — Glen Andrew. In loving memory of our one and only dear son who passed away May 20, 1979.
It's been hard to lose you dear Son
And our tears will forever flow.
But with God's help, perhaps we'll understand
Why our dear Son had to go.
We feel your presence every day
Which helps our heavy hearts.
Rest in peace dear Son, we really are not apart.
—From his Mother and Father Edward and Jacqueline Sheppard.

Newcastle provides a paradise

Georgia Strait provides plenty of room for both water-borne pleasure and business.

While a fishing boat makes its way to fishing grounds and a tug pulls its load to an Island mill, sailboaters take advantage of a good breeze and spring sunshine.

Newcastle Island, in Nanaimo's harbor, was once the site of hard work, with both coal mine pithead and a sandstone quarry located on the island in late 1800s.

Now island harbors holidayers, with a dock, picnic grounds, playing fields, campsite and a trail winding its way around island, across a footbridge and along the waterfront.

Newcastle Island's grassy fields have provided plenty of playing space for generations of Nanaimo residents and visitors.

The island, in Nanaimo harbor, is reached by a summer ferry service and is the favorite weekend spot for group picnics and organized games.

Nanaimo trustees set pace

Students' files in schools under the gun

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist correspondent

NANAIMO — Concern over personal information in teachers' files has now been extended to school students.

The Nanaimo school board decided last week that it would check to see that information such as discipline reports and counsellor notes were destroyed once students left the school system.

The issue first surfaced last month when Nanaimo Trustee Pat Barron raised a storm about information in teachers' files in Victoria.

The province has since promised such information will be removed from the teachers' files.

School District 68 last week received a letter from B.C. Andrews, director of the ministry of education's teacher services, outlining what type of information would be retained in the teacher files.

Barron said he wanted the board to consider asking the province to enact a privacy act and freedom of information act.

He said these two acts would help solve the problem that the teachers' file information will be removed only gradually.

The board referred that item to its education committee.

He said such information as disciplinary reports should not remain in the file once the student has left school.

Secretary-Treasurer Jim Thorpe confirmed that the district has files on every student who has ever attended one of its schools.

"We have boxes and boxes of them," Thorpe said.

Schools superintendent Bruce Hoadley said, however, that he believed the only record kept on a student after leaving the district was the permanent record card, which is a prescribed provincial form.

That record card would only have information about students' achievement, not other information, Hoadley said.

He agreed, however, that it would be a good idea for staff to look into the situation, to find out what the actual practice was at each school.

He suggested that it might also be a good idea to have a formal district policy on the matter.

McGougan said that it would not be fair for the district to hang onto the old records because some student files contain much information that those students haven't consented to.

Staff will study the matter and bring a recommendation to the education committee.

Red tide suspected in man's fatal poisoning

ALERT BAY — The fisheries department closed all clam digging from Kelsey Bay to the northern tip of Vancouver Island Saturday after a man died from suspected shellfish poisoning.

Ernest Daniel Fred, 33, was dead on arrival at St. George's hospital in Alert Bay early Saturday after eating butter clams Friday night.

Robert Williams was released Saturday afternoon.

Mary Williams and Elizabeth Smith were considered to be in stable condition late Saturday and remained in hospital.

Authorities think the incident was caused by red tide and samples have been taken, which are going to Vancouver for testing.

The area has been closed as a precautionary measure until authorities find out what caused the poisonings.

The dead person and the three survivors all came from Health Bay, a small Indian village on Gilford Island about 40 kilometres northwest of Alert Bay.

Brannen Lake feat rewarded

LANTZVILLE — Wayne Murray Martin of Lantzville has been awarded a Medal of Bravery for his 1979 rescue of two skaters at Brannen Lake.

Martin rescued Patricia Orr and Andrew Bennett, who had broken through the Brannen ice on New Year's Day in 1979.

The two skaters, along with four others, were returning to shore at the time and their plight was noticed by Martin, who was skating near them.

He went to the two skaters' aid with a ladder and held it out first to Mrs. Orr.

When satisfied she would not slip under, he ran to shore for a canoe and took it out to her.

Turning to Bennett, Martin paddled to him with his hands as the only paddle in the canoe had been broken, to a spot where he could rescue Bennett with a pole.

Bennett was then taken into the canoe and brought to safety.

Governor-General Edward Schreyer will present the decorations to the recipients at a Bravery Investiture to be held later at Ottawa's Rideau Hall.

Nanaimo strike brought to end with LRB help

The end came at 1 p.m. Saturday when bus drivers and Beban Park staff reported for work.

There were 130 Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 401 workers involved in the unusual dispute.

CUPE members voted Saturday morning to ratify a memorandum of agreement reached earlier by their executive and the region.

A vital part in the four-hour session was played by two B.C. Labor Relations Board staff members.

The region agreed to drop its request for a cease-and-desist order and the entire regional board will meet with the union executive May 27 to hear CUPE's complaints.

It was these complaints about staff relationship that sparked the walkout on Thursday.

At the time, union members demanded that one member of management be fired and another have his duties reassigned.

During the walkout, Nanaimo bus service was halted, activities at Beban Park were curtailed and there was a number of other effects felt through the region.

Armed forces divers in swim for children

Six armed forces divers won't have to wait for ferries when they travel to Victoria from Vancouver next week. They're going to swim.

The divers, members of the Canadian Forces Fleet Diving Unit (Pacific) will swim about 130 kilometres, in relays of 12 hours each, to make the harbor-to-harbor passage.

They will leave Coal Harbor at Vancouver at 4:30 a.m. on May 29 and will swim through Boundary Pass and Haro Strait before arriving at the Inner Harbor. They estimate the trip will take about 80 hours.

Beneficiary of the stunt will be the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children, which is taking pledges on each mile completed by the swimmers.

The divers will wear wetsuits and fins during the swim, and will be accompanied by a 95-foot navy diving tender and some smaller craft.

Those interested in placing pledges can do so by calling the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children, 382-3171.

Federation wants plan indexed to living costs

Teachers buck pension change

B.C. teachers will strongly oppose changes in government pension plans announced last recently by the provincial government, the president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation says.

Al Blakey says the federation will press to have pensions fully indexed to the cost of living. The government announced Wednesday that pension increases would no longer be based on the cost of living, but on the ability of the government pension plans, including that of teachers, to fund increases.

"In times of low inflation our retired teachers probably would not suffer. But when inflation is higher than about eight per cent a year, their real income under this new plan would be reduced," Blakey said.

"We want to make sure their pensions are fully protected into the future."

Blakey said teachers had agreed some time ago to other changes announced by the government Wednesday, such as increased contributions by both teachers and the government to reduce the teacher pension plan's unfunded liability.

"We have known for some time that the pension fund needed strengthening. One reason for that is that for many years, under the old W.A.C. Bennett regime, the government did not match teachers' contributions to the fund."

"The government also made it impossible for our contributions to earn their maximum potential, by investing them in low-interest B.C. Hydro bonds. By our reckoning, the government owes the teachers' pension fund nearly $100 million."

Snake-sitter just smiles

With a deadly snake curled contentedly on his lap, Austin Stevens, 29, of Hartebeesport, South Africa, allowed a broad grin to crease his face—which under the circumstances was the only physical reaction he could make to the thumbs—up salute that told him he was the new snake-sitting champion of the world. Pahlavi
. . . protests execution

Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, twin sister of the deposed Shah of Iran, took a $9,450 advertisement in The New York Times on Friday "to beseech the world community" to protest the execution of the first female member of her homeland's parliament. "To the tragic list of thousands of innocent victims martyred by the inhumane regime which rules Iran by terror and turmoil, we must add now the name of Mrs. Farrokhrou Parsa," she said.

Bad looks worse at Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has raised its estimated 1980 loss for the fourth time this year, this time projecting it at $850 million, a consultant for the automaker says.

The estimate falls below the U.S. treasury department's prediction that the automaker will lose at least $1 billion this year. Wall Street analysts have forecast Chrysler's loss for 1980 at more than $800 million.

In 1979, Chrysler lost almost $1.1 billion, and the company reported a first-quarter loss this year of $449 million.

The latest projection by Booz, Allen and Hamilton Inc. of Cleveland, released Friday, warned Chrysler's loss might surpass $850 million if industry-wide car sales fail to exceed 9.5 million and trucks sale are below 2.8 million.

Early in 1980, the annual rate of car sales was about 10.8 million, but April and early May figures placed the projected 1980 sales figure at 7.6 million. In 1979, about 10.6 million cars were sold.

The new loss projection was based on Chrysler's capturing 9.4 per cent of the North American car market and 10.2 per cent of the truck market.

Liberals ignoring west despite losses—Broadbent

PENTICTON(CP) — The federal government, despite its virtual wipeout in western Canada in the Feb. 18 general election, is continuing to ignore western problems as if the election were a non-event, Ed Broadbent, federal New Democratic Party leader, said Saturday.

Broadbent, in a strongly-worded attack on the Liberal administration at the opening day of the NDP's British Columbia convention, said Ottawa has had to be pushed by his party's MPs to act on concerns such as housing, coastal transportation, search and rescue facilities and industrial development.

"They (those concerns) have been ignored by a party in Canada which has ignored the west for years and one would have thought had learned its lessons after Feb. 18, but has not," he said.

"The reason that the Liberals lost all their seats in western Canada in February are precisely the same reasons they're not going to regain the west because they don't care about western problems and pay no attention to them."

The Liberals elected only two members west of Ontario in the election, both from Manitoba. The NDP elected 12 MPs in B.C. — its highest total ever.

Broadbent, who had nine of the party's B.C. MPs on stage with him, detailed several cases where he said they had to raise matters in the House of Commons to get the Liberals to act.

Broadbent said a good example was a delay by the Liberals on an announcement of financial support for the expansion of grain facilities at the port of Prince Rupert.

The previous Progressive Conservative government had committed money to the project but Broadbent said after the Liberals lost every seat west of Manitoba, they vacillated and pulled back on the commitment.

The NDP leader gave credit to Jim Fulton, his party's MP for Skeena, which includes Prince Rupert, for raising the issue in the Commons until the Lib-

● Don't let victory slip—Ryan. Page 36
● Levesque gets poor reception. Page 44

MONTREAL (CP) — The leaders of the Yes and No forces in Quebec's referendum wound down their activities Saturday as the five-week campaign moved into its final hours.

BROADCAST BLACKOUT

The vote takes place Tuesday but a broadcast blackout descends over the campaign tonight at midnight. Monday is a holiday—Dollard des Ormeaux Day—and neither side plans any large rallies.

Levesque said in his radio interview a No vote in the Tuesday referendum won't stop him from leading the Parti Quebecois into the next Quebec election.

"I was never a great planner," the 57-year-old premier said, but he added he expected to continue leading the party "if I'm in shape."

Ryan, although confident of victory, speculated in interviews that in the event of a majority Yes vote, the next provincial election would have "a certain referendum air," with both sides inevitably campaigning on their constitutional platforms.

MANDATE IN DOUBT

And should the Liberals form the next provincial government, he said, the mandate given the PQ in the referendum would disappear.

But Quebec's federalist leader said he also remembers Trudeau saying in 1977 that he was ready to overhaul the whole constitution as long as fundamental rights are guaranteed and Canada remains under a federal system.

The five-week campaign was gruelling for both leaders as they hop-scotched across the province.

CAREFUL ITINERARY

Levesque ran a media-oriented campaign with a carefully-planned itinerary that left little room for contact with people who were not already Yes supporters.

A favorite tactic was to get people who had something in common—be it profession, age or neighborhood—to publicly come out for sovereignty-association.

Levesque would then present them with certificates attesting to their support.

Ryan's campaign ran on different lines. Although the pace was hectic, the leader of the No forces took pride in not catering to the media, often holding major rallies well past the deadlines for late-evening television newscasts.

While Levesque appealed to the pride and solidarity of the Quebec people, Ryan countered by saying that a Yes was the first step on the road to independence for Quebec.

ELIGIBLE VOTERS

Figures issued last week by Quebec's chief electoral officer show that 4,362,588 people will be eligible to vote on Tuesday. They will be able to do so at 22,026 regular polling stations in the 110 provincial ridings between 9 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Among the eligible are 3,500 men and women in Quebec's provincial jails and federal penitentiaries. It is the first time in Canadian history that prisoners have been allowed to vote.

The question they will be voting on is 108 words long and asks for a mandate to negotiate "a new agreement with the rest of Canada, based on the equality of nations."

"This agreement would enable Quebec to acquire . . . sovereignty—and at the same time, to maintain with Canada an economic association including a common currency."

The question also contains the assurance that any change in political status would have to be approved in a second referendum.

CHINESE TEST ROCKET

PEKING (UPI) — China announced Sunday it has test-fired a rocket from a base in China to a point deep in the South Pacific, in a giant stride toward development of an intercontinental weapons system.

The rocket was fired from a undisclosed point in China to an area roughly bounded by the Solomons, fiji and Gilbert Islands.

The terse announcement of the successful test—long predicted by Western military men—came from the official Xinhua News Agency.

Diplomatic sources in Peking say the rocket probably was launched in North China or from the area around the Lop Nor Nuclear Weapons Base in the Xinjiang Autonomous Region.

If so, it travelled around 5,000 miles before splashdown.

Blacks rampage as officers freed

MIAMI (UPI) — Blacks rioted at the county government centre and in the city's Liberty City section Saturday, setting fire to buildings and cars and throwing rocks and bottles.

The rioting was in reaction to a jury verdict in Tampa earlier in the day acquitting four former Dade County policemen of the fatal beating death last December of black Miami insurance man Arthur McDuffie.

Two unidentified people were critically beaten by blacks in the Liberty City section of northwest Miami and one reporter was knocked unconscious and taken to hospital near the government complex.

Police with dogs dispersed much of the crowd which broke out the doors and windows to the Dade County police headquarters and threatened to storm the building.

Firemen battled three building fires, but controlled them before they got out of hand.

"We've got nothing going right now, but we had a fire at the state office building, the Metro Justice Building and Tanner's warehouse," a fire dispatcher said. "They weren't small fires but we got them in time."

At least three cars burned out of control near the govenmental complex, one of them was overturned. Another car was vandalized. There were reports of a fire in a state office building, but it was not believed to be serious.

Angry blacks threw rocks at the police building, knocking out windows throughout the structure.

"We took rocks as high as the third floor. I'm too busy trying to keep people safe with the lights out to find out what's going on," said police spokesman Joe Keefe, whose office is on the third floor. "Miami police with dogs and backup officers have moved in. The crowd is pretty well dispersed."

Economy of B.C. expected to grow

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's economy is expected to grow at a faster rate over the next two years than the country as a whole, says Tim Whitehead, economist with the economic forecasting group, Data Resources of Canada.

Whitehead said the real domestic product in B.C. is expected to grow by 1.8 per cent this year despite the poor housing market in the United States and deteriorating conditions in foreign markets.

With returning strength in the United States and Pacific Rim economies, growth in B.C. will accelerate to 2.8 per cent in 1981 and 4.6 per cent by 1982, he said in a telephone interview from Toronto.

The forest industry, which contributes 50 cents of every dollar of the gross provincial product, will continue in its current slump throughout the year, but Whitehead is optimistic about 1981-82.

Blaze sweeps small Indian village

Fire swept the small Indian community of Nuchatlitz on the west coast of Vancouver Island Saturday, destroying five buildings.

THE PACIFIC Rescue Centre reported that three houses, a power supply building and the village pumphouse had burned to the ground. There was no information available as to injuries.

The fire was brought under control at about 8 p.m., with the help of a helicopter from Comox equipped with portable pumps, Forest Service personnel from Gold River, 60 kilometres to the east, and RCMP from Tahsis.

RADIO communications were out and details were sketchy.

A forest service spokesman said the firefighters, flown in by plane and helicopter, sprayed saltwater on the fire with the portable pumps.

THE VILLAGE, composed of five or six families of 25 to 30 people, is strung out close to the sea, enabling the portable pumps to be used.

An Indian affairs spokesman at Nanaimo estimated the total number of houses in the settlement as seven or eight.

THE COAST Guard vessel Sir James Douglas was reported bound for the village late Saturday but her estimated time of arrival was not known at press time.

No paper Tuesday

The Colonist will not publish Tuesday, owing to staff observance of the Victoria Day holiday Monday. Next editions will appear Wednesday.

While a fishing boat makes its way to fishing grounds and a tug pulls its load to an Island mill, sailboaters take advantage of a good breeze and spring sunshine.

Newcastle Island, in Nanaimo's harbor, was once the site of hard work, with both coal mine pithead and a sandstone quarry located on the island in late 1800s.

Now island harbors holidayers, with a dock, picnic grounds, playing fields, campsite and a trail winding its way around island, across a footbridge and along the waterfront.

Newcastle Island's grassy fields have provided plenty of playing space for generations of Nanaimo residents and visitors.

The island, in Nanaimo harbor, is reached by a summer ferry service and is the favorite weekend spot for group picnics and organized games.

Nanaimo trustees set pace

Students' files in schools under the gun

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist correspondent

NANAIMO — Concern over personal information in teachers' files has now been extended to school students.

The Nanaimo school board decided last week that it would check to see that information such as discipline reports and counsellor notes were destroyed once students left the school system.

The issue first surfaced last month when Nanaimo Trustee Pat Barron raised a storm about information in teachers' files in Victoria.

The province has since promised such information will be removed from the teachers' files.

School District 68 last week received a letter from B.C. Andrews, director of the ministry of education's teacher services, outlining what type of information would be retained in the teacher files.

Barron said he wanted the board to consider asking the province to enact a privacy act and freedom of information act.

He said these two acts would help solve the problem that the teachers' file information will be removed only gradually.

The board referred that item to its education committee.

He said such information as disciplinary reports should not remain in the file once the student has left school.

Secretary-Treasurer Jim Thorpe confirmed that the district has files on every student who has ever attended one of its schools.

"We have boxes and boxes of them," Thorpe said.

Schools superintendent Bruce Hoadley said, however, that he believed the only record kept on a student after leaving the district was the permanent record card, which is a prescribed provincial form.

That record card would only have information about students' achievement, not other information, Hoadley said.

He agreed, however, that it would be a good idea for staff to look into the situation, to find out what the actual practice was at each school.

He suggested that it might also be a good idea to have a formal district policy on the matter.

McGougan said that it would not be fair for the district to hang onto the old records because some student files contain much information that those students haven't consented to.

Staff will study the matter and bring a recommendation to the education committee.

Nanaimo strike brought to end with LRB help

The end came at 1 p.m. Saturday when bus drivers and Beban Park staff reported for work.

There were 130 Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 401 workers involved in the unusual dispute.

CUPE members voted Saturday morning to ratify a memorandum of agreement reached earlier by their executive and the region.

A vital part in the four-hour session was played by two B.C. Labor Relations Board staff members.

The region agreed to drop its request for a cease-and-desist order and the entire regional board will meet with the union executive May 27 to hear CUPE's complaints.

It was these complaints about staff relationship that sparked the walkout on Thursday.

At the time, union members demanded that one member of management be fired and another have his duties reassigned.

During the walkout, Nanaimo bus service was halted, activities at Beban Park were curtailed and there was a number of other effects felt through the region.

Red tide suspected in man's fatal poisoning

ALERT BAY — The fisheries department closed all clam digging from Kelsey Bay to the northern tip of Vancouver Island Saturday after a man died from suspected shellfish poisoning.

Ernest Daniel Fred, 33, was dead on arrival at St. George's hospital in Alert Bay early Saturday after eating butter clams Friday night.

Robert Williams was released Saturday afternoon.

Mary Williams and Elizabeth Smith were considered to be in stable condition late Saturday and remained in hospital.

Authorities think the incident was caused by red tide and samples have been taken, which are going to Vancouver for testing.

The area has been closed as a precautionary measure until authorities find out what caused the poisonings.

The dead person and the three survivors all came from Health Bay, a small Indian village on Gilford Island about 40 kilometres northwest of Alert Bay.

Brannen Lake feat rewarded

LANTZVILLE — Wayne Murray Martin of Lantzville has been awarded a Medal of Bravery for his 1979 rescue of two skaters at Brannen Lake.

Martin rescued Patricia Orr and Andrew Bennett, who had broken through the Brannen ice on New Year's Day in 1979.

The two skaters, along with four others, were returning to shore at the time and their plight was noticed by Martin, who was skating near them.

He went to the two skaters' aid with a ladder and held it out first to Mrs. Orr.

When satisfied she would not slip under, he ran to shore for a canoe and took it out to her.

Turning to Bennett, Martin paddled to him with his hands as the only paddle in the canoe had been broken, to a spot where he could rescue Bennett with a pole.

Bennett was then taken into the canoe and brought to safety.

Governor-General Edward Schreyer will present the decorations to the recipients at a Bravery Investiture to be held later at Ottawa's Rideau Hall.

Two bald eagles have own expansion ideas

WHERE EAGLES dare, people stare. You could say that about a pair of bald eagles which has ignored a construction camp and the traffic to and from a major construction project at Crown Zellerbach Canada's Elk Falls pulp and paper complex near Campbell River.

"We suspect they're raising a family up there," said owner's representative Peter Page, who made certain the tree remained untouched during construction of a $171 million expansion of newsprint facilities at the site.

"We took test bores to ascertain the stability of the tree and found it stable," he noted, "so the tree stands untouched."

He added the eagles don't seem to be affected by the traffic and construction noise in the area, and come and go in peace.

Wildlife experts later said it is extremely unusual for eagles to remain with the nest in a high-traffic-and-noise area.

Who knows, maybe Mr. and Mrs. Eagle figure that their work also comes under the heading of expansion.

Reporters' notebook

WHEN THE jetfoil Flying Princess prepared to leave Seattle for Victoria Friday she had a three-member CTV crew on board to film the great event.

Just before sailing time the intrepid reporter and cameramen asked if departure could be delayed while they "shot" stragglers coming on board.

Permission granted.

While the TV crew was ashore it spotted the Greenpeace protesters and wandered over for a chat and a few comments on jetfoils and whales.

That proved too much for the Flying Princess skipper. He ordered full ahead, and CTV got some remarkable shots of her wake as she left Seattle harbor.

Obliging colleagues in Victoria picked up the crews' personal gear which was still on board. And two camera persons and a lone reporter caught a bus to Vancouver.

NO WONDER B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner was so anxious to dump public transit onto the Urban Transit Authority: He told a group of people protesting the proposed Site C dam on the Peace River that he's "allergic to buses."

Bonner's response came when the B.C. Energy Coalition invited him to make the tour to explain to residents of the Peace Valley the need for the dam.

The tour will go ahead anyway, said local organizer Bruce Kaun, leaving Victoria Tuesday and arriving in the Peace area Friday.

THE FASCINATING story in a recent Notebook about direct phone dialling in Iran prompted one reader to write: "Although you did not mention it, I presume that they are still able to place 'Persian to Persian' calls."

Hmmmm!

Codex overcomes protest to capture Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — "She was treated unfairly — I thought she was making a move and ready to win it," a disappointed Mrs. Bert Firestone said after watching California's Codex beat out her prize filly, Genuine Risk, for a Preakness Stakes victory that was marred by an incident at the head of the stretch.

Genuine Risk was running wide and making a strong move with 3-16ths of a mile to go when pace-setting Codex, with jockey Angel Cordero Jr. lashing wildly with his crop, appeared to brush the filly.

Eddie Arcaro, the greatest stakes winner of all time who won the Preakness six times, ignited the controversy when he said over ABC-TV:

"If he didn't bump that filly, I've lost my eyesight."

Mrs. Firestone, owner of the Kentucky Derby-winning filly, and trainer LeRoy Jolley both felt there was interference at the head of the stretch, but Jolley wanted to see films of the race before making an accusation.

He watched five replays of the race from various positions, in black and white — the same film viewed by the stewards — and also a color rerun of the ABC tape.

"Something happened," Jolley said, shrugging his shoulders afterward. "There is nothing we can do about it."

"I thought this was a racetrack, not a rodeo," Vasquez, who was aboard Genuine Risk when she became the second filly to win the 106-year-old Derby, said. "I think they should take his number down."

The film failed to show an actual bumping but the horses were within inches of each other as they turned into the stretch.

Mrs. Firestone indicated that Genuine Risk, if she comes out of the Preakness race in good shape, would run in the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes, the third leg of U.S. thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, on June 7.

Jolley agreed with Vasquez that the brush between his horse and the Preakness winner affected Genuine Risk's performance.

"After you run a mile it is hard to generate that surge again," the veteran trainer said, referring to Genuine Risk's apparent letdown after seemingly being ready to make a run for the wire.

"It was an unsatisfactory situation either way," he added. "My horse won the Derby fairly and now has put up a great performance in this race."

Asked if he was sorry he didn't win the $180,700 first prize, Jolley replied: "I would give all the money to turn it around."

Codex, owned by Tartan Stable, flashed under the wire in 1:54 1-5 for the 1 3-16th miles, tying Spectacular Bid's effort last year for the second-fastest time in the history of the race. The record of 1:54 was set by Canonero II in 1971.

While the trip was fast, the 10-minute wait for the stewards to view the films after Vasquez's foul claim had to be agonizing for trainer Wayne Lukas, owners Mr. and Mrs. James Binger, and John Nerud, president and general manager of Tartan Stable.

Codex returned $7.40, $3.60 and $3.80. Genuine Risk paid $3.60 and $2.80 and Townsend B. Martin's Colonel Moran was $3.40 to show.

Codex's winning margin was 4¾ lengths over the filly, with Colonel Moran another three-quarters of a length back and seven lengths in front of Jaklin Klugman, who had finished third in the Derby and was the only other Derby starter in the Preakness field.

Islanders bury Flyers with powerplay goals

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Led by a deadly powerplay combination that produced five consecutive goals, New York Islanders overpowered Philadelphia Flyers 6-2 Saturday to win the third game of their Stanley Cup final series.

The National Hockey League championship series now stands at two games for the Islanders, one for the Flyers, and the fourth game here Monday night.

Monday's game will be telecast on channels 2 and 6 at 5 p.m.

Denis Potvin, the burly pointman on the Islander power play, led New York offensively with two goals and two assists. Lorne Henning, Bryan Trottier, Mike Bossy and Clark Gillies also scored for the winners.

Bobby Clarke and Mike Busniuk scored the Philadelphia goals.

The game was a reversal reverse of the second game of the series, which the Flyers dominated at the Spectrum in Philadelphia, 8-3.

In Saturday's game, the Islanders shut down Philadelphia's big guns, snuffed out their power play and played solid, controlled hockey.

But acrobatic goaltending by Islanders Billy Smith stopped 23 shots. At the other end of the rink, Phil Myre faced 40 shots, giving up the six goals.

The opening period was dominated by New York's power play, which produced three goals, although the first goal scored by the Islanders came while the Flyers had a man advantage.

With Duane Sutter off for hooking the Flyers' Ken Linseman, the Islanders cleared the puck from their own end and, in a scramble at centre ice, Bob Bourne dug it loose and passed to Henning who broke in quickly and fired a slapshot from the top of the faceoff circle through Myre's legs.

That goal — the Islanders seventh in the playoffs — set a record for shorthanded goals in the playoffs. It surpassed the six set by New York Rangers last year.

While the Islanders wielded a potent power play in the opening period, the Flyers, who had four manpower advantages to the Islanders' three, could not get organized. New York's forechecking seemed to overwhelm the Flyers and Myre had to be quick to stave off two breakaways that otherwise would have been shorthanded goals.

The Islanders proved equally dangerous on the power play in the second period, opening the lead to 6-0. Gillies scored the fifth New York goal, stepping out of the penalty box and picking up a rinkwide pass from Stefan Persson.

At the 17:25 mark, Potvin scored his second goal of the game, again on a power play. Bossy dug the puck out of the corner and slid it to Persson, who faked a shot and relayed it to Potvin. Potvin rapped a shot from the top of the slot, beating Myre high on his glove side.

The period was marked by some chippy play and two fights but referee Bob Myers called a tight game to keep things under control. He handed out a pair of misconducts to each team in an effort to hold down the fisticuffs.

Guenter hurls one-hitter

Rob Guenter must have set some kind of record for losing no-hitters in the last inning.

The Victoria Budget mound ace had two outs to go in the seventh inning Saturday when he was tagged for an infield hit by Les Howey.

Frustrated and slightly angered at losing a second straight no-hitter in the last inning, Guenter then retired the side and settled for a one-hit 2-0 victory over Saskatoon Allomatic A's in the first game of a Super Series fastball doubleheader played before a crowd of about 600 at Royal Athletic Park.

Guenter's pitching partner Mark Smith was equally sharp. He also notched a one-hitter, losing the no-hitter on a sixth-inning single, as Budgets took the second game 4-1 and the four-game set three games to one.

Guenter had a no-hitter going in his last appearance, against Woodinville Lumber last weekend, when he gave up an infield single with two out in the seventh inning.

Both infield hits came on slow ground balls to second baseman Carl Walker.

Walker made an excellent play to try and get Howey but first base umpire Lew McCorkall flashed the safe call.

The play was so close that both the crowd and players were split on whether or not Howey beat it out.

Budget coach Harvey Stevenson felt he was safe but Walker felt the call should have gone the other way.

"It was close enough that with a guy going for a no-hitter he should have called him out," said Walker. "It wasn't as if it was a step or anything."

Guenter, who claims he isn't a strikeout pitcher, finished with nine strikeouts and the only other baserunner was Steve Knudson who drew a walk in the fifth inning.

Gene McWillie, pitched a strong game for Saskatoon but he gave up a single to Guenter in the third inning. Guenter took second on a wild pitch and scored on a bloop single by Walker, who did an excellent job of battling McWillie until he got the right pitch.

Budgets added a run in the sixth inning when Walker reached on an error. Reg Underwood sacrificed pinch runner and Randy Benn and Benn scored on a single by John Green.

McWillie struck out seven and walked one.

Dan Wilson scored five goals and assisted once as the Coquitlam Adancs ousted the Rocks 12-8 in a Western Lacrossee Assovciation game.

"We didn't play well as a team," said Rocks general manager Ralph Baker.

"We gave them easy goals. They were fast breaking and got a lot of breakaways," he added.

"We ran out of steam . the late going," said Baker.

Coquitlam held period leads of 4-1 and 9-6 and peppered 58 shots at beleagured goaltender Larry Smeltzer.

The Coquitlam duo of Greg Thomas and John Lewis faced 38 shots.

Only four Shamrocks scored goals. Kevin Alexander had three goals and two assists, Jim Lynch scored twice and assisted twice, Jim Boyd scored twice and Paul Michael scored once.

Each team received 10 minor penalties.

The Shamrocks are back home Monday night when they host Nanaimo Timbermen at 8 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Quinn coach of year

UNIONDALE, N.Y (AP) — Pat Quinn, who guided Philadelphia Flyers to a record 35-game unbeaten streak and the regular season championship with 116 points, has been named coach of the year by the National Hockey League Broadcasters Association.

Quinn received 110 points in the balloting for the Jack Adams Trophy, named in honor of the legendary coach of Detroit Red Wings. Scotty Bowman of Buffalo Sabres, the 1977 winner, was second with 42 points and Claude Ruel of Montreal third with 29.

Since Quinn replaced Bob McCammon as Flyers coach in January 1979, the Flyers have lost only 20 of 110 regular-season games. This season, they were 48-12-20 under Quinn, who receives $1,000 along with the award.

Stone wins renewal of Speedway rivals

Stone came out on top.

Earning his first victory of the season, Stone captured the 25-lap main stock-car event, to defeat Miller, visiting from his new base in Calgary.

Stone grabbed the lead at that point and cruised home in his new 1970 Javelin.

Gord Gicas crept up to pass Miller, who placed third.

Victory for Stone meant defeat for Miller and Dale Taylor, who held a comfortable lead in points heading into Saturday's third weekend of racing.

Taylor had trouble with the electrical system in his 1968 Firebird and managed only a fourth place after winning the first two main events of the season.

Taylor's problems forced him to withdraw early from the heat race and he was unable to enter the trophy dash.

Meanwhile, Jim Smith had the fast time, setting a new record of 19.525 seconds.

U.K. tourists boot James Bay

Anti-Assassins resorted to the kicking game Saturday to keep their unbeaten record intact.

The British rugby touring side kept James Bay Athletic Association off balance with a strong kicking game and posted a 22-13 triumph before a crowd of about 1,200 at Royal Athletic Park.

A JBAA spokesman said he felt his club had a good share of the play and was actually dominating when the Anti-Assassins scored the game-breaking try against the flow in the final minutes.

The visitors were leading 16-13 but were under pressure when the homeside mishandled a kick and allowed Peter Williams to scamper in for a try. Nick Spaven was good on the convert.

"They didn't play their usual running game. All they did was kick but their kicking game was very effective," said Peter Simmonds of JBAA.

The Anti-Assassins started out with the running game but switched when JBAA carried the play for the first 15 minutes and took a 3-0 lead on a penalty goal by Murray Allen.

Steve Smith and Simon Langford scored the other Anti-Assassin tries, Langford added a penalty goal and Spaven had another convert and a penalty goal.

The next big action for rugby fans comes Tuesday when the Wales "B" team takes on the B.C. Selects at Royal Athletic Park starting at 7 p.m.

Among the Victoria players expected to be on the B.C. side are Hans DeGoede, Ray Rogers, K.C. Walt, Gary Johnston and Ron McInnes, all of JBAA.

Pironi earns Monaco pole

MONTE CARLO (AP) — France's Didier Pironi, in a Ligier, fought off the powerful Williams team in the final hour of qualifying Saturday to take the pole position today for the 38th Monaco Grand Prix.

Pironi shattered the qualifying record for the track by about two seconds to post a time of one minute, 24.81 seconds — an average speed of 87.30 miles an hour around the streets of motor racing's most glamorous venue.

Carlos Reutemann of Argentina was second and Williams team-mate Alan Jones of Australia third. Brazil's Nelson Piquet, winner of the Long Beach Grand Prix, was fourth in a Brabam.

Next was the second Ligier of Frances's Jacques Laffite, followed by Gilles Villeneuve of Berthierville, Que., in a Ferrari — all under the previous record.

The winner today should come from these six because of the difficulty of passing in the narrow streets.

The back of the 20-car field looked bizarre. In 17th spot was Villeneuve's Ferrari team-mate, defending world champion Jody Scheckter, former champions Emerson Fittipaldi and Mario Andretti, and current championship leader Rene Arnoux, the last qualifier.

Scheckter, a South African native now living in Monaco, won this event in 1977 and 1979. He said he never got the right combination of tires, suspension settings and a clear run to set a better time Saturday.

For the first time in many years, there was no British driver in the race, won in the past by such greats as Stirling Moss, Jim Clark, Graham Hill (five times) and Jackie Stewart.

John Watson failed to qualify his McLaren, as did Geoff Lees in the Theodore-Shadow and Tiff Needel in an Ensign.

Rain delays Indy trials

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rain washed out qualifications Saturday for the Indianapolis 500, a matter of little concern to the top drivers already in the starting field, a welcome prospect to those at the slow end of the lineup and a cause of mixed emotions for everybody else.

The track was closed at 1 p.m. PST as the day-long rain showed no sign of letting up. The forecast for today was for partly cloudy skies and a 30-per-cent chance of thundershowers, mainly in the morning hours.

Nineteen cars earned starting spots for the May 25 race in the first two sessions of time trials a week ago, leaving 14 spots to fill by 6 p.m. Sunday. If the field is not complete by then, those already qualified will be assured of starting spots and an extra day of trials will be scheduled as soon as weather permits.

For most of those already qualified, including front-row starters Johnny Rutherford, Mario Andretti and Bobby Unser, the rain presented no threat, other than the possible loss of 30 minutes of practice time.

Those toward the back of the tentative lineup, the ones whose qualification speeds would be considered marginal if the weather was good, were also waiting. Each hour of continued rain increased their chances of staying in the field.

Levesque appeal 'enough to make one vote no'

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque had a poor reception Saturday when he spoke to a golden age club in his last public meeting of the referendum campaign.

As he began to speak, there was muttering from the back of the room.

Levesque said it was "painful to come back to his own riding and get a reception calculated to spoil the event."

He said that if there were "adversaries here, they should make their objections known right away" so he could get on with the meeting.

The premier's appeal was greeted with boos.

Hostess Mrs. A. Reeves complained, "He was supposed to talk for five minutes." Levesque was invited to the 10th annual celebration of the Lafleche Golden Age Club because he represents the area in the national assembly.

"It's enough to make anyone vote no," Mrs. Reeves added. "We won't be able to dance if this keeps up."

Levesque was scheduled to speak at 7 p.m. and the dance was to start at 7:30. He started speaking at 7:45 and continued for half an hour.

Earlier, he met with amateur and professional athletes backing sovereignty-association.

Archers, swimmers, body-builders, boxers, wrestlers, tennis and hockey players came forward at a rally in the Paul Sauve sports arena to say they would vote "yes" in the referendum Tuesday.

Environment Minister Marcel Leger noted that about half the top 20 scorers in the National Hockey League came from Quebec. He said the league discriminated against qualified Quebecers all the same, although he did not illustrate the point.

The master of ceremonies read out a telegram from Atlanta Flames goaltender Dan Bouchard, saying he would vote "yes." Michel Goulet and Pierre Lacroix of the Quebec Nordiques said they would, too.

A Yes committee organizer said there was pressure on Quebec hockey stars to stay out of the campaign, which explained why no Montreal Canadiens players attended the rally.

The only player even remotely linked to the Canadiens to have publicly stated support for sovereignty-association is Marcel Bonin, who was with the team in the 1950s and early 1960s.

Levesque, getting into the sporting spirit, called his supporters "the team of the Quebec 'yes,' a big team representing the health of Quebec."

In sports, as in other areas, he said, Quebecers had proved their competence but remained victims of inequality.

Levesque described his campaign leading up to Tuesday's referendum as one of the "most beautiful" he had ever seen. But to cheers from the crowd, he said the federalist effort was "one of the dirtiest campaigns I've seen in 20 years."

The cheers turned to boos when he added: ". . . with Pierre Elliott Trudeau at its head."

Royal Roads cadets step right up

The processing plant had been scheduled to close Tuesday, throwing 100 employees out of work, but negotiations taking place this weekend may change this, a plant official indicated Friday.

Pan-Ready Poultry of Port Coquitlam is said to be in the process of purchasing the Sooke Road plant from Maplewood Poultry, which recently went into receivership.

Agriculture Minister James Hewitt said the Maplewood receivership isn't expected to affect the Sooke sale or a larger one of Maplewood's Abbotsford operation to the U.S.-based conglomerate, Cargill Grain.

Meanwhile Friday a spokesman for the Cargill Grain Co. said the B.C. government could hasten the reopening of the Maplewood operations by pressuring Ottawa to okay the takeover.

Cargill has been trying to buy the poultry processing plant but the Foreign Investment Review Agency in Ottawa rejected the application with the support of the B.C. government.

However, the province has reversed that stand and Cargill spokesman Richard Dawson said if Victoria would bring concerted pressure to bear it would cut the time before Maplewood could reopen.

Dawson said he agrees with New Democratic Party agriculture critic Barbara Wallace that the closure is a crisis for turkey producers, who have nowhere to take their birds.

Wallace has demanded an emergency debate on the status of Maplewood but Hewitt said the government is not going to get involved.

The weather forecast for the Victoria Day holiday weekend leaves a bit to be desired — but it could be a lot worse.

Pat Bay weather office says mainly cloudy conditions will prevail but the good news is that it should also be dry, with little or no precipitation to mar festivities.

No fireworks in show for want of a sponsor

A major feature of Victorian Days—the Sunday night fireworks display—will be missing this year because the organizers were unable to find a sponsor for the show.

A spokesman for the Greater Victoria Festival Society said arrangements for a donor for the $5,000 event, which lasts less than 30 minutes, fell through.

Also cancelled was a charity ball scheduled for tonight, sponsored by the rival Victoria Celebrations Society.

The charity ball was to have become an annual event to raise money for the Pearkes Clinic, but VCS spokeswoman Mrs. Gordon Knox said this week it appeared the timing was off.

"Perhaps we should be thinking of a date in October," she said. "There seems to be too much going on already around Victoria Day weekend."

A broad range of fun events will still fill the three-day weekend for participants and spectators alike, however, with arts and crafts displays, band shows, a church service, sailpast, the May Queen crowning and procession Sunday night.

World champion town crier Richard Fox of Lym Regis, Dorset, England, will visit Victoria on Sunday morning with his entourage to spread the word about New Westminster's Hyack Festival. Replete in red costume with a large bell, he will arrrive at 9:35 a.m. by Hyack Air at the Undersea Garden float in the Inner Harbor to give the Hyack cry and salute Victoria Day.

Also on Sunday, singer-guitarist-pianist Claudia Schmidt will perform at 8 p.m. at Harpo's Cabaret in Bastion Square. Tickets, $4.50 each, are available from Richard's Records or Harpo's.

The big day is Monday.

The Victoria Day parade starts at 9 a.m. and is expected to last more than two hours. The route begins at Mayfair and goes along Douglas to Humboldt.

From noon to 6 p.m., the Gorge Regatta, along with beer garden, canoe races, tug-of-war and other events take place at the Gorge Kinsmen Park, and at 1:30 p.m. the Canadian Forces parachute Sky Hawks team will parachute into the legislative precinct, bringing greetings to the May queen.

Other events include penny-farthing races, moustache and beard contests, a promenade in Victorian-era costumes, and a sailpast.

- Dawn to dusk, arts and crafts show and display, 700 block Yates Street;
- 1 p.m., Ragtime Joy Dispensers, Inner Harbor Causeway;
- 2 p.m., Newport 12-string ensemble, Crystal Garden;
- 2 p.m., Klamath Union high school, Centennial Square;
- 3 p.m., Interlake high school, Cameron Bandshell;
- 3 p.m., Newport senior high school, Market Square;
- 3 p.m., Kent Meridian jazz band, Heritage Court;
- 3:30 p.m., Capital Youth Chorale, Crystal Garden;
- 4 p.m., Monroe high school, Centennial Square;
- 6 p.m., Western high school, Cameron Bandshell;
- 7 p.m., Bethel high school, Cameron Bandshell;
- 7:30 p.m., Evergreen high school, Centennial Square;
- 9:30 p.m., Evergreen high school, Confederation Park.

Old tug new home to loggers

By RAY DYKES
Colonist reporter

She may look weatherbeaten, her paint flaking and dull and her decks strewn with debris and equipment, but deep down she has a hull of gold.

Double thickness, too.

The former Charlotte Strait now has no official name but she does have a hull "good for another 100 years," according to a Vancouver drydock firm.

And it has won her a new lease on life.

BERTHED at the spot normally taken by the fisheries department's Laurier off Wharf Street, the 94-foot tug without a name is being refitted as a floating logging camp for the Victoria firm of Olympic White Logging.

Firm manager John White is proud of his company's first vessel and is embarrassed to show her off in her present dishevelled state.

He can see her with new paint, new equipment, a large galley and accommodation for about 20 loggers and crew.

And when it comes to work camps, the tug will be something special.

BUILT in 1943 at Tacoma for the United States Navy, the tug was meant to start life escorting cargo freighters to the Aleutian Islands.

She has an ice-strengthened hull and three D-8 bulldozer diesel engines each capable of developing 350 horsepower.

But the tug never saw escort duty and has filled a variety of diverse tasks in her life. She pulled logs for RivTow until 3½ years ago and is a powerful workhorse. Since then she was bought to be converted into a cruise launch but was resold through no fault of her own before that dream was realized.

Olympic White has spent "an awful lot of money" on the trusty tug and according to marine surveyors will virtually have a new vessel to show for it in a few weeks.

Then, hopefully with a new name, the tug will chug her way up the coast to Cypress Bay near Tofino to begin work. The muscle she has below decks will not be needed and with 18,000 gallon capacity for diesel and 15,000 gallons for water, the tug won't have to move that often.

White says she will probably sail to Safety Cove on Calvert Island, north of Port Hardy, once the Cypress Bay work is completed.

She may even see duty on fishing party charters in the Rivers Inlet area when not needed for logging camps.

HER NEW master is Walter Furlong, a crusty 67-year-old, of 3265 Cadboro Bay, who spent 24 years with the fisheries department before retiring as skipper of the Howay.

Furlong was fussing around on the decks of his new charge early this week, itching to get her to sea.

He will pilot the tug to a logging site and fly home. When the tug needs moving, he will fly back to her.

She may be old but inflation has helped save her life. To replace such a sturdy tug today would cost $2 million. That was enough to persuade Olympic White to refit and refurbish and give the old girl a new life and new purpose.

Nameless tug prepares for camp duty

Radar word 'early'

Reports that the Pat Bay Airport would finally get its long-sought radar installation were premature, according to Donald Munro, Progressive-Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich.

In an interview from Ottawa Friday, Munro accused Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin of "doing the old soft-shoe dance" in response to his questions in the Commons as to when radar would be installed at the Victoria airport.

"He's been very cagey when I asked him in the house," Munro said.

All the minister would say when Munro asked him about the radar installation was that a detailed analysis of improvements to be made at the Pat Bay Airport during the coming year would be made available to Munro shortly.

The way Munro sees it, the information on the radar installation could also be that the government has decided not to do anything about it for a few more years.

"When I asked the minister in the hallway about the same thing, he said he would have had all the information for me if I had given him notice of my question," Munro said.

"I don't believe that for a moment," he added.

Tillicum talk still tangled

Legal arguments over the extension of the proposed Tillicum shopping centre will start all over again in B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver Wednesday.

Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon Wednesday heard the arguments by the Capital Region District and Saanich municipality on setting aside an injunction preventing Saanich from issuing a building permit to developer Cal Investments Ltd.

He reserved judgment until Friday.

Thursday he was made a judge of the Appeal Court, by cabinet order, and Friday he was sworn in.

"He cannot give a decision in the case," a Capital Region legal spokesman said, "so we have to start all over again in Vancouver on Tuesday."

Shots fired at train

Passengers aboard the southbound Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Dayliner Friday afternoon might have wondered if they had suddenly rolled onto a Hollywood western set.

As the train crossed the Niagara Canyon bridge in Goldstream Park, several shots were fired at it.

No one was injured, nor was there any apparent damage.

Police seized three air rifles and several cases of beer later in the vicinity.

If, as it is said, it takes all kinds to make a world, surely John Ritchie and "Captain John" have been among the more intriguing of Victoria's pioneers.

Mystery Intrigued, Outraged, Then Amazed Victorians

Almost 90 years ago, John Ritchie prompted a mystery which intrigued, outraged, then amazed Victorians; a puzzle which, to this day, has not been satisfactorily explained.

By T. W. Paterson

It began innocently enough with the announcement of the young Scotsman's forthcoming marriage to a socially prominent miss. However, on the very eve of the ceremony, Ritchie was taken to his bed in shock, having received a telegram from the Old Country, informing him of the death of his family in Scotland.

NOT SURPRISINGLY, Ritchie had been staggered by the news; it was reported that he was confined to his bed, and at times becomes "quite delirious."

Apparently, but hours before the wedding, he had been handed a telegram with the message that his father, mother, brother and sister-in-law had been killed in a Glasgow railway accident. However, it had since been discovered that the cable was a forgery, a check with the local telegraph office having revealed that no such wire had ever been received.

Upon this discovery, someone took a closer look at the bogus cable and noticed that it has been written on a sending, rather than receiving, form.

AT THIS NEWS, and with word that young Ritchie remained in shock, many were appalled by what seemed to have been a crude practical joke which had miscarried.

One who was moved to investigate, resolved to find the guilty party by reconstructing the crime. This sleuth, an anonymous newspaper reporter, decided to go to the very heart of the matter.

At this time Ritchie was being tenderly cared for at his future bride's home on Pembroke, when the inquiring scribe began his investigation.

There, he learned that Ritchie had received the telegram while visiting his fiancee and, after the initial shock, had fired off a cable to Glasgow to verify the report, only to receive confirmation that his family had, in fact, perished in the disaster.

SHOWN THE INFAMOUS telegrams, the newsman's quick eye noted that they had been written in pencil on sending forms, "such as would be filled by a person sending a message from Victoria," rather than the form which would be filled, upon receipt of the message, by an operator.

Further, neither wire carried a signature, the operator's initials, time of arrival or place of origin. In short they were "a clumsy fraud on the face of it."

Asked who had handed him the first wire, Ritchie said that four young men, one in uniform, had given him the message downtown. Informed that there were no adult messengers, he replied that he could remember only that there had been four men, that he had paid one $7.50 to send a wire back to Glasgow.

HE HAD REPORTED to the telegraph office to receive the answer to his query the next morning. He then was asked how the messenger had recognized him to hand him a wire on a downtown street corner if he, in turn, did not know the other. To this Ritchie gave no reply.

The reporter had learned enough, however, to arouse his suspicions, and, having gained permission to keep the bogus wires for reference, he located "a copy of a letter written by Ritchie . . . and the writing compared with that on the telegram forms(s). There was a striking similarity, especially in the autograph."

Thus armed, the devious journalist tricked Ritchie into copying out the telegrams and checked again for resemblance. "Half-a-dozen experts," he announced, agreed to the similarity. "The case is a peculiar one, and, no doubt, more will be heard of it.

A FRIEND of Ritchie's tells a story of a love affair in Glasgow, in which Ritchie played a prominent part, before coming to this country. It is possible that this had something to do with it."

And with that — almost — the strange case of John Ritchie and the infamous telegrams ended. At last report, he had made a full and perfect recovery, indignantly denied having written the wires to himself, and reaffirmed his intention of marrying "the young lady who had so faithfully nursed him through his illness."

Whether he did or did not stage the hoax himself, we cannot say, as the journalists of the day, perhaps disgusted with the whole affair, made no further mention of John Ritchie or his lady love. A pity!

"CAPTAIN JOHN," on the other hand, was cut from a different bolt of cloth. Once he had been the most powerful chieftain on the North Pacific coast and had boasted of having 3,000 fierce Haida braves under his command. About 40 years of age in 1859, when a young Fort Victoria journalist knew him, the chief with the unusual name cut an impressive figure.

Although of average height, John stood well out from his fellow tribesmen. "His sallow face was surrounded by luxuriant black whiskers, and his upper lip was adorned by a sweeping black moustache," the newsman wrote many years after. "His stature and light complexion and hirsute appendages gave rise to the impression that he was the son of a Russian and an Indian woman."

LITTLE WAS actually known of John's background, but those details which the reporter had been able to learn were fascinating.

It was common knowledge, for example, that, as an Alaskan youth, John had travelled to St. Petersburg in a Russian trading ship, and had remained there for two years, before proceeding to London and home again by Hudson's Bay Co. ship.

Marvelled his friend: "He could read and write a little, and his language was a puzzling maze of Russian, English, Chinook and Indian. With the aid of pantomimic gestures and broken language, he managed to make himself well understood."

HOW JOHN BECAME chieftain of the dreaded Haidas remained a mystery, even to the journalist, but chieftain he was. His word, garbled mixture of dialects though it may have been, was law; thousands obeyed his every command.

Perhaps a good clue to John's secret as a leader was his sense of drama, through which he acquired his unusual title. In fair weather and foul, he wore a striking uniform of long blue military overcoat, his wiry black hair was crowned by a blue officer's cap banded with gold lace.

Upon meeting stranger, Captain John would pull himself erect, make a grotesque salute by pointing forefinger to his camp, and exclaim, "Me big chief!"

Introduction completed, he would swagger away "with an air of gloomy grandeur intended to impress the visitors with his importance."

IF THE REACTION of more sophisticated whites was one of amusement, none let it show. "There was much that was absurd about Captain John's appearance, but, taken for all in all, he was the finest specimen of the Indian I ever knew," the newsman recalled.

Certainly his many subjects were impressed; to question John's authority meant severe punishment or death. The entire western shore of the Victoria waterfront, although settled by several northern tribes as well as the local Songhees, was virtually John's domain. Even the encamped "Stickeens," traditional enemies of the Haidas, avoided his wrath.

Then, tragically, even Capt. John had become addicted to the white man's scourge, liquor. Once he had been level-headed and cunning; then his mind was benumbed by all-powerful drink. He had been handsome and dignified; he became a "besotted, quarrelsome creature," his fine blue overcoat soiled and tattered.

FINALLY CAME a day when the Royal Charlie was fired upon from the Haida village as she sailed from the harbor. Victoria constables promptly marched into the camp and arrested John and a brother.

The chieftain had submitted meekly until officers started to search him in the Bastion Square police barracks. Suddenly John drew a knife and slashed wildly at the nearest constable, his brother doing the same. A second later, both were shot dead.

Half an hour after, his friend the journalist arrived on the scene to find both men where they had fallen. Someone had covered John with his shabby greatcoat, and placed his old officer's cap, the one with the gold braid, over his face.

RAISING THE CAP, the newsman "gazed long at the features which were placid and peaceful in death. Something of the old-time nobleness lingered there and his coal-black eyes, which were still open, seemed to gaze sadly, if not reproachfully, into mine. As I replaced the cap, these words from Wolfe's great poem occurred to me:

" 'He lay like a warrior
taking his rest,
With his martial cloak around him.' "

Spencer's Remnants

"Spencer's Remnants" was not a bargain basement special, but one of the better-known units that surfaced after the boys returned home from the First World War.

Some years have passed by since survivors of the unit assembled in Victoria. But their exploits were revived recently when a large oak plaque, in the form of a Maple Leaf, engraved with names, was discovered in a collector's storage and has been presented to the family of the man who made it, Teddy Groom, who had worked in Spencer's meat department.

COL. VICTOR SPENCER, who was born here and went to Vancouver when the firm of David Spencer Ltd., expanded to that growing city. He served in the First World War, and on his return, gathered all the firm's employees who had served in the battle areas, and formed Spencer's Remnants.

It was a popular unit and Spencer's accepted a request from Victoria to form a branch here, equipping it with the special berets which had been used in Vancouver. The membership reached 100 and held annual reunions and participated in many parades.

In 1937 Groom was asked to prepare a shield. This was before Prime Minister Mike Pearson begun campaigning for a flag for Canada and Groom hit on the idea of a Maple Leaf. While few people knew that the Canadian forces always wore maple leaf badges on the collars and buttons of their uniforms they were prouder of these insignias than of the few flags they carried.

ADMIRING THE LARGE SHIELD Mrs. Stan James, the former Peggy Groom, whose father, Ernest "Teddy" Groom, carved the Oak Shield to commemorate the service Spencer's Remnants rendered in the First World War. He was a butcher in Spencer department store at the time, 1937. In picture with Mrs. James, are her husband, left, and Frank Smart, department manager of Eaton's, who discovered the shield after it had been missing for some years. — Photo by Roy Strable

GROOM SPENT a long time shaping his shield of solid oak, two foot square, using hand tools. On Jan. 30, 1942, when the Second World War was raging he turned it over to the Remnants. On the back is engraved: "Presented to the First Remnants in Victoria, Jan. 30, 1942, to preserve their memory for long years to come, this shield was carved, tho' rudely done. E. H. Groom."

At the top is the name J. W. Spencer, who with his brother, David, operated the store here, along with Tom Rose, who was a key in the group and managed the men's clothing department, H. R. Bell and W. Thomson. Then follows a bit of Latin, Pro Omnibus Zuis, 1937.

Carved into the leaves of the shield are the names of the membership, including: W. Grant, J. Grey, W. Morrison, R. Scobie, J. Paterson, S. Saunders. J. Stuckey, F. Crouch. H. Milburn, C. Bayliss, J. Caldwell, R. Chambers, J. Cassidy, F. Smith, F. Street. E. Tadman, A. Rossiter, J. Pickford, J. Thorne, C. Williamson, O. Prentice, F. Curtis, J. Wenger, F. Diamond, H. Winder, W. Lees, G. Lifton, A. Hawkins, J. Griffiths, J. Roberts and Sara Spencer.

MOST OF THESE have passed on, but Bill Crouch, who was the chef at Spencer's, his beaming face and his customary white hat and uniform, frequent sight in the dining room and Walter Thomson, who handled the draperies and other sections, are still circulating, Crouch, now 92.

Spencer's was taken over by Eaton's in 1948 and the Remnants gradually went into reserve, like many other units which held reunions here. Two of the last to hang on were the 67th. Battalion, (Western Scots) which left here in March, 1916, under command of Lt.-Col. Lorne Ross, and the 15th Brigade, C.F.A., which departed at the same time under command of Lt. Col. A. T. Ogilvie, who reverted from a full colonel so that he could get into the fighting.

The Western Scots held annual reunions until two years ago, when two of their stalwarts, Harold Rourke and George Nicholson answered their last bugle call, it marked the end. Stan Okell is still about.

The 15th. Brigade held its 60th reunion, a luncheon in the Faculty Club at the University of Victoria, in 1976, when but 15 of their numbers, four coming north from California, fell in for their regular rum ration.

THE TWO MEN, Archie Wills, president, and Ralph Cruickshank, secretary, who looked after the parties for many years, decided to make this one their last. They had money in the kitty, so decided to blow it, taking along their wives. There had been concern that, with advancing age and the rum ration, etc., the old boys might not be safe driving the highways, so the precautions was taken to have the women along.

The 15th. lost some prominent members, including Joe Clearihue, one-time chancellor of the University of Victoria, and Gavin Mowat, the squire of Salt Spring Island, Dr. J. M. Fowler, Habden Gillespie, Bill Newton, Gordon Cameron, Carl Gonnason, Bobby Rose and Bob Owens.

SPENCER'S REMNANTS are shown here parading in front of the legislative building on their way to the Cenotaph to place wreaths on Armistice Day.

FIFTY YEARS of SWIFTSURE

When the curtain rises on the 1980 Swiftsure Classic of May 24 many oldtimers will recall to some degree 50 years of recreational sailing history in the Pacific Northwest.

It all started in 1930 when three boats — the schooner Claribel, the yawl Westward Ho, and the cutter Cresset sailed the first Swiftsure course around the old lightship and back.

SINCE THAT TIME the Swiftsure has grown to be the largest and best-known Pacific Northwest race, and one that has drawn some of the world's finest and most successful racing yachts. The 50th anniversary race is expected to draw more than 400 entries and now constitutes three races — the 136 mile big boat race to Swiftsure Bank in the open Pacific, the 80 mile Juan de Fuca course to Clallam Bay and return, and the unofficial and informal Sooke Harbor race, which provides the thrill of being part of the action for the non-competitive older boats, and which may be sailed in relative comfort.

THE SWIFTSURE CLASSIC is internationally-rated as "mile for mile the toughest ocean race in North American sailing." Experience has proved the race can either turn out to be a sailor's dream or a nightmare — traditionally, it is a race of many faces and many moods.

Out in the open waters of Juan de Fuca Strait there are times when the lazy undulating ground swells may do nothing more than rattle slack rigging or shake an almost non-existent breath of air out of flopping sails as yacht positions become dramatically affected by the tidal currents.

A spanking breeze can put lee rails awash while the afternoon sun glints off the ever snow-capped Olympic mountains to accentuate the dancing curls of a yacht's wake. A howling gale can rip spinnakers and jibs to shreds, break masts, spars and rudders; and by broaching, lay gallantly struggling yachts on their beam ends as crews thrill in the contest with nature's forces to regain sailing control.

The historic planning took place in 1930 when the Pacific International Yachting Association held its meeting in Victoria. Prior to that time the Seattle Yacht Club had sponsored a race from Seattle through the Straits around Waada Island at Neah Bay on the Washington coast, and return.

The meet was five years after the start of the now famous Fastnet Race in Britain, from Cowes through the Solent and into the Irish Sea to circle Fastnet Rock. Taking part in the first Fastnet of 1925 was Commander Barney Johnson, RN, a submarine captain who retired to Vancouver. Johnson joined the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, and led the mainland delegation to the PIYA meeting.

IT WAS HIS SUGGESTION that PIYA launch an around Vancouver Island Race which would be comparable to the distance of Fastnet. After much discussion Ray Cooke of Seattle made comment that "they could all get just as seasick by going out into the ocean around the Swiftsure Lightship, and they would have much less difficulty in recruiting crews."

Finally the Swiftsure course was adopted, and according to this author's personal talks with Barney Johnson at his 90th birthday party in 1968, it was recalled three boats entered the inaugural race — Claribel of Seattle with skipper Ray Cooke, Doug and Wavell Urry's Cresset, and Johnson's Westward Ho, both of Vancouver.

Photos and Story By James A. McVie, FPSA

The first overall trophy was ordered from London and contained an engraving of Westward Ho. Ray Cooke packed the trophy home to Seattle having sailed Claribel to victory in the first Swiftsure.

THE PURPOSE of the Swiftsure Lightship Classic was stated "to encourage among the clubs of the PIYA the ownership and racing of cruising yachts of a wholesome type, capable of open sea venture in which winds from fresh to half gale force my be expected." Through the years Swiftsure has fully achieved its purpose, and its share of conditions well beyond the expected half gales!

The list of winners and competing skippers in the half-century span is almost a Who's Who of west coast yachting.

Besides winning the first race, Ray Cooke came back in 1934 to skipper his new boat Circe home as overall winner. Barney Johnson in Westward Ho won in 1931 and 1938, Dr. Carl Jensen in Amorita won in 1951 and with Adios in 1956, Dr. Herb Day's Ono took top spot in both 1952 and 1958, and Ches Rickard's Lapworth-36 Winsome III of Vancouver became the first and only three-time winner by taking overall honors in the 1961, 1962 and 1963 races. More recent double wins include John Baillargeon's Mistrel in 1966 and 1968, George O'Brien's noted Australian-built 12 metre America's Cup challenger Endless Summer (Ex: Dame Pattie) in 1970 and 192, while Lol Killam's maxi ocean racer Greybeard won in 1973 and 1975.

STILL ON RECORD as the most consistent "first boat home" is John Graham's former 67-foot yawl Maruffa — a five time winner of line honors, but only once — in 1957, did she manage to save time and win the Swiftsure Trophy. Incidentally, John Graham participated in that first race with Cooke in Claribel.

He acquired Maruffa early in the Second World War and first entered Swiftsure in 1947. In addition to her share of glory, Maruffa had some rough going as well. In 1955, old man Juan de Fuca unleashed a full gale and as Maruffa led the pack with only 100 yards to finish, a heavy gust of westerly snapped off 12 feet of the mainmast causing the balloon jib and mainsail to crash and flop madly about the deck. Only three of the 20 starters finished that dusty event. (Maruffa was lost off a New Zealand reef last summer.)

IT IS EXPECTED that John Graham will be at the start line in his Elixir to celebrate his span of 50 years in Swiftsure. In addition, the only remaining veteran of the original trio — the cutter Cresset — will be seen at the line in company with the famed Olin Stephens-designed Dorade, one of the most noted racers to sail the course.

There are many Swiftsure veterans viewing the 50th anniversary with nostalgic memories of their adventures on the Swiftsure course. To name a few there's Jack Gann, Hubert A. Wallace, Ned Ashe, Commander Jim Davis, and Humphrey Golby of Victoria; Ken McRae, Elmer Palmer, Hunter Vogel, Ches Rickard, John Long, Lol Killam, Pat Leslie, and Don Tyrell of Vancouver; with John Graham Henry Kotkins, Ned Skinner, Charlie Ross and Bruce Calhoun of Seattle — all of whom have helped make the Swiftsure Classic the prime nautical festival of the Pacific Northwest, and an event in which thousands of Victorians find feverish excitement with each passing year.

THE 1980 ANNIVERSARY race under the sponsorship of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, with Frank Piddington the general race chairman, could be influenced by the findings of the Fastnet Inquiry report following the disastrous race in Britain last August. While safety requirements have always been a keynote priority in entry acceptance, the race will continue to demand the competing skipper to assume the complete responsibility for the safety and survival of his boat and crew.

When the curtain falls on the 50th anniversary race, the traditions and history of all that is Swiftsure will continue to build an even more memorable era of Pacific offshore yacht racing.

Mushrooms Are First Class

THOUGHT for FOOD

MURIEL WILSON

Everyone knows that mushrooms were originally meant to serve as umbrellas for pixies and seats for tired elves. My interest in these fairy umbrellas increased when I discovered how good they were to eat.

The story of the early culture of these strange plants which have no color, no leaves or flowers is vague. History tells us that wild mushrooms were known almost 5,000 years ago to the civilizations of China, Egypt and Greece. The pharaohs of Egypt regarded these fragile growths as having a divine almost magical powers. Power to cure illness and prolong life.

For many years mushrooms were only available to Royalty who monopolized them for their own use, claiming they were much too delicate for the crass appetites of the common people. Hundreds of years passed before the mushroom became a cultivated crop.

In the New World there is no record of mushrooms before colonial times, but in all probability they were here to greet the coming of man.

Today mushroom growing is a large, rapidly expanding industry. This large scale cultivation makes this lovely food available to all, no longer is the mushroom eaten only by the VIPs.

If you are the type who likes to add the spark of individuality to your cooking, don't forget the magic of mushrooms. That mushrooms are excellent eating needs no elaboration. To the dieter, mushrooms are like a shaft of sunlight . . . a cup of mushrooms either fresh or canned contains only 25 calories . . . they are a fairly good source of vegetable protein and iron, a good source of the B vitamins especially riboflavin and niacin.

Mushrooms are first class mixers. Like a good hostess, they bring out the flavor of their companions, never dimming the taste of the eggs, fish, meat or fowl to which they are added. They help other foods to look better and to taste better.

Our first recipe is one of those quickies which are a delight to housewives.

QUICK BEEF-NOODLE MUSHROOM SKILLET . . . one pound lean ground beef, one medium onion chopped, one-half cup chopped green pepper, one clove garlic minced fine (optional), two tbsp. vegetable oil, four ounces medium noodles, uncooked, two (eight-ounce) cans of tomato sauce, one tsp. Worcestershire sauce, one tsp. celery seed, one-half tsp. salt, one (10-ounce) can condensed bouillon and one-half pound small mushrooms, OR you can use canned mushrooms (and liquid).

Saute beef, onion, green pepper, garlic in oil in large skillet. Saute until the meat is brown. Pour off the excess fat. Add noodles and mushrooms. Combine well. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and simmer until the noodles are soft, about 20 to 25 minutes. Makes four to six servings.

Mushrooms and barley seem strange foods to put together, but cooked in consomme or bouillon the combination makes a dish that is hearty and brimming with flavor. Use the pearl barley which is more suitable for this casserole than the pot barley.

MUSHROOM AND BARLEY CASSEROLE . . . one-half pound mushrooms sliced, three-quarters cup barley, one can consomme or bouillon (10 ounces), one can water (10 ounces), three tbsp. butter or margarine and one-half tsp. seasoned salt.

Put all the ingredients in a casserole or a buttered oven proof baking dish. Cover and bake at 325°F for about one-and-half hours or until barley is soft. One of the advantages of this simple casserole is that since barley needs to be cooked slowly, it can be put in the oven at the same time you are roasting veal, lamb or when baking a ham. Serve with a tossed green salad.

Have you discovered that mushrooms are great sliced raw in a salad?

MUSHROOM EGG SALAD . . . one-half pound mushrooms, two-thirds cup finely chopped celery, two-thirds cup finely chopped cucumber, two cups shredded lettuce, one-half tsp. salt, a dash of pepper, French OR Italian dressing to moisten, two hard cooked eggs sliced and paprika.

Trim and wash mushrooms, pat dry with paper towel. Leave small ones whole and cut larger ones in quarters. Toss the mushrooms in a chilled bowl with all the other ingredients except the eggs and paprika. Toss well again with the salad dressing. Garnish with hard cooked egg slices and sprinkle with paprika.

Stuffed mushroom caps are a grace note to almost any meal . . . a starter for a light meal, a tasty item to be served with the main entree and perfect for a tasty note that enhances the appeal of any buffet table. Crab has an affinity for mushrooms, they are great partners. If you are planning an event look for some nice large mushrooms and put a tin of crab meat on your shopping list.

CRAB-STUFFED MUSHROOMS . . . one pound of fairly large mushrooms, one six-ounce tin of crab meat, one egg well beaten, one-quarter cup EACH tomato juice and fine bread crumbs, one tsp. lemon juice, one tsp. finely chopped onion, two tsp. finely chopped celery, one-half tsp. salt, one-half cup bread crumbs and one-quarter cup melted butter and a dash of Tabasco.

Early in the day wash the mushrooms and dry thoroughly. Remove stems and store in the

BRIDE'S CORNER

Canned mushrooms are equally good as fresh. Canned mushrooms come in several packs . . . button, small whole and select, sliced larger growths, stems and pieces.

Mushrooms do not require long cooking. Canned ones are already cooked and just require heating.

Fresh mushrooms need only five to six minutes sauteing in butter or margarine.

Cooked only for a few minutes mushrooms will darken slightly. They can be kept light in color by steaming them in milk and butter in top of double boiler.

Mushrooms have a large water content so they loose weight by evaporation so store them in a plastic bag or well wrapped in wax paper, in the refrigerator.

Do not wash before storing. When ready to use wash lightly. Peeling is unnecessary. Just cut off dry end of stem. Watch for specials of mushrooms in bulk. Mushrooms make the simplest dish elegant.

DEAR HELOISE:

I planted coleus seeds in my brandy snifter terrarium, and then put plastic wrap over the top to make a miniature hot house but, since it was sitting near a window, the plastic wrap kept blowing off.

I was racking my brain trying to think of what to tie around it to keep the plastic wrap on — a rubber band wouldn't stay put — when my smart hubby came up with this one: "Just wet the edges of the plastic wrap and it will stick."

You know, he was absolutely right! That was several days ago and it is still stuck.

When I think of all the times I have tried to cover glass bowls, etc., and other containers with non-sticking plastic wrap, I only wish I had known this years ago.

Isn't it a super idea?

Fill the mushroom caps with mixture. Arrange stuffed caps on lightly greased baking sheet. Toss the half cup fine breadcrumbs with the melted butter. Sprinkle over mushroom caps. Cover with foil and refrigerate until ready to cook. Bake in a preheated 350°F oven for about 20 to 25 minutes or until done. If you prefer you could broil the caps until the crumbs are lightly browned. Arrange on a warm serving plate. Garnish with parsley sprigs and ripe olives.

In all parts of the world, mushrooms have facinated man since the days of antiquity. They have played a role in religion, and their elusive wildness, their shy growing habits deep in the shade of the woods have captured the imagination of peasant and poet alike. Their natural history and odd way of propagating have made them the scientists' delight, to the extent that some have disputed if the mushroom is vegetable or animal.

HALF-AND-HALF ART WORK

DEAR HELOISE:

If kids don't have anything to do on rainy days, try this.

If your mother has any magazines, ask if you can have them. Then, what you do is cut out pictures of people and animals, large or small, then cut the pictures in half.

If you want to, you can just work with the faces only and not the whole picture.

CLEVER MOM!

DEAR HELOISE:

I've faced a problem all mothers face when their children get old enough to take the laces out of their shoes. After my first child I learned how to put an end to this age-old problem.

First, I lace up the shoes, then tie a knot in each end of the string so it won't slip back through the eyelet of the shoes.

Small fingers can't remove the strings and lose them, and shoes still tie easily.

DEAR HELOISE:

Those who like to watch calories as well as those who like the white of their egg well-done but not crisp around the edges, try this.

Spray the skillet with non-stick vegetable coating, heat and put in the egg, adding about two tablespoons of water. Cover with a lid.

It won't take but a jiffy to cook and the white of the egg is done to perfection.

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

A tip to those who have young children who kneel on the floor, then sit on their legs.

Remind them without hesitation that this could cause knockknees. Don't think, as I did, "My child is really agile!"

COLOR IT HAPPY

DEAR HELOISE:

When putting red antiseptic on a child's knee, arm, etc., it seems to help the hurt if you paint a "happy face" over the injury.

Shapes of animals, etc., could also be drawn.

M.B.

SMART IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

I put my purses in storage bags made from old sheets or similar fabric discards, then place them in a plastic bag.

Plastic should not be placed against plastic as sometimes it will stick together.

Victoria welcomes many thousands of visitors each year, and is partly dependant on them for its prosperity. Its reputation as a pleasant place to visit probably first began growing rapidly in 1887, when the CPR completed its railway line to Vancouver and began a trans-Pacific service to Yokohama and other ports in the far east. Well-to-do Europeans could then circle the world in comparative comfort, and many of them passed through Victoria and later told their friends of its charms.

Victoria's Earliest Visitors

Yet long before 1887, there was a small but steady stream of visitors to the city, many of whom have left records of their impressions. One interesting feature of them is that Victoria's very first visitors already discerned in the area some of the same attractions which it possesses today.

VICTORIA WAS founded as a fur trading post by James Douglas in 1843. Charles Ross (after whom Ross Bay is named) was in charge of it for a year, and was then succeeded by Roderick Finlayson. In 1849 Douglas himself came up from Fort Vancouver on the Columbia to take control of its affairs.

Already, however, Fort Victoria had had several visitors. Not all of them could be strictly classed as tourists, as they usually had some other reason for being in the area. Yet their impressions are always interesting, and it may be useful to list some of those who crossed continents or oceans to Vancouver Island and recorded what they found there.

THE EARLIEST, perhaps, were two British army officers, Henry Warre and Mervin Vavasour, who were sent out in 1845 from eastern Canada by the military authorities to prepare a report on the Pacific Northwest.

At that time the boundary between British and American territory in the far west had not yet been drawn, but discussions and negotiations concerning where the line should be drawn were in progress. There was some talk that the line would go up the Columbia River as far as the 49th parallel and eastward from there; others thought it should follow that parallel westward from the Great Lakes till it entered the open Pacific — which would place part of Vancouver Island under the Stars and Stripes.

The British government of the day — not so "empire-minded" as some of its successors in the latter years of the century — was by no means fanatically determined to hold on to as much territory as it could. The Pacific Northwest was only inhabited by Indians and a few fur traders and trappers; it was very far from the main trade routes of the world; whereas American settlers were beginning to flood across the continent into the valley of the Columbia, which suggested strongly that before long the region would become an agricultural area and part of the United States. On the other hand, Britain still had command of the seas, and could easily dominate any part of the Pacific coast north of Spanish California.

IN ORDER TO FORM a clearer picture of the area, these two young army officers were sent across the continent to report on it. In order not to arouse suspicions by Americans, they had been instructed to pose as civilians on a hunting and fishing expedition.

Even before the two men had laboriously made their way across the prairies and through the Rockies, they had come to at least one conclusion: that the route they were following would never be practical for reinforcing British posts in the northwest with soldiers. At this time the nearest British garrison was at Fort Garry, near modern Winnipeg, and it had been hoped that in a showdown with the United States, troops could be sent from there to the Pacific Northwest by land.

THE TWO OFFICERS quickly perceived that troops, supplies, artillery and ammunition could never be effectively moved over this great distance. If the Pacific Northwest was to be defended by Britain, it would have to be by the navy.

The two men consequently examined some of the ports in the area. Fort Nisqually, near modern Tacoma, then the site of a HBC post, struck them as well suited either for sheltering ships or disembarking troops. Victoria, by contrast, was unsuitable for either, as its harbor was small and difficult to enter. They noted that its site had "been chosen solely for its agricultural advantages, and is ill adapted either as a place of refuge for shipping or as a position of defense."

However, there was "a bay within three miles of Fort Victoria called the "Squimal" by the Indians, which from superficial observation appears to afford anchorage and protection for ships of any tonnage."

THE NATURAL RESOURCES of the area were also impressive: "The fisheries, (salmon or sturgeon) are inexhaustible and game of all descriptions is said to abound. The timber is extremely luxuriant and increases in value as you reach a more northern latitude."

Warre and Vavasour in due time submitted their report to higher authorities. It may have had some effect on the determination of the international boundary, which was fixed by the Oregon Treaty of June 15, 1846.

ANOTHER VISITOR to Fort Victoria in 1845 was HMS America. A powerful warship, carrying 50 guns, one of its aims was to serve as a reminder to Americans that Britain "ruled the waves."

Its commander, John Gordon, was the brother of the foreign secretary and one of its young officers, Lieut. William Peel, was the son of the current prime minister. This suggests that the mission of the ship was of more than ordinary importance, and that the report made by her officers would be listened to with care.

The America was too big to sail up the Columbia or to enter the harbor of Victoria. It anchored at Port Discovery near the entrance to Puget Sound, and from there a party in the ship's launch visited Fort Victoria, and conferred with Roderick Finlayson.

IN SOME WAYS Captain Gordon's visit was not a success. Finlayson tried to entertain him, but things did not go well. As he recalled later: "We had some fine horses for the use of the Captain and his officers and we paid them every attention. We went out one occasion to Cedar Hill (Mount Douglas) to shoot about the first of June. The country looked beautiful, with beautiful wild flowers. Capt. Gordon was a great deer stalker. We met a band of deer and had a chase after them on horseback. The deer ran for a thicket into which the horses with their riders could not penetrate and of course no deer were had."

THIS INCIDENT seems to have soured the aristocratic Captain Gordon; his disillusion deepened to disgust when he learned that these benighted colonials caught their salmon by trolling, and not, as a gentleman should, with a fly. Clearly, he had fallen among cads, and he did not stay long. His considered opinion was that he "would not give one of the barren hills of Scotland for all he saw around him."

Young Lieut. Peel prepared an elaborate report. He believed the Americans would soon control the valley of the Columbia, but that more northerly areas should be held on to by Britain. He especially noted that "if the 49th degree be the boundary determined on, it must not include the southern extremity of Vancouver Island. That point commands the navigation of the magnificent inlet and possesses a fine harbor."

THE YEAR 1846 saw three ships in the vicinity of Victoria. By this time it had been decided that Vancouver Island would remain British, and the Fisgard, Pandora and Herald were sent to the area to chart the harbors of both Victoria and Esquimalt. Not only three Victoria streets, but several natural features of the area, such as Duntze Head, Cole Island and Rodd Hill are reminders of this visit. The surveys demonstrated that warships could safely enter Esquimalt — the first essential step toward its becoming a major British naval base.

One of those on board the Herald was a young Swiss naturalist named Berthold Seemann. He later set down his recollections of Victoria: "In walking from Ogden Point round to Fort Victoria, we thought we had never seen a more beautiful country; it quite exceeded our expectations. Barely three years had elapsed since the settlement was made, yet all the necessities and most of the comforts of civilized life already existed in what was a wilderness. The people employed are rarely those to whom returning home is an object. They have mostly been taken from poverty, and have at all events food and clothing. The work is hard, but with health and strength this is a blessing rather than otherwise."

THE NEXT YEAR, 1847, saw a totally different sort of visitor. This was Paul Kane, an artist who was travelling round the wilder parts of North America, sketching and describing the various Indian tribes. As he had not been sent by any superior authority, we might call him Victoria's first genuine tourist.

By Derek Pethick

When he reached Fort Victoria, he was cordially welcomed by Finlayson. He remained in the area for two months, making sketches of the Indians and describing their mode of life. Though Victoria was only four years old, Kane felt sure that it "must eventually become the great depot for the business of th Company."

Kane noted there were 10 white men and 40 Indians engaged in building new stores and warehouses." There was a large Indian village on the other side of the harbor, capable of mustering 500 warriors. One interesting feature of native life was the breeding of a special kind of dogs for their hair, which was then made into cloth. The Indians flattened the heads of their children, and subsisted largely on fish, especially sturgeon, which were present in great abundance.

KANE WITNESSED a remarkable ceremony in which a man, after covering himself in grease and goosedown, "rushed into the midst of the village, seized a small dog and began devouring it alive, this being a customary preliminary on such occasions. The tribe collected around him, singing and dancing in the wildest manner, on which he approached those whom he most regarded and bit their bare shoulders or arms, which was considered by them as a high mark of distinction, more especially those from whom he took the piece clean out and swallowed it."

Kane also set down descriptions of longhouses, potlatches, medicine men and other features of Indian life. Then, recrossing the prairies, he eventually made his way back to Toronto, where his account of Wanderings of an artist among the Indians of North America was first published in 1859.

THE YEAR 1848 saw the Constance become the first British warship to enter Esquimalt harbor. Her commander was Captain George Courtenay; a street in Victoria (wrongly spelled on street signs) and Constance Cove and Avenue in Esquimalt commemorate this visit. The ship was a frigate of 2,100 tons, carrying 50 guns. There were always large numbers of Indians around the fort, many of them from the more warlike tribes of the northern coast, who came to exchange furs for blankets and guns. Near Walla Walla, south of the line, a group of American missionaries led by Marcus Whitman had been massacred a few months before.

This suggested to Finlayson that a show of force might be desirable, and at his request 250 sailors from the Constance staged a military parade outside the fort, as a reminder of the power at the disposal of the whites.

Captain Courtenay was not unduly enthusiastic about his visit. He told other people later that the real reason the Hudson's Bay Company liked warships to call at the port was to create a good market for meat, vegetables and other supplies. He did not think Victoria would ever amount to much, as it was "too far distant ever to be colonized by emigration."

THE NEXT YEAR, 1849, saw another British warship in the vicinity. This was the Inconstant, a small frigate commanded by Captain John Shepherd. He was alarmed to find such a small number of whites surrounded by so many Indians, and recommended to his superiors that a detachment of troops should be sent out from England as a permanent garrison for the fort.

THIS YEAR SAW the most unexpected visit to the fort since its foundation. As Finlayson later recalled; "In the spring of 1849 a vessel appeared in the harbor, the crew of which wore red flannel shirts, and when they landed we took them to be pirates. I ordered the men to the guns, manned the bastions and made ready for defence. I then interviewed the men from the gate, who told me they were peaceable traders, come from San Francisco, with gold to trade for goods.

Victoria's first visitors came a long time ago, but it is interesting how little their impressions have dated. They found Victoria a pleasant place; they were delighted with the abundance of fish and game in the vicinity; they noted the excellent harbor of Esquimalt; they were interested in the native Indian culture.

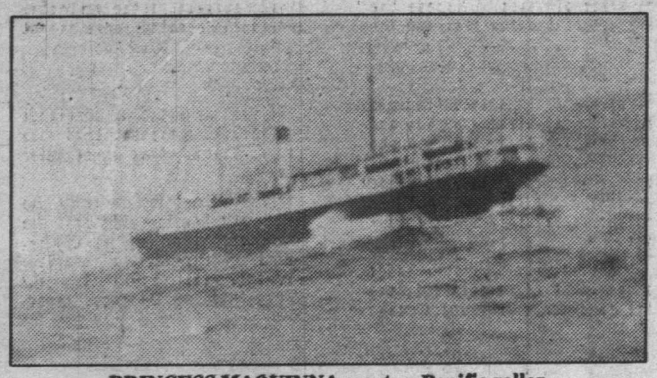
The good Ship Maquinna

Today the B.C. Ferry Corporation handles marine passenger traffic on the B.C. coast with a vast network of ferries plying the entire coast; but the first steamship service was provided by the Hudson's Bay Company when their side-paddle steamer, Beaver, arrived from England in 1836.



PRINCESS MAQUINNA crests a Pacific roller.

By Capt. H. D. Halkett

In 1877 Captain John Irving started a stern paddle steamer service on the Fraser River between New Westminster and Yale and in 1883 Captain Irving's Pioneer Line amalgamated with the Hudson's Bay Company to form the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company. Thus commenced the first steamship coverage of the B.C. Coast.

With its transcontinental railway an established fact, the Canadian Pacific Railway, ever with an eye for expansion, bought the controlling interests of the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company in 1901. Formal transfer of ownership was made in 1903 and the red and white checkered house flag of the CPR, B.C. Coast Service was raised for the first time aboard the Princess Louise, a paddle steamer, that was first of a line of 32 famous "Princess" B.C. coast liners.

WHEN THE CPR took over, a vessel named Queen City was on the west coast of Vancouver Island route, making three round trips monthly. Through the first decade of the 1900s a period of shipbuilding and expansion of service took place, during which a rugged vessel was designed specifically for the arduous west coast of Vancouver Island route.

This ship was built by the B.C. Marine Railway Company, known as Bullen's yard, at Esquimalt and she was the largest steel vessel yet built in British Columbia. Much of the plating and other steel components for the ship were brought out from England by Blue Funnel Line ships.

The new vessel was launched Dec. 24, 1912 by Mrs. Bullen, wife of the owner of the shipyard that was to become Yarrows Limited.

She was christened Princess Maquinna in honor of the daughter of Chief Maquinna of the west coast Nootka tribe; the renowned chief who met Captain Vancouver during his exploration of Nootka Sound. Bullen's shipyard also built Princess Beatrice and Princess Royal before the [illegible] having larger ton[illegible]ot-land.

PRINCESS MAQUINNA was 1,777 tons gross with a length of 232 feet and a beam of 38 feet. She was single screw and powered with a steam reciprocating engine that originally made her capable of a speed of 12½ knots. She had 50 staterooms and 100 berths.

During July of 1913 she made her first run on the west coast of Vancouver Island, relieving the Tees, then in August was sent on a voyage to Alaska with about 70 delegates to the International Geological Congress. On this trip the new ship had the misfortune to have her first mishap when she struck an uncharted rock in Yakutat Bay, Alaska.

Back from her Alaska trip, the Maquinna settled down to her west coast run that, apart from occasional spells as a relief vessel on the northern B.C. and Alaska routes, she maintained for 39 years.

Being specifically designed for work in the open Pacific on the west coast, the Maquinna did not have any upper deck superstructure to speak of. On the boat deck there was only the bridge and wheelhouse, captain's and deck officer's quarters and a small smoking room and wireless shack aft. One wonders how the term "shack" came to be used in conjunction with radio.

THE THREE ROUND trips per month schedule of former vessels was still maintained and at 11 p.m. on the first, 11th and 21st of each month Maquinna would slip away from her Belleville Street berth and head for Race Rocks and Juan de Fuca Strait on her way to some 40 west coast ports of call.

Most of her staterooms would be occupied and her three holds laden with cargo, merchandise for stores, groceries and supplies for individuals, construction materials, industrial machinery. Her foredeck would often have a high load of lumber stowed on it, as would her boat deck in the way of No. 2 and No. 3 cargo handling gear.

After rounding Race Rocks and heading up the Strait, the ship would soon feel the effect of Pacific swells before reaching her first call, Port Renfrew, during the early morning hours.

The Port Renfrew dock was exposed to the effects of open ocean swells and often, while lying at the dock, she would roll and surge so heavily that the mooring lines had to be constantly tended by seamen.

Unfamiliar passengers who may have expected nights of quiet sleep aboard would soon be disillusioned, as the chatter and clatter to three sets of steam cargo winches created an unholy row in all cabins.

THE NEXT CALL after Port Renfrew was termed a "boat landing" off Clo-oose — Nitinat Lake — where Indians came out to the ship in canoes to receive supplies passed out of the side port doors. In heavy seas, a seaman wearing a body harness, stood on the ship's guard rail and exercised a good deal of skill as he landed cargo items in a canoe as it passed the doors during its vertical ascents and descents.

There were many times, of course, when Clo-oose had to be bypassed due to heavy sea conditions.

FROM CLO-OOSE the ship pressed on to round Cape Beale and enter Alberni Inlet and commence many stops, starting with Bamfield and ending at Port Alberni in the evening. At Port Alberni a good deal of cargo was discharged and more loaded for up-coast ports, while more passengers boarded. Maquinna would leave Port Alberni sometime after midnight and proceed to Ucluelet and Port Albion, then onwards up the coast, rolling her way in the open water between the inlets then providing a respite on the quiet inside waters as she made her stops.

The names of her ports of call and various place names provide an interesting mixture of British, Spanish and native Indian, most of which were bestowed by the British and Spanish explorers who met at Friendly Cove in Nootka Sound.

Names such as Toquart, Sarita River, Kildonan, Franklin River, Ucluelet, Tofino, Ahousat, Clayoquot, Saavedra Island, Kakawis, Refuge Cove, Zeballos, Esperanza, Winter Harbor, Holberg, Quatsino, Port Alice, to name but a few of the names on the historic coast.

THE LAST CALL was at Port Alice where the Maquinna would discharge the last of her outbound cargo and load baled pulp from the mill that would be discharged at Vancouver. Southbound, the ship did not call at all places again, only the major locations of population or industry such as Zeballos, Nootka, Kildonan and Port Alberni. At Nootka and Kildonan she would likely load cased salmon.

The majority of passengers were west coast residents returning from "outside" or heading for the bright lights of Vancouver or Victoria. Some were people on their way to employment and a new life on the west coast, where fishing and logging were basically the breath of life.

HOSPITALS WERE located at Port Alberni, Tofino and Port Alice and often the ship's chief steward and stewardess found themselves seeing to the welfare of people bound for hospital, or returning. Then, also, there was the monthly bevy of travelling salesmen who created much life in the ship as they made the trip to call upon stores and logging camps.

During the summer months and early fall there would be a few round trip tourists, some of whom faithfully made the voyage year after year. These round trippers were of the type that had no objection and indeed, were pleased if the ship took a "dusting" on her open water runs. A familiar sight was to see passengers huddled in a group in the lee of the funnel, appreciating the warmth while enjoying the open ocean scene as Maquinna rolled, pitched and heaved.

TO WEST COAST residents the tri-monthly arrival of Maquinna with mail and supplies was a looked-forward-to social event that brought together people who might not normally see each other from week to week. In port there was ever a lineup at the ship's newsstand for papers, magazines and sweets.

On Nov. 25, 1919, Princess Maquinna made news and acquired some fame when, under the command of Captain Edward Gillam, a rescue attempt that failed was undertaken by the veteran master. The ship was southbound out of Tofino and heading on to one of the worst storms of her career and Captain Gillam was about to put about and return to Tofino when a

HELP for the HARD of HEARING

Have you ever wondered what percentage of the people of Canada are hard of hearing? The answer may astound you — statistics show that one person in four over the age of 45 has some form of hearing impairment. In other words 25 per cent of the whole population in that age group are partially or wholly deaf.

By Marjory Narroway

To obtain even a glimpse of the problems confronting these people we must discriminate between the terms hard of hearing and deaf. The latter class is divided into pre-lingual (referring to those born deaf or sustaining a loss of hearing before learning to speak).

The latter usually speak well even though they cannot hear their own voices. The pre-lingual type of deafness gives rise to much difficultly in learning the art of speech, which must then be taught by skilful, well-trained teachers.

The hard of hearing, on the other hand, can hear speech sounds in most cases with the help of a hearing aid, although some may be unable to discriminate well even with an aid. Most cases of hearing impairment among the elderly come under this heading and it is this type we wish to discuss.

WHAT DOES A PERSON do when he or she becomes conscious of some degree of hearing loss? The first reaction probably is: "There's nothing wrong with my ears. Some people just don't speak up the way they used to."

Before long the victim of hearing loss realizes that, since he has this problem with so many people, they can't all be "mumblers."

Finally he goes to his doctor who refers him to an ear, nose and throat specialist who gives him a number of tests to assess the amount of hearing loss and the patient is either told that it is minimal or that it is severe enough to require a hearing aid.

THE WRITING WENT through a similar experience recently and was referred to a specialist who had treated her for a sinus condition for years. He told her that the hearing was a bit down, but that she did not require a hearing aid — yet.

I did not go back, but looked for a specialist who would diagnose the condition and at least make some attempt to find the answer to the problem before prescribing a hearing aid. A friend gave me the name of the eminent otologist who had restored his hearing and I lost no time in consulting him.

After a thorough examination, including X-rays the condition was diagnosed as poor circulation in the ear and treatment was given. Six months later my hearing was back to normal. I was one of the lucky ones.

THE REASON for relating this personal experience is that it may save some people from a too hasty purchase of a hearing aid, which may not really be necessary. On the other hand there are probably people who do require a hearing aid, but are uncertain about the best way to go about getting one.

Motivated by the desire to help such people, as well as supplying the gaps in my own knowledge, I went to one of the leading hearing aid companies in Victoria, where the consultant gave me a very clear picture of the hearing process and the methods used by his company to satisfy the needs of the hard of hearing.

He said a doctor can correct hearing impairment that is related mainly to the middle and outer ears by surgery. In the inner ear, though, the hearing nerve cannot be corrected. This condition is referred to as nerve deafness and a hearing aid is the only remedy.

In such cases the ear specialist recommends a month's trial with an aid. That is where the supplier comes in.

"There is a lot more to the fitting of a hearing aid," said the consultant, "than is generally believed, as it involves a complete aural rehabilitation. Testing comes first, but the most important part of the fitting, is the counselling and follow-up."

THE FIRST STEP is testing to find the extent of the hearing impairment and how the patient relates to speech. Then he is presented with the options. There are four kinds of aids to choose from:

- The body aid, which sits in a pocket with button or receiver attached by a cord to the ear; mostly for people with severe or profound hearing loss, if their fingers cannot handle anything very small.
- The eyeglass aid, for people who wear glasses. Meant for mild, through severe to profound, hearing loss.
- The behind-the-ear type, used to correct similar defects mentioned for eyeglass aids.
- Fits in the ear, and does not depend on wearing glasses. Used for mild to severe cases NOT for profound hearing loss.

HAVING SEEN these four types and heard the advantages and disadvantages of each described the patient decides the type he prefers. An impression is then taken of his ear and the aid fitted to it.

Then comes the 30-day trial period, which is very important, during which the patient is given the counselling he needs to complete his aural rehabilitation. This is in order to prevent a possible negative reaction. For when he first tries hears all the sounds he has been missing without realizing it, and it is too much for him. The reason for this is that hearing loss comes on very gradually, unrealized by the person until his increasing difficulty in hearing people cuts him off from communication and leads him to seek help.

"A BETTER WAY to introduce the new hearing aid," explained the consultant," is to try it out in the quiet of the home with the family for the first week and gradually get used to having a few friends in. The hearing aid consultant will see the patient every week. At the end of the month some people do not want to go on with it, but about 95 per cent make the purchase.

Once the patient has bought the aid it's not the end, but the beginning, of a long association. The patient comes in every three months to have his aid cleaned and to make sure it is working right. If not, it's adjusted. There is no charge for this service, nor for any repairs that can be made in the office. The initial price covers all services, unless the model has to be sent back to the factory for repairs after the warranty has expired.

WHAT ABOUT THE COST — Aren't hearing aids very expensive?

The initial cost ranges from $225 to $350 or $375 (if special fitting and extra wiring is required). But remember the initial cost includes complete follow-up service for as long as the patient requires.

If a person is on mincome or welfare and really cannot afford to buy one they are referred to the Kinsman Rehabilitation Foundation.

The methods, prices and terms quoted above apply to the one hearing aid company interviewed by the writer and not necessarily to any other supplier or company.

The good Ship Maquinna

large square rigged sailing ship was sighted close inshore off Long Beach, her sails in tatters. The ship was obviously in dire trouble.

She was the Chilean vessel Carelmapu and was caught in the storm while awaiting a tug to tow her in to Puget Sound. The wind, seas and current set her close in on the Vancouver Island shore and her anchors were let go in an attempt to prevent her going ashore.

CAPTAIN GILLAM WORKED the Maquinna as close as he dared to the Carelmapu and let her anchors go.

He hoped to hold Maquinna there while the sailing vessel's crew launched her two boats and rowed to the Maquinna. Both boats were launched but were overwhelmed by the terrific seas and all aboard them were lost.

The years passed and Princess Maquinna stalwartly maintained her tough run, but age began to tell upon her while at the same time the increasing use of aircraft, the development of roads and truck transportation and tug and barge service ever growing caused Maquinna's volume of passengers, freight and revenue to decline. Her ports of call diminished to about 24 and in 1952 Canadian Pacific decided to lay her up when her boilers began to fail.

AN ERA ENDED when she had completed 39 years of faithful service and it was a sad day for west coast residents when her familiar and distinctive whistle was heard no more.

Also it was a sad occasion when crew members said farewell to the ship that they had served and loved for many years. In 1953 Maquina was sold to the Union Steamship Company of Vancouver who had her stripped down to become a barge. As a barge named Taku she carried ore from Alaska destined for the Trail smelters. The final indignity came when, in 1962, her venerable old hull was broken up by the General Shipbreaking Company in Vancouver.

She has the unique distinction of being the only certified "Doll Artisan" on Vancouver Island to specialize in making porcelain reproduction antique dolls.

DERRICK'S DOLLS

She began to experiment making reproduction dolls 12 years ago in 1968 in the basement of her Victoria home.

Mrs. Derrick freely admits her first attempts were a far cry from the talented creations she is now able to produce.

By 1973, she started making better dolls after studying books written by the noted New York authority on antique reproduction dolls, Mildred Seeley.

BUT THE REAL turning point in her life came in 1978 when she flew back to Toronto to take a three-part apprenticeship course in antique reproduction dolls at Marian Fasan's Doll House — a highly respected name among doll collectors in Canada.

Upon completion of the course, Mrs. Derrick became a certified "Doll Artisan" and returned to Victoria armed with her certificate and nine delicately beautiful porcelain dolls she had made during her training.

Her intricate painted dolls caused quite a stir among close friends and fellow members of the Victoria Dollology Club who promptly placed orders for additional ones.

This caused Mrs. Derrick to purchase a wide variety of molds for the porcelain dolls from baby dolls to high fashion types. All the molds were cast from original antique dolls to ensure exact likeness.

AS THE ORDERS increased and the molds arrived, Mrs. Derrick found herself sorely lacking for work space in the basement.

She decided to open her own studio on Cook Street to share her doll making knowledge and offer her hand-made dolls to the public.

She busied herself stocking the shelves with all manner of interesting items for the doll trade — custom made clothes, antique style clothing, roller skates, ice skates, elastic wigs, shoes, socks and hand-knitted baby doll clothes.

Ruth Derrick's Doll Studio opened its doors to the public in August 1979.

Much of Mrs. Derrick's knowledge of antique dolls has been gleaned over the years of her involvement with doll repairs and her own private collection.

IT WAS BACK IN 1958, while in Victoria with her husband, John and family on a navy trip, she had her first visit to a doll hospital.

Young daughter Barbara's doll was in need of repairs, and Mrs. Derrick contacted the Doll Hospital on Granite Street.

The subject of doll repair fascinated her, and when the family was posted in Nova Scotia, she took a doll hospital course and graduated as a fully-fledged "Doll Doctor."

All types of dolls were repaired from antique to modern, but she was particularly fond of the antiques.

In 1968 she organized the Victoria Dollology Club with eight original members.

Full-time doll repair work became more than she could manage in 1970, when Mrs. Derrick gave up the doll hospital. She now sends her major repairs to Slemins Doll Hospital in Courtenay.

A MEMBER of the Federation of Doll Clubs and Doll Makers' Association, Ruth Derrick has a busy schedule. She travels to various shows, seminars, and workshops in Oregon, Washington, Reno, Nevada and Indianapolis, where she gets to rub shoulders with some of the top professionals in the doll world.

Her goal is to be able to "make a reproduction doll that no one can tell from the original!" and then go into designing her own dolls.

"There's money to be made in antique dolls if you know what you're doing," says Mrs. Derrick. She has seen some priced at $10,000 and comments, "even some of the reproduction dolls are priced at $850."

Her own doll collection ranges from dolls made in 1880, including ones from France, Germany, England, Canadian-made Reliable dolls, miniature dolls and various teddy bears.

"I didn't go looking for them — they just came to me!" says Ruth, many of them from her days of the Doll Hospital.

Mrs. Derrick estimates Barbie dolls will become collectors items in 50 to 75 years as will specialty dolls of movie and sports stars.

Dolls occupy such a large percentage of her life, it is hard to imagine where she finds time for anything else, but her other pursuits include oil, tole, and china painting and ceramics.

For the discerning doll lover, porcelain dolls are something to be looked upon with awe and forever treasured, a lasting gift to be passed on to each succeeding generation.
